STAKE CONFERENCES POSTPONED.

In order that all members of the Council of the Apostles may be able to attend the funeral services of their deceased fellow laborer, Elder A. H. Cannon, and that as many of the authorities and saints as desire to do so may also attend, it is requested that the quarterly conferences appointed for Sunday next, July 26, in Tooele, Box Elder and Oneida Stakes, be postponed for one week.

WILFORD WOODRUFF,
GEORGE Q. CANNON,
JOSEPH F. SMITH,
First Presidency.

AN IGNORANT EDUCATOR.

Prof. Andrew D. White is prominent before the country as the head of Cornell university; he has also enjoyed the distinction of representing the government of the United States at the court of the German emperor. In a letter to the New York Tribune on July 19 he discussed the Democratic convention at Chicago and its candidate for President. Of the convention he says it was "a heterogeneous mass of anarchists, socialists, populists, speculators, and scallawags—the strength of neither of the great parties and the pest of both;" that it was a "wild mob;" that it gave to the country "an anarchist and socialist platform, and for the first time, also, a candidate who has never given the slightest evidence of statesmanship;" that its platform aims "at present and prospective anarchy and socialism;" and he winds up with the remark that > Nothing has hitherto been depicted to us like its "lady representative from Utah."

Of course, the cause of Mr. White's ravings is altogether in the fact that the Democratic platform declares for the free coinage of silver. This display of frenzy on the part of the eminent professor may have relieved his pent-up feelings greatly; but it will not change the fact that "it is a bad cause that needs bolstering by the argument of wrath." If his anti-silverism had been based on a good foundation he could have offended to reason instead of to malign those who differed from his views. His vituperation will make no converts; but by indulging in it he confesses that there is in the cause of silver sufficient to draw to it the service of the people, and so he displays his contempt for the "common crowd."

One of the first accomplishments that comes to an educated man is the ability and obligation to conduct himself as a gentleman; a well educated man does not descend to violent and abusive epithets, nor have recourse to vulgar name-calling merely upon being brought face to face with ideas different to his own. So in respect to this matter of conduct, while Prof. White may have learned a few things from books, his letter shows him to be quite ignorant of the properties due to his fellow citizens. A course of study in courtesy as a primary school might be of material value in his education.

So far as Mr. White's reference to Utah is concerned, certainly the gentleman's gallantry will not commend itself any more than his abusive language. Some very sharp things might be said of him on this score, but since by his conduct he outraders any influence he might have for causing thinking people, we may dismiss the subject by reprinting a comment thereon from the Springfield, Mass., Republican, which, by the way, is a gold-standard paper with Democratic tendencies, and believes in discussing the gold-silver controversy wholly on its merits, without impugning the motives or questioning the patriotism of either side. It says of Prof. White's letter:

> Assuredly, it offers nothing but unmeaning abuse for Chicago and the Democratic "lady representative from Utah." Why, for some days past we have received from various quarters, and with no hesitation, denunciations of the Democratic party, and of the free coinage of silver, from the Chicago convention, mostly from the Tribune or the Sun, of New York, which have, despite all reporting that Illinois cannot carry a full Democratic and anti-imperialistic manner, such a partisan case as an educated man and a "Doctor of Thought" to such a case is deplorable and downright.

THE'S COURSE.

"The wheel of course and fast" has received a marked illustration in the beauty of one of the general questions of the Church the past fourteen years. The fact is called to attention by the death of the late Elder Abraham H. Cannon. Less than fourteen years ago he was so called to be one of the First Presidency of Seventies. To Quorum, then, that office consisted of Henry Harriman, Horace S. Ensign, Jacob Gates, John Van Cott, William W. Taylor, Abraham H. Cannon and Seymour B. Young, the latter being appointed a week later than Elder Cannon. Now not one is living of those who were in the council when Elder Cannon was ordained, and if he had remained in the quorum he would have been the senior member of the office of his order. Since Elder Cannon's appointment to that council, seven members thereof have passed to the spirit world: Henry Harriman, Horace S. Ensign, Jacob Gates, John Van Cott, William W. Taylor, Abraham H. Cannon and John Morgan (the latter having been ordained after the death of W. W. Taylor). These indicate the changes in that one quorum only, which now stands as follows: Seymour B. Young, C. D. Fjeldsted, B. H. Roberts, George Reynolds, Jonathan G. Kimball, Heber S. Wells and Edward Stevenson.

CRETE WILL NO DOWN.

The insurrection in Crete continues. The latest advices tell of conflicts between the Turks and Christians in various places. The trouble has not yet assumed any more formidable aspect on the political horizon than a small cloud; yet as long as it is there it is a source of uneasiness, since it is impossible to foresee to what development it may lead.

The Christians on the island demand universal suffrage and the formal recognition of the Cretan flag. It is said the sultan might be induced to grant the first of these requests, but that there is no possibility that he will assent to the recognition of a flag that bears the cross instead of the crescent. The Christians, however, are in earnest, and it is thought they will not rest until they have obtained some degree of autonomy.

