CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The Sixty-sixth Semi-annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will convene in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, on Friday morning, October 4th, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. A cordial invitation is given to the officers and members of the Church to be present.

WILFORD WOODRUFF,
GEORGE Q. CANNON,
JOSEPH F. SMITH,
First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

THE CAMPAIGN.

The lines are now distinctly formed and the great political campaign in which Utah is laboring like a ship in the trough of a tempestuous sea, is fully if not totally under way—the noisy part will be here early enough, however. Here are two great parties and one that is not so great arrayed and marshaled, each claiming everything for itself and denying all things to both the others, as usual on such occasions; meantime the confounded citizen who does not permit himself to be carried away by partisan claptrap and cheap bunkombe looks on and smiles. It all falls on him like a June shower on a well-fed duck; he is going to vote according to his convictions, and no amount of Chinese tactics can change him for long if at all.

It is a perfectly proper thing to discuss the issues in an intelligent and fair-minded way during a campaign; neither is there anything reprehensible in orderly and well arranged parades with their concomitants of music and red fire, since these serve to awaken interest and cause some who are not sufficiently posted to set about it at once. There is, however, nothing to commend in misrepresentation and ridicule of opposing candidates such as goes on every day, and much to condemn in the departures from actual facts which occur with such painful frequency. The defenders of our practical political system claim that it tends to better government because it incubates individuality of thought and expression while impressing one with a more profound sense of his duties and responsibilities under the government; this is true as far as it goes, but when the methods adopted teach us to gloss over falsehood and smile at malignity they are not good for any class of people. Let those who oppose them unite to reduce such evils to the lowest possible proportions if they cannot to extirpate altogether.

THE IRISH ALLIANCE.

As near as can be judged from the proceedings of the present meeting in Chicago of supporters of the Irish cause, the opinion is unanimous that home rule for Ireland cannot be obtained by parliamentary action in the lines followed by the Parnellites, and that the only alternative left is an appeal to arms at some future time. In the resolutions adopted, the conviction is expressed that the point has now been reached when it is justifiable, both by God's and man's laws, to strike England in her "hour of difficulty" and, if possible, to create such a difficulty—which in plain words means, that if England should be involved in war, it would be Ireland's duty to side with the enemy.

In England the Chicago gathering is regarded as a great farce, if newspaper comments be taken as an expression of public sentiment, but notwithstanding this, it is probable that the formation of the Irish Alliance will mark one of the more important steps in the struggle for Ireland's independence, and that it will attract attention abroad as well as in this country. The Irish people of all political branches have been keenly disappointed at seeing what they regard their patriotic efforts crushed so near the goal. In their present predicament, with the prospect of a long tory rule, they will naturally unite and endeavor to arouse public sentiment in behalf of their cause in some other way. Whether they will succeed depends entirely on their ability to preserve unity, and on their prudence and conservatism.

It is not improbable that the formation of an Irish "Alliance" for the very apparent purpose of hostilities against England will raise the question, how far its existence can be tolerated within the boundaries of the United States. The purpose is to create a standing army to be held in readiness for the opportune moment. Most of the members of this armed organization will be naturalized citizens of the United States. Can our government consistently remain passive after their intentions have been made known? Will not England demand their suppression and intimate that a refusal to comply with the demand must be regarded as unfriendly towards Great Britain? These questions naturally arise. Russia stood at one time was compelled to expel conspirators against foreign countries from her boundaries, and a refusal to comply with the demands of the powers would probably have cost that country her independence. If this be regarded as a precedent, undoubtedly some lively diplomatic correspondence between Washington and London can be expected in a near future.

THE DURRANT CASE.

