LAND GRABBING SCHEME.

The Southern Pacific Trying to Secure Patents to Mineral Lands.

ASHLAND, ORE., Nov. 19.—The Southern Pacific company is trying to secure patents to all unoccupied mineral lands lying in the lower section within the limits of the railroad grant, covering the most valuable part of the Southern Oregon mining districts. The railroad company has recently been making surveys of land and filing the in the land office at Roseburg, on the purpose of securing title from the government. Public meetings have been held in several towns at which the action of the railway company has been condemned. By the terms of the charter of the Oregon and California Railroad company, granted July 25, 1866, the government gave to the company all the odd-numbered sections of land within a strip 20 miles wide on each side of the railroad, but stipulated that mining claims be excepted and, of course, that as vested rights in other lands by reason of prior possession or otherwise, be interfered with.

The railroad surveyors have lately reached the great mining district West of Rogue River valley and this is the cause of all the trouble. A survey is made of unoccupied land and it is five to the land form so commonest. The people claim that the land is wholly unfit for agricultural use, and the company is simply trying to get hold of mineral lands in order the provisions of its non-mineral claims. Special committees of two men have been appointed from each mining district, and they are directed to take counsel with those in their districts who have proofs and contests to file, and to procure more information regarding mineral lands in their district as may be of use to the general committee. A large number of contests will be filed at once.

A MYTHICAL MOTHER.

Said to Have Come From Granesville and Departed for Butte, Montana.

John Hudson, is the name of a young fellow who was tried in the police court this morning on a charge of stealing an overcoat from Theodore Robinson a few days ago.

When put on the witness stand he declared in all seriousness that he did not steal the coat; that he simply took it from the counter, carried it to the sidewalk and put it on to show his mother, who he claims was waiting on the outside.

Deputy Marshal Bowman Cannon, who selected the theft and followed Hudson outside, says that he arrested the young man's mother was nowhere in sight.

When questioned as to where his mother lived Hudson said that she came from Granesville on Saturday and went to Butte, Mont., on the evening of last day; that his father was a painter, and that he lived at No. 176 State street; that he (Hudson) had been employed as bell boy at the Colorado hotel in this city and as a waiter at the Chicago restaurant. The prisoner then said he had to go to Butte to acknowledge that his mother was a myth and that his whole story was false, but he would not do it, and the case went over to give the police time to look into the matter a little further. They soon found that Hudson's story is false from beginning to end.

DAINTY DESERTS.

Mrs. Ewing's Receipts for Jellies, Creams, and Charlotte Russe.

Saturday afternoon closed the course of lectures on cooking by Mrs. Ewing, and it was devoted exclusively to delicate deserts.

Mrs. Ewing prefaced the lecture by a very few pertinent remarks about the interest she always felt in her class and how sorry she is when the last lesson comes, as it means a separation. She expressed her thanks to the people of Salt Lake, who had been so very kind to her, especially the members of the Woman's Club, those Sons who had served dishes, stove and utensils, and most of all the newspapers for their excellent notices.

Mrs. Ewing then proceeded to make an orange jelly, informing her class that after this lesson any one who would give strict attention would be competent to independent orange jelly. One-third of a box of gelatine soaked for an hour in half a pint of cold water, and one cup of orange juice, and the juice of one of orange extract (for the sake of the flavor, because the specific flavor of the orange is in the peel), set on the stove, stir until the gelatine is all dissolved, remove from the stove, strain in a bowl, add a cup of sugar, if not acid enough add the juice of half a lemon and if necessary more sugar. The more acid and sugar you have to use the richer your jelly will be. Then give a generous piece to each, it will give a fine flavor; pares in the bowl, and you have a jerset orange jelly, which can be turned into orange pudding if wanted. Best orange pudding if wanted. Best orange jelly you ever ate, which it looks white and the orange of little egg white, add a stiff froth, beat a small portion of the sugar with the eggs to make it feel, beat in and whipped cream. This poured into a frame of angel cake makes a lovely dessert. For peach jelly, if canned peaches, use the juice for a fresh peaches, make a cream in the following manner. One cup of sugar, one-half cup water, one-half cup milk, boil to a thin yellow, stir with a wooden spoon and cook slowly. When sufficiently done, add a tablespoon of butter, vanilla, and a little juice of the canned peaches. Pour into the gelatine in right quantity of water and enough cream to get the point of peach juice, sweeten to taste, add half cup of almond extract, and pour over the almond peaches. This dessert can stand for hours without the peach coloring.

Grapejelly was made and served in a bed of whipped cream, chocolate cream and chocolate russe was also made, the latter being a very fine dessert made from slices of stale sponge cake set in moulds and the juice of cream poured in them. Mrs. Ewing claims that light deserts such as these, made from fruit juices and gelatine, should be preserved with heavy dinners, while the pies and puddings should be served with light dinners.

