Wanted in Denver.

The police last night arrested a couple of smooth looking strangers who are wanted in Denver on a charge of larceny. Chief Pratt during the afternoon had received a description of the men by wire from Sheriff Burchnell and within three hours afterwards, or to be exact, he had bagged his game, and immediately sent the following message to Denver: "Have arrested the men. They have employed an attorney and are very severe." The men gave their names as G. A. Wagoner and Charles Reid. In addition to the charge of larceny that is lodged against them it is claimed that they have been passing themselves off as agents of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing company. They were posted behind the bars to await information from Denver.

ALSO WANTED AT PUEBLO.

Concerning the men, Chief Pratt this morning received a postal card containing the following information and instruction:

"Arrest and hold two confidence men. One five feet nine inches, dark complexion, full face, red nose; wears dress fob watch chain; when last seen wore dark skip-hole whiskers and dark mustache; claimed to be Wine merchant from New York City.

"The other man is five feet five inches, full face, small light mustache, complexion; wears he talks fair. Jew, speaks French and German; takes snuff; has three dark snuff box, six watch chains; claims to be agent for Anheuser-Busch Brewing company. Have warrants for them. Hold any who are, will pay expenses.

W. A. Hoyt,
Sheriff Pueblo county, Colorado.

ARE HIGH STYLERS.

The men are high livers and have a good deal of ready money. They requested Chief Pratt and Captain Brennan today to allow them half a dozen bottles of beer in their quarters in the city jail. But their petition was denied and they slunk back to the corners of their cell keeping calmer on the authorities.

Word came by wire from Pueblo today asking the men if they would go back without requisition papers and they declared, under the advice of their attorney, Ogden Hiles, that they would not.

A Change of Name.

The Union Pacific Hotel, at the U. P. depot, will hereafter be known as the Grand Pacific. The change was decided upon, it is said, because of many people on incoming trains believing the hotel to be one of the Union Pacific's high-priced hostelries, and in consequence much business was diverted from the house. The change of name, it is believed, will help to remedy this.

A Potato Germand.

In addition to the many applicants for profitable distraction with which this city is graced (?) there is now another addition in the shape of a potato-eating freak. This man comes from Seattle, Washington, and has a reputation in that city for doing what he claims, at least, a starving potatoes to disappear by the wholesale. He wants to be allowed the opportunity of disposing of internally 100 lbs of potatoes daily, at 1c lb to each man, for 100 lbs a week, and he is willing to make a bet of $100 that he can do the trick.

It has been suggested, however, that if he will go to the "industrial army" camp, he is more than likely to find many who can go his one better, if he is willing to furnish seconds and furnish the potatoes.

CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW.

The Tariff Bill Still Discussed by the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Not more than a score senators were present when the 25 o'clock, and Mr. Gallinger, of New Hampshire, interrupted the reading of the journal to suggest the absence of a quorum. It was called and forty-nine senators answered.

Senator Lindsay, Kentucky, spoke in support of the tariff bill, which he said is infinitely better than the existing law. He warmly defended the income tax.

When asked if the Republicans would stand by the proposition to vote on the tariff bill today, Aldrich said: "I had no intention of granting an option. My proposition was to the Senate and not to the Democratic caucus." It therefore seems that Aldrich's surprising offer was a bluff which doesn't bind the Republicans and the tariff debate will not be ended by a vote at 2 p. m.

Harris moved to the Senate that the tariff bill be taken up. Gorman objected, but the motion passed, 29 to 15.

Pugh waived his right to the floor and Lindsay adjourned the Senate. Sherman disposed the assertion of Lindsay that the commissioners personally decided to make the wager without regard to the rule of duty.

Cullom also addressed the Senate. He said that he had never maintained that a tariff for protection was unconstitutional, but he offer an assumption that the Constitution may forbid the exercise of laws necessary to the very existence of the government. Cullom pronounced the income tax a begging proposition.

THE HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The employes under Hepburn, Republican, has been carrying on the House for one week. It would take too long a page of the congressional RECORD, laboriously compiled in a sitting today. There were twenty-two small bills passed. Hepburn, chairman of the committee on ways and means, was in a good humored mood, inclined to making an arrangement whereby an hour would be given to each.

Senator Quay Ill.

PITTSBURG, April 27.—Senator Quay is reported very ill at Beaver. He arranged for a political meeting here this afternoon and to attend the America club hot spot tonight, but he was unable to leave his house. His attendant is now that may take him off without much warning.
