FRANCH EXECUTED.

The Frenchman at the Utah Territorial Capital Suffered.

QUICK WORK IS THE PARAGRAPH'S.

The Prisoner Assertion Was Sadly Refuted and Caused Sorrow.

DANNEMORA, Nov. 21.—Jean Baptiste Franch, the American who murdered his wife while in Salt Lake City on Nov. 7, 1893, was executed here today.

Franch was undoubtedly one of the most dangerous characters of recent years. Late before early he was on the time of his arrest for the murder of his wife in Barcelona, an account of which was given yesterday. Franch was about 40 years of age and a native of Canada. He resided at the previous time in a respectable family. At the age of 19 he left home and came to Kansas, where he quickly became a desperado along the frontier. Later on he became a cattle rustler in Colorado, finally settling in Utah. He married a Mormon woman and lived with her for a time, but finally left her and her children and went to Mexico. He married a second time while in Mexico, but left his second wife and came back to Utah. Here he married a third time, but left her and went to Mexico, where he married a fourth time. He left her and came back to Utah, where he married a fifth time. He left her and went to Mexico, where he married a sixth time. He left her and came back to Utah, where he married a seventh time.
