STAR SPANGLED BANNER

Patriotic Ceremony at the Tabernacle Yesterday.

A rather small audience assembled yesterday afternoon at the Tabernacle to witness the presentation of American flags to the school board of this city. The ceremony was conducted under the auspices of the P. O. S. of A., to which society the flags were entrusted for presentation by the Pacific Company, an Eastern publication devoted to displaying its patriotism, and probably of advertising itself.

On the stand were Mayor Scott, President of the School Board, Bishop Leonard, Dr. Iliff, Dr. Thrall, Dr. Jacobsen, Dr. Uhler, Judge Zane, Judge Powers, Professor Delliver and others.

AT 3:30 P. M. MR. TEASDELL of the P. O. S. of A. called the meeting to order. He said that the Choral Society would be present to sing "America," but the melodious choristers did not appear. They, possibly, deemed the day and the occasion more fitted for the American turkey than for the American song. Professor Stephens was on hand and ready to conduct the strains of the national anthem, but he could not do it alone.

The exercises opened with prayer by Dr. Uhler, followed by a beautiful rendering of the Star Spangled Banner on the organ.

The Rev. Mr. Lane made the presentation speech. He said: "There are some people who sneer at every effort to elevate the masses, but they compose the majority and must be lifted up. Good government means intelligence, and universal suffrage demands universal education. We must educate for safety and for economy, the public schools are the only means to accomplish Oblend.

The public schools are here to stay—they are American institutions, and under the guidance of 300,000 Christian teachers, they cannot be overthrown. Many cannot or will not educate their children, and that falls at the future government to wrapped up in the school. We believe that education should be a function of government, even if economy, for in our schools rests the future glory and prosperity of our nation, and by them can we know of the possibilities of our country.

With a knowledge of our resources, faith in the country in which we live, and a reverence for an overruling providence, we can attain prosperity and perpetuity.

I have the honor in present to the master, as president of the school board, these flags to trust for the children of this city. Place them in every schoolhouse, and let them learn that they represent a great nation, of whose future they are a part, and whose destiny rests in their hands.

In accepting the trust,

said: In behalf of the board of education and the people of the public schools, I receive these flags, and thank the donors and the Patriotic Order Sons of America, through whose instrumentality they have been secured. They will be preserved and placed over every schoolhouse, and under their folds the principles of love, devotion and patriotism will be inculcated, teaching all to be loyal to peace and faithful in war, even to the surrender of life itself in the defense of the flags.

JUDGE ZANE

was introduced and said: We meet on a day of quality and great will to witness the presentation of these American flags to our schools. They are valuable only as they represent the will, majesty and power of the government. In other ages and in other lands some rule by claim of divine power. As knowledge advances that has vanished. Over one hundred years ago the founders of this country changed the sovereignty from the old country and placed it in the will of the American people.

Men have supposed they were vicegerents, but the highest power that can exist on this earth is the will of a free people.

Born amid the battles of the revolution this flag was raised to perpetuate the great principles of that day. Under Washington the battle scarred veterans emerged with the flag and it has waved ever since, temporarily defeated, but in the end victorious. Under Jackson at New Orleans, Taylor and Scott at Mexico, and when the guns of Sumpter sounded, patriotism went to the front in its defense.

I trust that banner will wave over the heads of free men in coming ages, that the stars may wave as long as the stars above shall shine, and those unborn generations will receive it and transmit it as the emblem of justice and humanity.

BISHOP LEONARD

followed in a five-minutes' speech, saying that it would please him to see the flag floating from every school tower as it does from every army post.

Short speeches were made by Professor Delliver, Judge Powers and Dr. Iliff, all expressing themselves in favor of giving the flag the foremost place among national symbols.

of the Congregational church, delivered an eloquent apostrophe to the flag, and quoted the lines of the poet who says that, freedom, in unfurling her standard lost the azure robe of night and set on it stars of glory.

RABBI JACOBSON

dwell on the benefits of education, saying that every child should be taught to read the constitution of the United States, and to understand something of economic questions.

DR. ARNOLD

graphically related his experience in Turkey, when he saw the American flag floating from the mast of a U. S. vessel in the harbor of Constantinople.

Mr. John E. Wilcomb recited Drake's address to the American flag.

Dr. Iliff pronounced the benediction, and the exercises were brought to a close by the performance of "America" on the organ.