Several decades ago the civilized world was brought to a contemplation of the mystery with which murder in the midst of populous and law-abiding communities may be surrounded, by the celebrated case of the commonwealth of Massachusetts vs Dr. Webster, for slaying Parkman. It attracted the most profound attention and awakened the most elaborate discussion in this country and every other where there were a printing press; there were no direct evidences of guilt, all was purely circumstantial, the murder had been committed in the comparative seclusion of an office where only the murderer and the murdered were present, and the body was immediately destroyed, we believe by boiling, and its remains skillfully disposed of. Not one spot could give criminating testimony save such as amounted to suspicious circumstances, and yet Webster, was convicted and hanged—properly so, in the light of subsequent facts which became known and which doubtless would have been concealed forever but for such conviction and execution.

Some years later, and just before the breaking out of the civil war, a parallel case—equal to the other in the density of its mystery and the prominence of the parties—occurred in New York and was known to criminal annals as the Burdell murder. The parallel ceased this side of the gallows, however, for the accused parties—Mrs. Cunningham, Eckels and Snodgrass—were never executed, although public opinion convicted every one of them.

Of course there have been a number of others, notably the Cronin case at Chicago a few years ago, the Borden case in Massachusetts, and the quite recent trials and convictions of Carlyle W. Harris and Dr. Buchanan in New York and Harry Hayward in Minnesota; but we think none of these has wrought up the wondering interest of the civilized world to such an extent as has the investigation at San Francisco into the ghastly tragedy of the taking off of Blanche Lamont, and with which young Durrant is now undergoing trial for his life.

The prosecution has closed after a wearisome session of more than nine weeks, during which the state's attorneys have patiently, persistently, even doggedly, developed the case against the prisoner piece by piece, leaving nothing out of the record, it would seem, that could possibly shed even a semi-life of light upon the surrounding gloom. Fragment upon fragment, here a little and there a little, sometimes disconnected and again fitting like smoothed mosaic, none of it conclusive and but little of it positive, yet all pointing like the needle to the pole in the direction of the guilt of Theodore Durrant. It is such a case that has been made not as pale the defense upon its own proof; that is, the bulwark of the state must be overthrown and the innocence of the accused established by affirmative evidence.

Judging from the present trend of the case, this may be done; in fact, a great stride was taken in that direction when the opening statement of the defense was made to the jury. Different to this was early a statement, simply outlining what that side of the case expected to prove, or at least what it claimed it would prove. If it should succeed, Durrant would be entitled to acquittal without so much of formality as the jury retiring; but we all know that attorneys in a case fail to realize the points aimed at quite frequently, and it seems altogether possible that this is so likely to be such a condition of things in the review, especially in view of the first evidence adduced for the defense.

The evidence of the alibi, to recapitulate slightly, envelopes Durrant in an all but perfect piece of network. It approaches him as nearly in place that it almost crowns him, but not quite. It is the narrow space intervening that gives the defense its opportunity. Widened out it would escape for the prisoner; was a certificate of innocence and perpetual immunity from prosecution hereafter, whatever the future might disclose; narrowed up the result could scarcely fail to be the gallows. However it may be, let us hope the final disposition of the dark and dreary matter will then to us as plain and satisfying to the people who are remotely as well as those immediately concerned that thereafter there will be no room for cavil—that we will not have to say once more that "he was either the victim of the most cruel and inexplicable circumstances, or one of the greatest monsters that ever breathed."

NOT A "MISSING LINK."

As an illustration of the unreliability of hasty conclusions drawn from "mirages" found in the earth, as to "missing links" and kindred suppositions, a story from Rock Springs, Wyoming, deserves careful notice. As we hear from the place mentioned the story goes:

In the issue of September 22nd the Rocky Mountain News contains an interview with Prof. J. L. Wortman, of Columbia College, N. Y., in which the professor related his thrilling find of the bones in the "missing link," being that lived and moved 10,000 years ago. These remains of the original man were carefully wrapped in cotton, and forwarded to the fire-proof museum in New York. The precious bones were found by the professor and a party of scientific students near the head of the historic Bitter creek, near the Wyoming-Colorado line.

The professor's interesting find has caused intense excitement among the old-time cattlemen of this section, as it is well known that the bones were the skeleton of a pet monkey owned by cowboys, which died twelve years ago.

