IS THERE NO BALM IN GILEAD?

The Massachusetts farmers are painfully agitated over their realization of the fact that the home market is perishable, and their reasoning is that with their home market in that condition it is needless to say that eastern manufacturers, and their employes, are beginning to see the effect, not of an overstocked market, but of depreciated market values, and are long, unless that market improves, unless values largely appreciate, the manufacturer and the employe will not only rue, but smartly, indeed painfully, feel, the situation; that the capitalist, who, by the way, is an entirely distinct person from the manufacturer in most cases, will also be reached in his turn;" and they assert that a too bountiful harvest in this sentiment, judging from recent experiences, has come to be looked upon as an evil rather than a blessing. Their market is rich in real estate, but mortgages with accumulated interest and taxes consume the largest properties. The situation is growing worse year by year, and they are in a quandary what to do, hence are in a state of marked unrest. They are ready to jump any way politically that affords them a prospect of change; and that is one reason why politicians feel very insecure as whom will be the outcome of election day next November in the Old Bay State. The farmers referred to do not yet see any clear light in any political policy now proposed, and are rather inclined to the view that there is "no balm in Gilead" for the present ills that afflict the land. This view is very far from hopeful, and it must be conceded that it is shared in by a very large number of people who are watching the signs of the times and note that men's hearts are failing them for fear of that which is coming on the earth. Truly the present is a trying time for the hearts of many people in this great nation.

LESSON OF FINGREE'S RECORD.

The Springfield, Mass., Republican disapprovingly notes that the "monster of unrest is again put upon exhibition in the West by the nomination of Mayor Pingree of Detroit as the Republican candidate for governor of Michigan." It says Pingree represents in that state the same forces which Gov. Altgeld represents in Illinois; that like Altgeld, he is a man of some property, and has been an uncompromising foe to the so-called money power or of monopoly; and like Altgeld, he is a man impervious to harsh criticism, of indomitable purpose and a tremendous fighter; that in the last respect he beats the Illinois governor; for Pingree has seen the time when every local newspaper of public opinion was against him, and he has had to post bulletins on the public bill-boards to get his views before or justify his actions to the public, and yet he never quailed, and in all important cases has met with signal triumph in the end. Then it goes on to say that three times of the four in which Pingree has been elected mayor of Detroit he was opposed, and bitterly, by the press of his city without much regard to party, and by all the large corporate interests of the place; that his victory in each of those three cases came from the labor and anti-monopoly vote; that his strength with that class has been unusual, and in the wider field of state politics it has now proved to be equally great, and enabled him to beat down the opposition of the Republican state machine, of the two United States senators, and of the railroads and other large corporations, which even went so far in some cases as to attempt an organization of employes against his nomination.

The fact that Mayor Pingree is an ardent silver man and repudiates the financial plank of the Republican national platform is the base of the uneasiness in the Detroit executive, that the election of his ticket is one of the best that can be made for the encouragement of the silver forces. It says in brief that in spite of monopolies, of great corporate interests, of usual political power in favor of the gold standard which he opposes, Mayor Pingree has achieved his victories because the popular will is with him. The same forces are arrayed on the silver question; the same combination of monopolies has been arrayed against the Nebraska editor, and why not in Illinois? And what is to be gained by railing against the success of the popular will in a country dedicated to popular rule? If Pingree's record as silver means anything it is that there is yet a potent force in the will of the masses of this nation which is certain to make itself felt against the oppression of wealthy combinations.

CHEAPER COAL NOW.

For several days past the people of Salt Lake have been witnessing a "coal war." That is, one of the coal dealers from this city, Messrs. Hahn and Hemsley, determined to permit the people to have coal at a cheaper rate than currently and out the prices. Their figures were met by other dealers, and down went the rates to a point where all the dealers were selling at a loss. Individuals who had money in cash bought in a stock, and the dealers who supplied most had the heaviest deficit to make each calculation. Now the "coal war" has gone to an end.

The question of hostilities does not, however, have matters where they were before, as has been the case on previous occasions of rate cutting. In this instance the purpose of the original cut has been accomplished. The people are to have cheaper coal, under regular market prices, than ever has been the case here. The rule of "five dollar coal" for certain standards of the fuel is broken, and to all appearance permanently so. On all home coal there is made a horse coal out of twenty-five cents per ton, and the public gets the benefit and is duly grateful to those who were the means of inaugurating the change.

This reduction in the price of fuel may not be all that is desired by consumers, who hope to see the day when "four dollar coal" will be the highest standard of price, but it is as great as the dealers can make themselves at the present rate of railway tariffs. The dealer now sells on a very small margin when the cost of freight and mining is paid, and a further reduction may not be anticipated until the railway rates come down. The present cut is, however, very acceptable, and will come as a public benefit in hard times of money stringency and low prices in other markets. The News, which has no other interest in the matter than the welfare of the community, congratulates Messrs. Hahn and Hemsley, and the public generally, on the result of the fight instituted by the firm named.

LI HUNG CHANG'S VISIT.

It seems there is some worry in government circles about the visit to this country of China's famous representative Li Hung Chang, because of the scarcity of funds available for his entertainment. He comes as an extraordinary ambassador and is the bearer of a personal letter from the emperor of China to President Cleveland, and he should be received in a manner worthy of this nation, not too much in contrast with the display made by the European countries or has been claiming. But it been known early enough that he would come to the United States, Congress might have been asked for an appropriation. As it is the only resource is to the extraordinary fund of the state department, which is believed not to exceed $5,000. That this is an unfortunate circumstance may be judged from the fact that the importance the distinguished Oriental is likely to form of the country undoubtedly will expand largely on the display made in his behalf.

Originally the intention of Li Hung Chang was to remain in the United States long enough to form an idea of the country's industries and its people. He is particularly interested in shipbuilding plants, as China intends strengthening her navy. But it seems that during his stay in England his plans have been changed, and he will hurry through this sentiment. It is stated that efforts in China have suddenly assumed such an aspect that his presence there is indispensable for the well-being of the empire, but that other influences have been at work causing this change in the program to be impromptu. His visit to this country being brief, it is all the more important that it should be made present as well as profitable. This country ought to be able to compete with others in the construction of ships for China, and the opportunity of securing orders should not be lost.

RAILWAY LAW DECISIONS.

The decision of Judge Wolverton, of the United States circuit court, made at San Francisco, Cal., Tuesday, in the case of the Atlantic and Pacific railway vs. the United States, is of the morning importance to railway companies. Congress granted to the road, in aid of its construction, a certain number of acres of land, and the railway company claimed that the government should pay for the transportation of troops, mails, etc., over the road, at the rates fixed by the act of congress granting the land, while the government claimed that the road was to be considered as a military road, and that the government was entitled to use it without any charge whatever. The court decided that the railway was not entitled to more than the government paid, for the reason that the latter had the right to fix the amount. The effect of this decision is to authorize the government officials to withhold from corporations in which it is interested any money that may be found due the road for services rendered, and to apply it to the payment of the claim of the government against the road. This will be a very important decision, if it stands as the law of the land, and it will undoubtedly be taken up by the railway companies interested, which are and the Union Pacific, Central Pacific, Kansas Pacific, Denver Pacific, Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railway and Navigation companies, and the Atlantic and Pacific.