This afternoon she gives an extra lesson by request on pull paste and fine ice cream, and tomorrow cakes and coffee. For the latter occasion the class are requested to bring an apron, dress coffee-cup and spoon, and coffee and cake will be served from 1 o'clock until time for the lecture to begin.

Mrs. Ewing departs from Salt Lake this week, perhaps as early as Wednesday, and she leaves a host of admiring pupils behind her as well as graduates, for certainly her lectures have been charged with valuable practical points which will all be remembered in preparing tasty and digestible food.

COURT AT BEAVER.

Judge Hatch's Ruling on the Amnesty Proclamation.

Leniency in Rehabilitation Cases—Sentence for Assault on His Wife—Defendant Nearly Finished.

Special to the News and Deseret Evening News.

BEAVER, UTAH, Nov. 19.—Saturday afternoon Judge Hatch overruled the plea in bar in the Willie case, holding that the proclamations of Presidents Harrison and Cleveland were the cause in effect so far as such cases as that before the court were concerned. Defendant was charged in county the charge of unlawful cohabitation in the Supreme Court on the issue, but he proceeded to plead guilty and sued for the mercy. He and one Morgan, of Paragon, who pertaining had pleaded guilty to the same charge, were sentenced to pay a fine of $1 each and costs. His honor gave the defendants to understand that the leniency was not because of any disposition to be easy on violators of the law which would be anything of a high-toned character, but because he felt that the parties had in good faith and their present promises on their honor to continue to do so.

A. S. Robinson, charged on two informations of assault with a deadly weapon upon his wife, appeared this morning for sentence. Mrs. Robinson claims that light assaults such as these, made from fluid jalous and gelatine, should be preserved with heavy dinners, while the pies and puddings should be served with light dinners.

This afternoon she gives an extra lesson by request on pull paste and fine ice cream, and tomorrow cakes and coffee. For the latter occasion the class are requested to bring an apron, dress coffee-cup and spoon, and coffee and cake will be served from 1 o'clock until time for the lecture to begin.

POLICE CONSPIRACY.

Schemes to Entrap Chief Pratt, Captain Donovan and Other Officers.

AN INFAMOUS PLOT, IF TRUE.

Detective Rhodes Said To Be Now Up in the Affair—He Loses His Star—Liquor Men and Loud Women.

An expose has just been made of an alleged conspiracy in the police department of this city, which for interesting details and anticipated results is perhaps the most extensive plot ever brought to light in the annals of the municipal government, and in recent years criminal and minority cases have not been wanting.

For three or four weeks past the heads of the department have had information that a certain element in the Liquor Dealers' association were, in police parlance, "laying for them." It was learned also that some men on the force were "speaking" in the saloon slang. One of the sergeants and officers who City Detective Rhodes, who was promptly put under a surveillance of whom he knew nothing. He was constantly shadowed and his movements reported to headquarters. All of the time he was doing duty for the city and, it would seem, according to the charges he was to collect upon to face before the Board police commissioners, thereby wrecking well-founded plots which escape issues will says impossible.

On Friday night James Hilton, president of the Continental Hotel saloon, and Hinton were found to cross examination. On Saturday night they were based on an indicment recently on Franklin avenue where it is stated and is just admitted, that a plot was started or never made known which had for its end the downfall of Patrolman Gillespie and Rohrer, two men who have been the greatest nuisance of any men on the force—men whom he says he can find anywhere and under all circumstances and whom he knows to be above reproach or purchase.

The story is that a certain "criminal-at-law, well-educated-and-familiar-with-the-ways-of-the-underworld" was offered $1,000 to accomplish the ruin and disgrace of these two officers. The work was undoubted almost immediately afterwards with Officer Rohrer and he said he lost his star, his position and the reputation of the city was asked for particulars but was not to give them.

The conversation and exposure came on Saturday night. Hinton and Hilton were ordered, time Chief Pratt's office, the young English woman and the madame of the establishment of which she was an inmate were sent for. Commissioners Jennings and Empey were present. The women identified Hinton and Hilton as the men who sought to take them. Both men acknowledge visiting the women. Hinton said he had just "stepped" in without any design of evil and Hilton says he was so drunk he didn't know what he was doing. Hinton said he had not been drinking with fear he begged Chief Pratt's forgiveness. But the chief does not propose to let the matter pass by so easily, and intimated that he would be heard from in a year from time to time. Of course, the secret Rohrer's star was taken from him and his suspension ordered until official investigation can be made.

In connection with the foregoing it is stated that Officer Gillespie was to be called upon to testify against the men, but he is presumably refused to enter to allow the gamblers and saloon men to run their business in violation of the law on Sundays. He says further that a large sum of money has been raised for the purpose and that there are men behind the movement whose names, if published in this connection at this time, would startle the community from center to circumference.