The incident is hardly less discouraging to a certain class of scientists than one that occurred years ago, when a noted student of nature discovered some bones which he pronounced the remains of an extinct species of the human race, of gigantic proportions. It was finally found that the bones were those of elephants.

THE LONDON correspondent of the New York Times says: Vienna has it that Russia and France have definitely separated themselves from England in the present phase of the Armenian business, and that Lord Salisbury is now alone in his posture of opposition toward the sultan. Vienna gets so many things wrong that there is no assurance that this is right, but, all the same, it accords with what has been expected from the start. If the separation is not an accomplished fact, it will soon be less come. Simultaneously have come disquieting rumors about the crash-down of negotiations with Russia about the Panjdeh matter.

THERE'S NOTHING like the smile as an index to the character of the man. The open-faced, hearty smile, full of honest joy and unsuspicious pleasure, never yet wreathed the cheeks of a natural rascal, nor can the villain by any art conceal the treachery of the diabolism of his grin. But the most dangerous of all smiles is the insipid, meaningless variety, the maudlin, sheepish, half-fearful opening of mouth and dimpling of cheek. Of all such, beware! Beneath it may be an honest heart, but nine times out of ten there lurks a scoundrel.

THE SACRAMENTO Evening Bee thinks the cholera news is of such a nature at present that it behooves the board of health of that city to proceed immediately to work with herculean efforts to prevent the plague from entering Sacramento.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A proper use of this medicine has often averted long and fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only fifty cents a bottle. Z. C. M. I. drug department.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Grodermus, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make the extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Hives Junction she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Z. C. M. I. drug department. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is not a secret preparation. Any physician may have the formula on application. The secret of its success as a medicine lies in its extraordinary power to cleanse the blood of impurities and cure the most deep-seated cases of blood disease.

"For years," says Capt. C. Mueller, of Dover, Ohio, "I have relied more upon Ayer's Pills than anything else in the medicine chest, to regulate my bowels, and those of the ship's crew. These pills are mild severe in their action, but do their work thoroughly."

If Blotched with scaly Disease, hair falling out, and premature baldness, do not use grease or alcoholic preparations, but apply Hall's Hair Renewer.

The market is full of cough mixtures, but one trouble with most of them is that when they do a little good the patient has to take so much that he gets to loathe the taste. The Pineola Balsam is superior to other cough remedies because it is agreeable to the palate and its good effects are immediate. In a few days an ordinary cough is gone altogether. Bronchitis and asthma are more stubborn, but they too are cured by Ely's Pineola Balsam. A remedy worth trying. Twenty-five cents is all it costs.

Beecham's pills are for biliousness, bilious headache, dyspepsia, heartburn, torpid liver, dizziness, sick headache, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, loss of appetite, sallow skin, etc., when caused by constipation; and constipation is the most frequent cause of all of them.

Go by the book. Pills 10c and 25c a box. Book free at your druggist's or write B. F. Allen Co., 365 Canal Street, New York.

ANOTHER RAMBLER DAY.

The Rambler boys made a great showing in the Ogden races. The first event of the day was the ten mile road race, in which McCornick finished third, taking third prize and third time prize. Then came the track race, Joe Beck taking second in the novice. Fowler first, Walter second, and Thatcher third in the mile scratch, class B, all "Ramblers" you will note. In the half mile class A, May took second, Carter third. Half mile, class B, Thatcher second, Fowler third. Five mile, class B, Fowler second. In this race a man in a yellow suit lost his head and fell, Cornibear and Walter being immediately behind him, the result was a spill for these parties and the race left to Evans. The five mile, class A, was another Rambler event, May taking first, Joe Beck second and McCornick third. Fourteen prizes in one day is glory enough for any one.

People are as much and people care are.
And does may how if they please,
But Rambler's win reasons whatever they go,
Regardless of how others feel.

Moral—Buy a Rambler! Ride a winner and you'll be a spinner.
