THE COURTS TODAY.

Judges Merrill and Barich Make Some Short Orders.

PROBATE MATTERS ON HEARING.

A Suit in Replevin Arising Out of Two Sets of Harness.—Other Items.

There was next to nothing done in the Third district court this morning. Both judges—Merrill and Barich—went upon the bench for ten minutes or so, and what they did may be summed up briefly, as follows:

In the case of the Williams-Haywood Shoe Co., of Omaha, vs Frank Rasmussen, an order was entered appointing Judge McKay as referee on supplementary proceedings, with authority to report findings of facts and conclusions of law. The hearing was set for August 15th.

Abel Benedict et al vs Morris Levy et al. Same order as above.

Edward Stevenson vs Wm. Dittfield et al. Default and judgment entered on complaint and cross-complaint as prayed. Decree of foreclosure; attorney's fee $100.

W. H. Irvine vs C. W. Allbach et al. Motion to set aside default and judgment of Wm. H. Rowe argued. Order made staying execution for ten days.

BEFORE JUDGE BARICH.

Harriet T. Scott vs John D. Shaffer et al. Demurrer withdrawn by consent; five days to answer.

Susie Bacon vs L. D. Kinney et al., and G. M. Arnold vs A. G. Hollister et al. The order previously made setting these cases for trial on Aug. 17th was now set aside, on motion of the defendant.

Today's Probate Court.

Estate of Elizabeth Willes, deceased. Hearing on petition for letters of administration. Wm. J. Willes appointed administrator on filing a bond of $4,200.

Estate and guardianship of Elizabeth M. Fairbourne, a minor. Hearing on petitions for letters of guardianship. Mrs. Eliza A. Fairbourne appointed guardian on filing a bond in the sum of $700.

NOT DECIDED YET.

Commissioner McNally will probably render decisions tomorrow morning in the two cases tried in his court yesterday—the one concerning the "Garden theatre" and the other in the damage suit brought against Dr. Hewitt, for knocking a man down with his buggy.

A STORY OF SOME HARNESS.

The court room to the Eagle block in which Commissioner McNally dispenses justice has been converted into a sort of small harness store today during the hearing of a suit in replevin, in which Israel Evans is the plaintiff and Commissioner Wm. Harkins the defendant. The former is represented by Attorney John M. Cannon and the latter by Attorney Greaves.

The action is brought to recover two sets of harness or their value, which is placed at $60, together with $50 damages and costs. The case really springs out of a share of grand larceny brought against a worthless fellow named Orme, who is now in the city jail awaiting the grand jury's action. A large quantity of harness has been stolen from a number of persons in the neighborhood, and Orme confessed to having stolen the sets now in question, among others, and sold them to Harkins. He stated where the property was to be found, and there sure enough it was. But Harkins denies Orme's statement, and because of his refusal to surrender the harness, the plaintiff has instituted these replevin proceedings.

A RAILROAD TICKET EXPOSE.

A System of Profitable Jugglery Nipped in the Bud.

Union Pacific tickets have been sold at cut rates, but it is a question says the San Francisco Chronicle of the 29th inst. whether the cut was sanctioned by the Union Pacific or came out of the commission of the agent who sold the tickets. The expose of the cut created quite a sensation in local railroad circles yesterday, and among the agents along Montgomery street very little else was talked about all day. A rate war has been built on a more fragile foundation, and as a natural consequence the agent who sold the tickets has been perspiring copiously ever since the news of the expose reached his ears.

It is said that C. H. Speers, assistant general passenger agent of the Santa Fe system, issued six second-class tickets from San Francisco to New York, and one second-class ticket to Chicago, to be purchased from the Union Pacific agent. The regular price of a second-class ticket to New York is $68.50. The six tickets were purchased at $53 each, a cut of $15.50 on each ticket. The regular price of a second-class ticket to Chicago is $52.50, and the ticket which Mr. Speers obtained was secured for $40, a cut of $12.50. After the purchase it is said that the tickets were taken to the Southern Pacific company and redeemed at the full tariff rate, making the Union Pacific a loser to the amount of the cut and the purchaser of the tickets a winner to the same sum. The laugh is on D. W. Hitchcock, local agent of the Union Pacific.