FIGHT FOR SILVER.

Efforts of Senators Jones, Stewart, Pettigrew and Cameron.

FORMATION OF A NEW PARTY

Will Be the Result of a Refusal of the Republicans to Adopt a Free Coinage Plank.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 19.—The Tribune, S. D. correspondent of the Journal writes the following information obtained from the statements of one of the leaders of the movement: "For several months an understanding has existed among the leading silver men of the United States that an emphatic demand shall be made that the Republican platform of 1896 shall contain an unequivocal declaration in favor of unqualified free coinage of silver and in the event of failure of the Republicans to incorporate a new party movement shall forthwith be inaugurated with a two-plank platform, declaring simply for protection and free coinage. The management of the movement is largely in the hands of Senators Jones, Stewart and Pettigrew and they are looking to Senator Cameron as a presidential candidate in the event of the birth of the new party. The results of the recent elections have given the leaders renewed confidence, as they now believe they will be able to catch the democrats of the Populists and secure through a protective plank the allegiance of the latter party in the East. Their hope is to centralize the entire free silver strength and much of the labor vote of the country.

"My information is positive in the declaration that the Republican party will be asked to either insert a silver plank or be defeated. This intention of the silver men is the fundamental secret of the movement. It is even said that Senator Cameron has already consented to head the revolt."

A MYTHICAL MOTHER.

Said to Have Come From Granesville and Departed for Butte, Montana.

John Hudson, is the name of a young fellow who was tried in the police court this morning on a charge of stealing an overcoat from Theodore Robinson a few days ago.

When put on the witness stand he declared in all seriousness that he did not steal the coat; that he simply took it from the counter, carried it to the sidewalk and put it on to show his mother, who he claims was waiting on the outside.

Deputy Marshal Bowman Cannon, who selected the theft and followed Hudson outside, says that he arrested the young man's mother was nowhere in sight.

When questioned as to where his mother lived Hudson said that she came from Granesville on Saturday and went to Butte, Mont., on the evening of last day; that his father was a painter, and that he lived at No. 176 State street; that he (Hudson) had been employed as bell boy at the Colorado hotel in this city and as a waiter at the Chicago restaurant. The prisoner then said he had to go to Butte to acknowledge that his mother was a myth and that his whole story was false, but he would not do it, and the case went over to give the police time to look into the matter a little further. They soon found that Hudson's story is false from beginning to end.

DAINTY DESERTS.

Mrs. Ewing's Receipts for Jellies, Creams, and Charlotte Russe.

Saturday afternoon closed the course of lectures on cooking by Mrs. Ewing, and it was devoted exclusively to delicate deserts.

Mrs. Ewing prefaced the lecture by a very few pertinent remarks about the interest she always felt in her class and how sorry she is when the last lesson comes, as it means a separation. She expressed her thanks to the people of Salt Lake, who had been so very kind to her, especially the members of the Woman's Club, those Sons who had served dishes, stove and utensils, and most of all the newspapers for their excellent notices.

Mrs. Ewing then proceeded to make an orange jelly, informing her class that after this lesson any one who would give strict attention would be competent to independent orange jelly. One-third of a box of gelatine soaked for an hour in half a pint of cold water, and one cup of orange juice, and the juice of one of orange extract (for the sake of the flavor, because the specific flavor of the orange is in the peel), set on the stove, stir until the gelatine is all dissolved, remove from the stove, strain in a bowl, add a cup of sugar, if not acid enough add the juice of half a lemon and if necessary more sugar. The more acid and sugar you have to use the richer your jelly will be. Then give a generous piece to each, it will give a fine flavor; pares in the bowl, and you have a jerset orange jelly, which can be turned into orange pudding if wanted. Best orange pudding if wanted. Best orange jelly you ever ate, which it looks white and the orange of little egg white, add a stiff froth, beat a small portion of the sugar with the eggs to make it feel, beat in and whipped cream. This poured into a frame of angel cake makes a lovely dessert. For peach jelly, if canned peaches, use the juice for a fresh peaches, make a cream in the following manner. One cup of sugar, one-half cup water, one-half cup milk, boil to a thin yellow, stir with a wooden spoon and cook slowly. When sufficiently done, add a tablespoon of butter, vanilla, and a little juice of the canned peaches. Pour into the gelatine in right quantity of water and enough cream to get the point of peach juice, sweeten to taste, add half cup of almond extract, and pour over the almond peaches. This dessert can stand for hours without the peach coloring.

Grapejelly was made and served in a bed of whipped cream, chocolate cream and chocolate russe was also made, the latter being a very fine dessert made from slices of stale sponge cake set in moulds and the juice of cream poured in them. Mrs. Ewing claims that light deserts such as these, made from fluid jalous and gelatine, should be preserved with heavy dinners, while the pies and puddings should be served with light dinners.

