A POLICEMAN ROBBED.

Officer Shannon Bewails the Loss of His Favorite Steed.

It is very seldom that one hears of a policeman being robbed, but an officer Shannon makes that complaint. He is bewailing the loss of his black steed upon which he has lately been making his official rounds. Not only is the horse gone, but with it has disappeared a saddle, bridle and all else but its submitted rider. Who the perpetrator of the outrage is, it is somewhat difficult to conjecture, but Dick has his eyes open and will land the fellow where he properly belongs if he gets the end bit of a chance. Meanwhile the officer summons himself with performing his official duties on the back of another equine which he was fortunate enough to have in his possession at the time of his recent misfortune.

Another Plea for Coughlin.

An application for writ of error was filed in the Supreme court yesterday afternoon in the case of Patrick Coughlin for the killing of Constable Stagg. The court will hear arguments on Monday next as to the right of the defendant to be heard on case taken to the Supreme court of the United States. His attorneys contend that he has a right to appeal to that court while Utah was a Territory and did not lose the right by its admission to statehood.

Judgment Affirmed.

The Supreme court rendered a decision late yesterday afternoon affirming the decision in the case of Charles C. Wilson vs the Southern Pacific railway company, appellant. This action was brought on to recover damages for injuries caused by the plaintiff to Twenty-sixth street in Ogden, where the defendant's railway crosses. The jury in the Fourth district court brought in a verdict for the plaintiff. The railroad company appealed from the judgment which the Supreme court affirmed. The opinion was delivered by Chief Justice Zane. Justice Miner concurred and Justice Bartch dissented.

Mrs. Larsen's Death.

CASTLE DALE, Emery Co., Utah, April 14, 1896.

To the Editor:

President C. O. Larsen of this Stake asks me to write a few facts about the late illness of his wife Annette.

About six years ago she began to have discomfort from what appeared to be a lump growing in her right side low down. The growth increased in size very gradually until about a year ago when it began to enlarge with extreme rapidity. The tumor became so large that she could hardly stand up and the pain caused by the pressure on surrounding parts became almost unendurable. The heart, liver, lungs and stomach were pressed upwards, making breathing very short and at times difficult, while the downward pressure was also great and resulted in serious derangement of the body's functions.

Last winter Dr. Winters of Orangeville was called and diagnosed the trouble as a cystic tumor. A consultation was held and when there were some prospects of relief from her terrible condition, through operating, she was ready—as she have done what was possible. She was operated on Monday morning, April 13th, by Drs. S. H. Allen of Provo and Winters of Orangeville, the operation requiring a little over two hours. The tumor was a large cyst which contained many smaller cysts and all were filled with a gelatinous fluid. Its weight was between thirty-five and forty pounds. The operation was successfully completed, the patient came out from the influence of the anesthetic and before so rational as ever, rested comfortably all day and lately well at night, saying she felt thankful to breathe naturally once more. Tuesday forenoon she seemed to be doing well, but towards the close of the day she began to get worse and passed away Tuesday night from exhaustion. She was 55 years of age and was much reduced in flesh, in strength and endurance by having been in bed a year.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Arbor Day Observed in a Fitting Manner By that Institution.

April 15 was observed as a legal holiday. The previous afternoon the students had had meetings by classes and determined to plant trees, with appropriate ceremonies. The students, therefore, with the faculty and a number of visitors, met in the audience room in the morning as usual, but instead of disposing to lectures and laboratories, after the usual opening exercises, they remained for an hour, listening to speeches, songs, readings and recitations appropriate to the occasion. Then they went out on the campus to upon previously chosen, and planted their memorial groves.

The seniors planted half a dozen elms; the juniors a dozen sugar maples; the sophomores, white pines; the freshmen, larches, and the classes of the preparatory department planted groups of trees previously agreed upon. Some of the classes had further literary exercises while covering the roots of their trees. Six groups of trees on the slope in front of the college buildings, it is hoped will gradually grow to be a worthy treatment to the premises, and a pleasant memorial of those who planted them.