The tickets were not purchased from Mr. Hitchcock. Robert Cazelle, local agent of the North German Lloyd steamship company, was the informed person who sold the tickets. He sold tickets for the Union Pacific and other routes as occasion arose. The six tickets to New York referred to were over the Central Pacific, Union Pacific, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and the Baltimore and Ohio. When confronted with the proof Mr. Cazelle did not deny that he sold the tickets at a cut rate, but he said that the cut comes out of his commission. The other local agents in town denied the assertion, and say that the tickets could not be sold at a cut of $15.50 without the sanction of the Union Pacific. They argue that $15.50 cannot be deducted from a commission of $2.75 and leave the agent much of a margin. The only circumstances under which a cut could be made, it is said, would be in pursuance of directions from the general office of the road, and that would be a gross violation of the agreement that binds the transcontinental roads to maintain rates.

AMUSEMENTS.

SEWING THE WIND—Mr. Frohman's ideal company, with all the prestige of the name of the Empire Theater, the prestigious run of its prize play at the home house and in Chicago, and the names of Henry Miller and Viola Allen to stand back of it—drew only a six hundred dollar audience at the theater last evening. Nothing could better illustrate the fact that theater goers, along with all other users, have felt the hardness of the times; a short time ago, such an attraction as this, at advanced prices, would have opened to a twelve to fourteen hundred dollar house, and that standard would have loomed out little during the other nights of the engagement. We believe if popular prices had been accorded on the visit as a special concession to the Banyard stringency of the times—that the results would have been at least 25 per cent better than they were last night. But Mr. Frohman is one of those managers to whom "prestige" comes first and box office second; he would rather play to a fewer number at a greater price than bring up an overwhelming audience which only paid the same rates that are charged by the ordinary traveling variety show. Prestige is everything to Frohman. "My dear sir, Lorenzo" is his motto, and the few dollars he may drop in their lairs are as nothing compared with the pride and glory of being able to say at the end of a season that his stock company had never cut prices in a single town, no matter how adverse the circumstances.

There can be no manner of doubt that Mr. Frohman, in Sewing the Wind, provides us with an attraction well worth all that is charged for it. Play, players, scenery, costumes and stage settings, combine up an exquisite and perfect a dramatic whole. Last evening, as ever our theater goers gazed upon, and new things that were ever presented before them were received with more genuine demonstrations of delight and deep feeling. The author, Clyde Fitch, took in the form of numerous triple calls, and the exquisite curtain at the close would have seen another, but for the fact that the moving and thrilling finish left people absolutely too much unstrung and effort to indulge in anything that seemed so commonplace as the clapping of hands. One rather wanted to go away and think over the powerful lessons of the play in silence, than to stay and shout over the delineation. The play illustrates very markedly what was noted by Lucy Wintermere's Fan—the departure from old standards and conventional ones that is now being taken by the leading dramatists of the day. Like that play, too, it is one that, by the unthinking, will be called immoral, but only by the unthinking—those who regard the English between an immoral subject, and a subject immorally treated. The truth is that plays like this work a lesson to women in terms wide enough to reach them aright. The title of Sewing the Wind almost tells its character, perhaps a better title would have been "Reaping the Whirlwind" since it is the reaping that is all done before the story opens, and the begins to watch the play treats; still another fitting title, and one that conveys well the idea of the play, would have been "Thistles of the Fathers" throughout, the play incites the lesson that sin is no even pardoned sooner or later, and that the innocent as well as the guilty are made to suffer its consequences.

Mr. Miller and Miss Allen have often before been placed in Omaha's juxtaposition, the most notable instances of their joint work in the minds of Salt Lakers, being when they played the lovers in Held By the Enemy several seasons ago; but practically nothing in either of their careers has taken better form or more thoroughly stamps them as artists, than their achievements as the father and daughter in Mr. Gravely's admirable play. Mr. Miller opened the play and will there be deprived in the words of the Sun he would have received but he been given an encore. The grand curtain calls he got later, however, were an ample recompense. Miss Allen had a warm reception, and she fully sustained the personal triumph of Mr. Miller. As a sophisticated maid, in a gamut of the two IV period, he looked admirable, and the fact that he so well threw of his juvenility of style and merged himself so thoroughly to his character, into thoroughly of the money he has obtained over his art. Mr. Thompson is a character actor and often seen out this way, nothing would be more artistic than his delineation of the city and legislature old admitted of the play, and he got the warmest sort of tribute to a stage villain—a round of applause after one of his exits. Mr. Crompton, as the blundering, but faithful, old friend was squarely admirable, and in grief where he learns of all the troubles his mistaken zeal has caused, was very touching. Mr. Fatzenmus made an excellent lover. Mr. Eaton as the horsey sport was one of the best sustained characters of the night. Miss Irving was thoroughly charming as the country-bred lassie. Miss Robson, as her sophisticated mother equally excellent, and Miss Reynolds and Mr. Harkins contributed two excellent bits as the attorney and the attendant. The scenery and the costuming were most beautiful throughout. Prof. Cathcart added to the pleasure of the evening by a good rendition of Mr. Dayne's new lively melody Boss march, which, however, might not be done so on closing piece. When it is lost in the confusion of seeking the side scenes.

