As to the defendant Henson the Commissioner held that he must be discharged. It appearing that Hansen and Davies simply had a "rough and tumble" fight. Mr. Eberbeck did not get off so well. It was he who administered canary kicks to Davies by way of helping him down the workshop stairs, and fourthed a revolver threatening to his face. The Commissioner fees him to await the grand jury's action, fixing his bond at $500.

In Commissioner Pratt's court yesterday afternoon the case of Brown & Brooks vs. C. P. Leatherwood and Joseph H. Marsh was heard. The suit was brought to recover the sum of $127 alleged to be due for surveying and placing certain lands at Hot Springs Lake in Utah. The defendants claimed a set off in the course of litigation, but some time prior to December March paid half of the amount, thereby, as the plaintiffs claim, it was to be staying the foot, and suit was accordingly brought for the balance. Walter Murphy appeared for the plaintiffs and Attorney Dunn for the defendants. Mr. Leatherwood pleaded the statute of limitation and held that March's acknowledgment would hold March and himself. The court held that if March were liable Leatherwood was also, but gave judgment for defendants on their plea as entered.

Gold's Row.

A lady who was going into a photo gallery on the west side of Main street, stopped from the front to let some girls pass out of it for on the threshold when a little faced wagged child stopped to look in.

"Do you want your picture?" said the lady, who was evidently in her carriage.

But the child did not seem to recognize the lady, and stood with her back to the street, her head turned to the left, her mouth open, her eyes fixed on the lower sash of the window.

"Well," said the lady, annoyed at the scene, "I should think you would want your picture."

"I don't," answered the child decidedly, not offering to move it.

"But I tell you to take it, child. It is your mother who wants it."

"Oh!" exclaimed the child, drawing a long breath, "I thought it was that's name and then mother he dropped in there."

The poor child looked at the lady kindly, as if she were, and yours and mine too.

And the child ran off and handed it to the lady and left.

But the child got her hand behind her and one off without knowing the red nose. She could not comprehend how a man could drink and be like a man to his wife or her boy, and be too afraid of a lecture that one of us received a minute.—Detroit Free Press.

That's the Way.

Just a little every day,
That's the way!
Shows to fathers well and true
The footsteps we do leave
Lessons to learn to repeat,
Words slowly or the best
Which we do leave on the feet.
That's the way,
Just a little every day.

Just a little every day,
That's the way!
Children learn to read and write,
Set by and grip by rule,
Notes set one, two,
Learn to have learned to prove
Slowly slowly—how be best.
That's the way,
Just a little every day.

In Devonshire, England, one day recently, a party of young people were overtaken by a heavy shower of hailstones which lasted about ten minutes, and during that time they felt as though highly charged with electricity. The ladies of the party felt as though quite some running among their hair, which was fastened up with tortoise shell pins. One of the gentlemen held his hand to the head of one of the others and immediate hair stood on end. This was done several times with the same result, and for two or three days afterward their heads felt the effects of the electrical whipping.—London Letter.
