OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, - FEB. 16, 1895.

At the Tabernacle.

The Sunday Sabbath yesterday filled the tabernacle to its full capacity. Elder Halverson, recently returned from a mission to the southern states, gave an account of his missionary experiences. Elder F. D. Richards related some very interesting incidents connected with his mission to Europe in 1850.

WOMEN BARBERS.

THEIR HOME IN CHICAGO ARE MADE ATTRACTIVE.

"If you ever happen to notice one of the barber shops conducted by women, or which there are a dozen or more collected over town, you will find the same spirit of quietness reigning that which makes the undertaking establishment seem almost cheerful. This is particularly true of shops owned and managed by women, but it is not so noticeable in the case of men's shops to which women are employed. Mrs. Marshall has a shop in her home on College Grove avenue. There are some flowers in the window and a Hewston sash curtain across it. There are pictures on the walls and there is a growing assortment instead of the dull canvas cloth to be found in most of the smaller shops.

"I have been taking care of myself in this way for ten years," said Mrs. Marshall. "It is a kind of work that a woman can do quite as well as a man, and the number of women who are learning the trade is increasing."

Mrs. Marshall has a woman assistant, and both of them are kept busy. "Most of my customers are men," she said, "and I never hear any of them complain that the razor isn't sharp enough."

And didn't Delilah show what a woman could do in the barber line several odd centuries ago?—Chicago Tribune.

WEIGHT OF BIRDS' HEARTS.

They Are Heavier in Proportion Than Those of Animals.

Most people will be surprised to learn that the hearts of birds are far heavier proportionately than the hearts of animals including man, but a little reflection will show that this is quite natural. The same the body weighs the greater the demand upon the heart, upon which falls the duty of driving the blood through the body, hence the hearts of the heavier birds are the largest. Everybody knows that birds are among the most active and hard working of living creatures. The swallow can certainly be cited as a case in point. The fellow will carry a load weighing three pounds in the air without hindrance to the power of flight or its speed. In sport, they have a tremendous capacity for work.

The celebrated ornithologist, Marey, states that a sea gull weighing 1½ pounds is capable of performing in one second work equivalent to raising a weight of nine pounds one yard high. A man weighing 150 pounds, to be equal to the sea gull, would have to lift 150 pounds one yard high in one second. If a man succeeds in sixteen or eighteen lively jerks, he has lived up to his capacity. So women, therefore, that the hearts of our active national friends are strikingly heavy as compared with the bulk of their bodies.

The average weight of the human heart is vaguely mentioned as from one-thousandth of the total weight of the body. Dr. Carl Parkes has lately weighed the hearts of various animals and birds and has found the average to be as follows, the figures representing the one-thousandth part of the total weight: Pig, 4.23; ox, 4.30; sheep, 5.62; horse, 6.21. The conclusion is that the cause fairly close to man. The wild rooster has an exceedingly heavy heart—14.8.

Most birds are a long way ahead of animals. The carrier pigeon comes out at 18.91; the sparrow, 19.22; the finch, as expressly suited to speak of, defeats 19.85, and the song thrush, 20. The heart of the lion would be less five times heavier than that of man in comparison with the total weight.—Pittsburg Times.

A New York

Two little girls returning home in hand from school, saw a small and very cold looking dog lying in a doorway. Without stop at the door of a small two-story house at the corner of Ten Eyck and Bushwick streets, and, taking the poor dog by the collar, dragged it into the house, to the astonishment of the family. They had to carry it up the stairs, and it was placed before the kitchen fire. It was found to be very cold and hungry, and was given a good feeding. It is not the mother of a little Flora.—[Cor.

G. S. SMITH.

LEAVE, Bonneville County, Ida., Helen Week, February 12, 1895.—A successful and pleasant meeting has just concluded. The people of this ward the past three weeks on account of the death of their beloved brother and sister, Bishop H. B. Grant, who departed this life January 20, 1895, after an days of severe pain and suffering caused by a cerebral malady. It was due to his faithfulness and to the kindness of the Priesthood and by his family and kind friends, to give the life, yet it appears it was destined to be called to have to another sphere. He was born January 20, 1845, being consequently a young man in the prime of his death, and leaves a young wife and six children to mourn his departure. The remains of the deceased, were visited at Cowley, Arizona, arrived here two days after his departure and was great mourners over the sudden demise of his dearest and loving son.

The family decided to have the remains taken to St. Johns, Arizona, as the father and other members of the family were interred in the burial ground at that place. Before leaving the beauty meeting the people from all over the valley gathered around to take a farewell and pay tribute of love to him who had so ably and faithfully served them in the capacity of Bishop, for the past seven years. The body, in charge of Br. Pack, arrived in St. Johns on the evening of the 28th. The funeral ceremonies were held in the meeting house, at that place on Sunday, January 27th. The people turned out en masse out of respect to the memory of the deceased, who was one of the pioneers of Mesa, Arizona, and who there number of years previous to being called to Bishop of Mesa ward. The speakers on the occasion were Elders David H. Cannon, Joseph Smith, W. H. Gibbons and C. S. Thomas, and Bishop C. Ashcroft, Elder N. P. Johnson, president of the High Priests quorum, and President H. J. Pratt, of St. Johns, Elders Hyrum Smith, Lewis H. Thompson, and Elder C. Hampshire, of Bear ward. All seemed to comprehend the memory of the deceased and of them, having been more intimately associated with him for a number of years, he died in the prime of life, leaving a young wife and children. He passed the Spanish language and filled a mission in the Indians as well as presiding in some of the Indian schools in Arizona, as the late Bishop of Mesa. As stated in the remarks of Elder Cannon, he was very fearful of records as well as memories, as the dead will be judged according to the records of their lives. He was ever an honest in all public work, done in his ward, as the records plainly show, and his decisions will be solemn and weighed when he was called to judge. He was honest and unassuming in his daily life and was veracious.

Bishop Grant was ordained a Bishop by President John Henry Smith, in the year 1888.

After the close of the services all who desired, were allowed to view the remains, the features of which looked natural and peaceful. The funeral cortege, consisting of twenty-six teams, left for St. Johns, where it should reach on any of the good roads on the way, the body was buried near the grave and alongside the remains of his father.