Sewing the Wind goes again tonight and tomorrow night. Liberty Hall and The Conductor's Wife will be done on the return visit to Omaha, and introduce the other members of the company.

OUR CLOCK turned people away from the Empire last evening, the house having intelligent expensive running out to Iowa. Manager O'Malley and repeat a heavy week's business.

Happenings at Tooele.

From the Transcript: Funeral of the land boys, with others, over a little week of love and duty on Sunday at the funeral of Lizzie Green, felt depressed and lazy, and in consequence resolved to run down to the mill and take a bath in the pond. Whether any of them went with suicidal intent is not known, but it came near being a funeral with one of our of them. A certain young man attempted to cross the pond, but not being able to swim very well, called for help as he was about to go under. Others swam to his assistance and had a narrow escape from drowning. They were badly frightened, and as one of them remarked, "it served us right for going there on Sunday." It is a matter of congratulation that no fatalities have to be recorded.

The Tooele County Teachers' Educational Association will be held during the last week of the summer school, so as to have the benefit of a lecture from Prof. Stewart. It will probably meet on Saturday, August 11th. Also, it is hoped the convenience of the teachers, the regular examination will be held during the week following the Summer school.

To all appearance fruit of almost every kind will be plentiful and of standard quality in Tooele. Trees are well laden and no worms are visible as yet, which is probably due to spraying. Apricots are now ripe enough for the housewife to put down fresh.

The Juvenile Gem.

Prof. Stephens says that fully one thousand children attended the Juvenile Choir rehearsal yesterday afternoon, and that great enthusiasm prevailed over their coming reunion at Saltair.

OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, JULY 31, 1894.

Official Changes.

The dispatch received here yesterday from Washington in which was stated that G. H. Islesb had received the appointment of postmaster of Ogden City announced General Kinkaid, whose time expired last December, and that Achilles Perrin had been appointed to the position of private secretary to succeed Judge Bishop, whose time does not expire until February next, is a leading topic of conversation. A change has been looked for and expected in the position, but the change in the certain judgeship was unexpected and came as a great surprise. Mr. G. H. Islesb was not surprised, neither was General Kinkaid, at the Stockmaster change. Mr. Perrin, also seemed not to be most surprised, and of course expressed himself as being much pleased. While it is believed by all that the appointment of Mr. Islesb will be confirmed immediately, there is considerable speculation concerning Mr. Perrin owing to the term of Judge Bishop not expiring until February next.

An A. R. U. Petition.

From the fact that numerous proceedings have been carried upon the Southern Pacific railroad by Presiding Attorney Judd, in which the wages of the strikers were sequestrated in the injunction suit, are attached with the object of securing the payment of costs of said case, the strikers put a petition into circulation yesterday in which they set forth that every person in sympathy with the working man contribute some amount to the aid of A. R. U. strikers in Oswald county, inasmuch as their wages were sequestrated, to continue their boycott on Mr. Pullman until they might yet be successful in gaining the strike.

A considerable amount of money and a long list of names are being gathered in by them.

Notes.

Thirteen indictments were returned by the grand jury yesterday.

Albert Dixon was assessed $100 yesterday by Judge Miner for unlawful cohabitation.

Officer Pender went to Salt Lake this morning on business connected with the Bill commission.

The two Chinamen arrested near Ogden bridge while seining fish from the river, by Deputy Lawyer yesterday, will have a hearing this morning.

At a meeting of the city council last night Councilman Stewart tendered in his resignation, which was accepted.

The running expenses of the city for the coming year now amount to $100,000, which means a tax of 45 per cent from last year.

She Would Benefit.

Here is an advertisement from the Australasian: "If Heber Farnum, my husband, does not return and support me within three months from this date I intend to remarry. Phoebe Emilie Lyhott."

Reno (Nevada) Journal: Reno is fast gaining a reputation as a health resort. In less than a week no less than six families have arrived, having at least one member in such bodily in search of health. They have come here for this purpose alone, having been advised to locate here, at least for a time. Three of the parties are from the beautiful city of Oakland, where many invalids go from the invalids and neighboring cities, claiming that Oakland can of no doubt to this respect, yet residents of that city are fearful of the health-giving properties of our climate. The reputation of Reno in this particular is spreading, and every one who goes from here benefited will assist the good work.