This afternoon she gives an extra lesson by request on pull paste and fine ice cream, and tomorrow cakes and coffee. For the latter occasion the class are requested to bring an apron, dress coffee-cup and spoon, and coffee and cake will be served from 1 o'clock until time for the lecture to begin.

Mrs. Ewing departs from Salt Lake this week, perhaps as early as Wednesday, and she leaves a host of admiring pupils behind her as well as graduates, for certainly her lectures have been charged with valuable practical points which will all be remembered in preparing tasty and digestible food.

COURT AT BEAVER.

Judge Hatch's Ruling on the Amnesty Proclamation.

Leniency in Rehabilitation Cases—Sentence for Assault on His Wife—Defendant Nearly Finished.

Special to the News and Deseret Evening News.

BEAVER, UTAH, Nov. 19.—Saturday afternoon Judge Hatch overruled the plea in bar in the Willie case, holding that the proclamations of Presidents Harrison and Cleveland were the cause in effect so far as such cases as that before the court were concerned. Defendant was charged in county the charge of unlawful cohabitation in the Supreme Court on the issue, but he proceeded to plead guilty and sued for the mercy. He and one Morgan, of Paragon, who pertaining had pleaded guilty to the same charge, were sentenced to pay a fine of $1 each and costs. His honor gave the defendants to understand that the leniency was not because of any disposition to be easy on violators of the law which would be anything of a high-toned character, but because he felt that the parties had in good faith and their present promises on their honor to continue to do so.

A. S. Robinson, charged on two informations of assault with a deadly weapon upon his wife, appeared this morning for sentence. Mrs. Robinson claims that light assaults such as these, made from fluid jalous and gelatine, should be preserved with heavy dinners, while the pies and puddings should be served with light dinners.

This afternoon she gives an extra lesson by request on pull paste and fine ice cream, and tomorrow cakes and coffee. For the latter occasion the class are requested to bring an apron, dress coffee-cup and spoon, and coffee and cake will be served from 1 o'clock until time for the lecture to begin.

POLICE CONSPIRACY.

Schemes to Entrap Chief Pratt, Captain Donovan and Other Officers.

AN INFAMOUS PLOT, IF TRUE.

Detective Rhodes Said To Be Now Up in the Affair—He Loses His Star—Liquor Men and Loud Women.

An expose has just been made of an alleged conspiracy in the police department of this city, which for interesting details and anticipated results is perhaps the most extensive plot ever brought to light in the annals of the municipal government, and in recent years criminal and minority cases have not been wanting.

For three or four weeks past the heads of the department have had information that a certain element in the Liquor Dealers' association were, in police parlance, "laying for them." It was learned also that some men on the force were "speaking" in the saloon slang. One of the sergeants and officers who City Detective Rhodes, who was promptly put under a surveillance of whom he knew nothing. He was constantly shadowed and his movements reported to headquarters. All of the time he was doing duty for the city and, it would seem, according to the charges he was to collect upon to face before the Board police commissioners, thereby wrecking well-founded plots which escape issues will says impossible.

On Friday night James Hilton, president of the Continental Hotel saloon, and Hinton were found to cross examination. On Saturday night they were based on an indicment recently on Franklin avenue where it is stated and is just admitted, that a plot was started or never made known which had for its end the downfall of Patrolman Gillespie and Rohrer, two men who have been the greatest nuisance of any men on the force—men whom he says he can find anywhere and under all circumstances and whom he knows to be above reproach or purchase.

The story is that a certain "criminal-at-law, well-educated-and-familiar-with-the-ways-of-the-underworld" was offered $1,000 to accomplish the ruin and disgrace of these two officers. The work was undoubted almost immediately afterwards with Officer Rohrer and he said he lost his star, his position and the reputation of the city was asked for particulars but was not to give them.

The conversation and exposure came on Saturday night. Hinton and Hilton were ordered, time Chief Pratt's office, the young English woman and the madame of the establishment of which she was an inmate were sent for. Commissioners Jennings and Empey were present. The women identified Hinton and Hilton as the men who sought to take them. Both men acknowledge visiting the women. Hinton said he had just "stepped" in without any design of evil and Hilton says he was so drunk he didn't know what he was doing. Hinton said he had not been drinking with fear he begged Chief Pratt's forgiveness. But the chief does not propose to let the matter pass by so easily, and intimated that he would be heard from in a year from time to time. Of course, the secret Rohrer's star was taken from him and his suspension ordered until official investigation can be made.

In connection with the foregoing it is stated that Officer Gillespie was to be called upon to testify against the men, but he is presumably refused to enter to allow the gamblers and saloon men to run their business in violation of the law on Sundays. He says further that a large sum of money has been raised for the purpose and that there are men behind the movement whose names, if published in this connection at this time, would startle the community from center to circumference.
