DRY DOWN IN GRAND COUNTY.

Nevertheless Good Crops Have Been Raised and Prosperity Abounds.

Henry Holyoak, the well known horticulturist, agriculturist and stockraiser of Moab, Grand county, was a caller at the "News" office last evening. He is attending the Deseret Sunday School Union Convention as a delegate from his town. He reports that notwithstanding there has been a very dry season in that section, good crops have been raised, especially fruit and grain crops, which have been both prolific and profitable.

Mr. Holyoak says that when he left home, Grand county was very dry, as rain had fallen during the season now and autumn seeding and no snow has yet come to moisten the ground or replenish the water supply. However, the people are hopeful, confident of good crops, and believe that the country is a splendid one to live in, and they have plenty of water for irrigation purposes.

Carpenter a Genius

Washington County News: Joseph W. Carpenter and his wife and family are favorably remembered by the Pioneers of Millard county, where, if circumstances are favorable, they will make their future home. Mr. Carpenter for many years published the St. George Utonian, and in many of its early days was the only publication. He is quite a genius; much of the type used in his work was cast by himself, and he did almost everything, stereotyping and electrotyping. He is also a watch and clock repairer, a photographer, a carpet weaver, a cabinet maker, a farmer, could play several instruments, wrote with his left hand, taught phonography, musical instruments and lectures, and various other things. Strictly upright and honest in all his dealings, he has many friends behind, with whom the News joins in wishing him success.

Became Ill in Salt Lake.

Provo, Wyo., Herald: It is with feelings of sad regret that we are called upon to record the death of one of Utah's country's brightest and best young girls. Miss Katie Guild, of Piedmont, departed this life on Tuesday of this week, after an illness of only six days. Miss Guild was in Salt Lake taking music lessons. One day last week became ill and was sent to her home in Piedmont, shortly after arriving home it was discovered that she had symptoms of typhoid pneumonia, which caused her death. The funeral was held at Piedmont on Friday, Bishop James Brown of the city conducting the services. There was a large attendance, several people coming from Provo being present. One sad circumstance is the fact that the father of deceased, Thos. Guild, is visiting relatives and friends in Scotland.

Meeting With Favor.

The Grand Army of the Republic, through its promoters of the series of entertainments to be given in this city, three weeks hence, is meeting with considerable success. Not only a great deal—in canvassing the business district. There is little doubt but that the affair will be most unique and interesting.

THE PIONEERS OF UTAH.

A Poem Set to Music by the Eminent Dr. Joseph Parry of Wales,

And Inscribed to Professor Evan Stephens and the Tabernacle Choir.

THE PILGRIMAGE OF THE PIONEERS.

A Cantata for Soli, Chorus and Organ. Composed Expressly for, and Dedicated to My Dear Friend, Evan Stephens, and His Famous Tabernacle Choir.

BY JOSEPH PARRY,
Doctor of Music.
University College, Cardiff, South Wales.

The above description appears on the cover of an 18 page folio of classic written music, erected by Prof. Evan Stephens, a few days ago, from Dr. Joseph Parry, the eminent Musical critic, who made such a favorable impression among our musicians and the people of Utah, at the recent Eisteddfod.

The poem, now set to music, was written by Prof. Stephens and won the first prize at the Eisteddfod of 1895. It was the intention of the Choir to sing it at the Eisteddfod of 1897, but unforeseen circumstances prevented the journey to Wales and singing at Pioneer celebration.

The cantata work is in parts taken from Whitney's History of Utah. It opens with the original verse which Joseph Morgan Cannon, Jr., a week or two ago, handed to Professor Stephens for a boy soloist. The music is written for a boy solo, as is also a beautiful solo prayer, "O Lord, Bless My City." The music, representing the perseverance of pioneers assisting the boy Prophet while engaged in making the Book of Mormon, is extremely dramatic, and the appeal to God to Zion is most effective.

The message of the Angel Moroni to the boy Prophet, upon which the poem rests upon points of gold, and the first part to a close, the whole serving as an introduction to the main theme, The Pilgrimage of the Pioneers. This opens with a solo for tenor, in which the Prophet to the words: "Come unto people, be ye journey to the mountain of the Lord," the choir sings in chorus, responsive at first. Then the ladies' chorus, similarly respond, when the beautiful theme is reached by all, by the tenors and taken up by each voice in chorus.

The music is interrupted later by the baritone solo again, calling to prayer, with the words: "Come, let us call upon the Lord, the God of Israel, and He will hear our prayer." This is followed by the music of a prayer, the words of which is not given. Following this is sung