RUST IN WHEAT.

Optimist Expressed at Farmers' Conference Held in Sydney, Australia.

It has been estimated that Australia lost nearly 25,000,000 sterling through the rust of its wheat crop. To find a remedy a big prize in money has been offered, and conferences have been held to bring to consider this important subject of rust. The opinion prevailed generally that "certain varieties of wheat are much better able to resist rust than others, and that by judicious cultivation and hybridization still better varieties may be grown." They seem to be almost unanimous that "early varieties have can be made to escape the dangerous season, and that rust is due to climatic conditions that can only be modified, but never entirely overcome." Reviews have been gathered by direct experiments, and by information received from farmers in response to questions put to them, which confirm the soundness of previous recommendations to resort to early sowing, and the less liability to disease of crops grown in autumn, and it has also been shown that as a rule thinly growing crops suffer less from rust than do thickly growing crops.

In regard to remedy measures, it has been found that a solution composed of one part sulphate of copper and one parts water destroyed the vitality of the rust spores, and that a solution of one ounce of sulphate of iron to the gallon of water, when sprayed over a growing crop at a time when rust was about to break out, prevented its appearance until a fortnight or three weeks later, and even if applied when the rust had attacked the plant, destroyed all outward appearance of the fungus and prevented its reappearance till fourteen days afterward.

Mr. Smith Ellis, who has claimed the prize for his discoveries in the matter of rust prevention, says in a recent paper that "the wheat growers themselves are the sole propagating rust by the slops of their seed wheat. When they come to store their seed wheat and treat it in a rational manner like all other seed that is grown, sound and selected by practical and generous first will no longer be troubled with rust in their crops. The cost of doing so is nothing; cure is all that is required to secure that object."

Selling Pork.

Never salt meat in which the hogs have been long enough for the meat to become entirely cold all the way through. For harvest pork the brine should be as salt as it can be made—so strong that it will always be salt enough to put in the barrel. Cut pork in pieces of convenient size and pack them in slops on their edges. Fill all interstices and cover each layer of meat with salt. Then pour in all the strong brine the barrel will hold and stop it tight. For weeks before the meat pies is first to run each piece upon end and then pack with side down on a platform covered with salt. As soon as one layer is down cover it with salt and put another one on it and so proceed, piling it up as high as convenient. Occasionally rub and repack it from three to four times, until it is well salted through. The time it must remain will depend on the toughness of the meat and the temperature of the packing place. In extremely cold weather a third longer time may be required. There is no danger of getting pickled pork or heavy for salting to much. For the same a piece should be made just strong enough to bear that an egg. Into this stir enough brown sugar or molasses to give it a slightly sweet taste. If the weather is moderate, hams that weigh from eight to twelve pounds may be taken out for smoking in from three to four weeks. In hard freezing weather and for large hams a longer time will be required, varying from four to seven weeks.

Device for Lifting a Carcass.

Farmers of butchering time will find the sketch here depicted a thrifty convenience for lifting either a hog or beef. It is an old contrivance in many, but some readers will feel it new. It is made of 2½ inch by 4 inch sub scantlings. The long, tapered bars are fastened securely together, the third one being used as a prop and to elevate the carcass after it has been hooked on to it.

With this a man can hang up a hog without assistance. A tough hickory stick nicely rounded, or a half inch iron rod, can be used at the top.

Agricultural Beets.

The Sugar Bowl places Louisiana cane sugar crop for 1890-1 at 190,000 tons against 128,000 tons the previous year. The total beet sugar crop of the world is estimated at 3,670,000 tons; the total cane crop of the world at 2,320,000 tons.

A cold, wet cellar is a good place in which to store apples.

Sand and white lead make a hard cement that will stop leaks in roofs and other places.

Professor L. H. Bailey, of Cornell, N. Y., gives as the result of an actual experiment that if cuttings are planted shallow and hilled or earthed up, the cuttings will have more of them hoed up and larger and larger heads.

The late Colonel Curtis used to say he was a biased moral monitory. He advocated its liberal use in place of cotton and wool.

Wet beds will cause paralysis in the legs of hogs.

How to Deal with Boniface

Change the subject gradually to something that deals with principles rather than persons.

Professor Babcock recommends the addition of potash at the rate of one ounce to the pint of milk in footing, where the moisture from the sediment seed has a tendency to make the butter feel sick.