The insurgents are very little impressed with the joint action of Europe and say promises they may obtain, after having seen how worthless such were in the case of the Armenians, and they are therefore fully decided to pursue their own course to the utmost, notwithstanding the policy of the powers. Their representatives refuse to formulate their demands in an assembly in which Turks have a seat, because they know the Christian Turks would take advantage of the occasion sure to arise, and they have therefore asked for permission to hold a special session in which to discuss the situation and set forth their grievances. They are waiting for a reply to this petition. Should it be granted, reforms will be demanded; if not, the war will go on until victory is won or the champions of Cretan liberty silenced to death.

What makes the situation serious is the fact that Cretan autonomy would probably mean the breaking up of the Turkish empire in Europe. Something, it is generally admitted, the powers will have to face that emergency, and it would be just as well for the statesmen to study the problem with a view of finding out how that part of the sultan's dominions can be divided without causing a general fight about the spoils. With the danger of a great war removed, there would be instantaneous unanimity in Europe as to the propriety of the Cretan removing to Asia and releasing his Christian subjects in Armenia, Crete and elsewhere from intolerable bondage.

THE POPULIST CONVENTION.

On Wednesday, July 22, the Populist convention meets in St. Louis, and presents a place as distinct from those of the Republican and Democratic parties as each of these are from the other. In the Republican convention prospects it was a foregone conclusion as to who the candidate and what the financial plank of the platform would be. With the Democratic convention the completion of nominations determined in advance what would be the expressed view on the coinage question, but there was all the uncertainty that could be desired as far as the personality of the chief candidate was concerned. The Populist convention now comes, without any doubt as to what its platform will generally be, and also without any definite conclusion as to whether it will have a Populist candidate at all.

The strong sentiment among Populists to endorse the nomination of Hon. W. J. Bryan has caused some of the party to urge the Democratic nominee to decline. Should we remember Populist. It is not easy to believe that Cross who made the proposition thought that it was to be seriously considered for a moment by the national Populists, for it is very well known that the two conventions could not agree on a candidate, and that the Populists would not accept Bryan, it would be the height of audacity to him to expect the Democratic national ticket, and it would be a Populist candidate and a Populist platform against Bryan and a Populist platform against the Democratic platform, and so soon he will go before the country for the November election. Other parties may endorse and support him, but he is first and foremost the Democratic party standard-bearer.

There is a very fair prospect that the Populist convention will endorse the candidacy of Mr. Bryan; and probably this will cause a "split" in some of the party members. That would seem really hideous, to be in the fashion now-days. If such endorsement should be made, then strictly speaking there will be no Populist candidate for the presidency. Under some circumstances this might not be considered a dignified procedure; but the times at today do not present such circumstances. The great question before the country now is on the coinage of silver. A separate Populist nomination would endanger the success of the chief silver candidate, the Democratic leader. Then the proposition the Populists must face is to choose between giving the silver cause all the aid they can or preserving the individuality of party action. The latter is to a large extent a matter of personal pride. The higher attitude would be to place principle ahead of individual party consideration, and join forces on the Democratic candidate. If the Populists will do this, and unite in upholding the silver cause at the sacrifice of personal or party vanity, it will be a feather in their cap such as we not been placed there before.

It was occasion for the Republican party to name a man typical of the party idea, and from the party ranks. There is also occasion for the Democrats doing the same, and in that case heeding or remaining in the lines of the own political organization. The lines being thus tightly drawn between the great parties, it is an equally resolute action for the Populists and Silver party men to show their devotion to principle by endorsing that candidate of the two who most nearly represents their views, for in no other way is there a prospect of success at this election for the silver idea within all spheres—the free coinage of silver. Wisdom suggests that the free silver men should have but one candidate, let the "sound money" people have as many as they may.

MONEY AND TARIFF.

A reader of the News makes the request:

> Will you kindly publish the money and tariff planks in the Republican and Democratic national platforms for comparison. The Republican platform was published in our paper, and it might not be difficult to determine which was really adopted but the Democratic platform, on the issues named, was given in such uncertain and veiled terms in the dispatches, that I confess my inability to discover just what was agreed upon in the case.

Compliance with the request takes up considerable space, therefore we give the portions of the respective platforms inquired after in a separate article. The telegraphic statement of the Democratic platform, especially that relating to the tariff, was confusing. The extracts given today are taken from the respective platforms officially adopted by the conventions.

As a result of the presidential elections this fall, 447 electors will be chosen, and the votes of 224 of them will be necessary to choose the next President. Generally speaking the West and South are undecided as to voting for Bryan, and the East for McKinley. Each reader, however, can make up a table of his own, placing in the respective columns the votes of the states he believes they will be cast, remembering that the electoral vote of each state is equal in number to the total representation of that state in the two houses of Congress.

The cause of the real sufferers of the country, Johann Most, has declared in favor of the gold standard. Once more is silver to be hewed for the enemies it has made.
