THE SEWER QUESTION.

A Rousing Ordinance.—Indifferent City Councilmen.

The meeting of the City Council yesterday afternoon as a board of equalization and review on sewer assessment was a complete failure, no business being transacted. It is the universal opinion that there is something radically wrong throughout the public sewer department.

At 4 o'clock Rich moved a roll call, and as there were but seven members present, Folland moved an adjournment.

Loofbourow suggested that the council had better adjourn to a special time, far enough away to allow the recorder to give the necessary five days' notice of the meeting through the papers.

Harry contended that it was useless to spend the money of the city by again publishing the call for the meeting. The members of the council had been given ample notice of this meeting and all the advertisements that might be published would not make the members attend if they did not want to do so. In the first place, money had been spent for an advertisement announcing that the board of equalization of five persons would act on a certain day. This was found to be illegal. Then the present meeting was called. This should be deemed good and sufficient notice. It was nearly time the members of the Council seriously considered the idea of attending meetings when called. For himself he had a business to attend to, as had other members. He was willing, however, to come whenever a meeting was called, and he thought it the duty of the other members to be prompt in responding to the calls made upon them. There had been a great deal of dilatoriness that should not be tolerated, and he hoped that the Black Maria and the city marshal would be sent after absentees in the future and thus compel their attendance.

At this juncture Deputy Marshal Raleigh, who had been on a quiet hunt for the absentees, returned and reported that none of them could be found and the motion to adjourn until next Thursday at 2 o'clock carried.

The districts to be considered are as follows:

On First South, between Fifth and Eighth East, $1,372.50.

On Fifth South, between East and West Temple, $2,[illegible].

On First South, between Second and Fifth East, $11,[illegible].

On Third West, between North Temple and Fifth South, $11,[illegible].

On Fifth East, between South Temple and First South, $[illegible].

Court Items.

The following matters transpired after the News went to press yesterday afternoon.

Pamelia A. Edmonds brought suit against the Salt Lake City railroad company in the Third District court, and demands $25,000 damages for injuries received from being thrown from one of defendant's cars in this city on June 1st of the present year. The plaintiff alleges that she was lawfully upon defendant's car on the above date en route to Beautiful, and that while she was alighting at the intersection of Main and First South streets the car started forward suddenly and she was thrown violently to the ground, sustaining injuries of a most serious nature; that the accident thus sustained was due to the carelessness and negligence of the defendant's conductor, and she therefore prays for judgment against the defendant in the above sum and for costs of suit.

The case of C. B. Dard vs. A. G. Paddock et al. came before Justice Laubrie yesterday afternoon and after being heard was taken under advisement until next Thursday. The plaintiff's claim is $[illegible], which he alleges is due from the defendant for merchandise.

John Long has filed an action in Commissioner Moyer's court against the York Mining company to collect $[illegible] as principal and interest on a promissory note.

Commissioner Moyer has been served with a notice of appeal to the Third District from his decision in the case of William Burke vs. George Budd which was tried before him recently. A horse which had been sold for a feed bill was the subject of contention and the commissioner rendered judgment in favor of the defendant.

W. H. Schuler, E. Davis and L. Jasimer, barbers, were before Commissioner Pratt yesterday afternoon on a charge of doing business on Sunday. All pleaded guilty and were each fined $[illegible] and costs—$[illegible] each. The barbers claimed they had no desire to work on Sunday, but the proprietor of the Hotel Knutsford had said that the shop must be kept open on that day, and they had no alternative but to submit.

When the Housewife Returns.

Without realizing it our housewife is ready to undo all the good gleaned from the summer's outing, writes Helen Jay in her timely article on "Getting Home from the Country," in the September Ladies' Home Journal. It is a characteristic of the average American woman to be rather pitiless in her treatment of herself. After the weeks during which she attempted nothing in the way of exercise save a walk now and then, she too often rushes into a perfect hurricane of work. She cleans the house from garret to cellar, renovates the wardrobes of the children and gets them in readiness for school, and then preserves and pickles every accessible atom of vegetable growth. As a result, if she escapes a severe illness, she quickly loses the vitality and enthusiasm which should have been her stock in trade for the entire winter. By following the wise old adage and "making haste slowly," she can set her house in order, take care of herself, and with it all see well to the ways of her household.

A Wise Selfishness.

A mother does spend herself too freely for her children when she gives up her own rights to them, affirms herself as that they [illegible] recognize her superior station, makes it difficult for them to "honor" her, as the Fourth Commandment demands that they shall, writes Elizabeth Sewell in her helpful department in the September Ladies' Home Journal.

It is a wise selfishness that makes the mother insist upon keeping her proper place in the family as the crown and centre of home, tenderly loving her children, serving them in all legitimate ways, but seeing that they take their fair share of the burdens of life, instead of weakly bearing them herself.

PATHWAYS THROUGH LIFE.

RECREATIONS OF GREAT MEN.

THEY SEEM TO BE ACTUATED GENERALLY AS ARE ORDINARY HUMAN BEINGS.

I hardly need mention Mr. Gladstone, says a writer in Hygiene. Who has not heard of the grand old man's woodcutting exploits? Among the famous devotees of the rod and line may be noted Walton, Herbert, Paley and Dryden—the latter quite celebrated for his fishing parties. Thomas Wharton, author of "The History of Modern Poetry," was often to be found drinking in taverns, a taste which he shared with Turner, the painter. Charles Lamb was an admirer of London, and never wearied of wandering about the streets. Without London he considered that life would scarcely be worth living; he "would not exchange the dullest, dreariest alley for the shadow of Harrelyn." Johnson was another eulogist of the metropolis, and it was down Fleet street that he took his daily walk, which, owing to the series of tasks he made compulsory on himself, was a really curious performance. First, every post required to be touched as he passed it; next, it was a point of honor to step exactly in the middle of each paving slab; and lastly, as he approached his destination a series of graduated strides had to be employed in order to reach the door with one particular foot. Goldsmith, the statesman, spent much of his spare time in the cockpit. Pope, like William III., was fond of landscape gardening. Prior, one of our best minor poets, whiled away his evenings at a low public house in Long Acre, chatting with an old soldier and his sweetheart. Bolingbroke, when at his country seat, Bloomsfield, translated himself from a politician into an enthusiastic farmer, and "the reader"—here I quote from a work by Jane Austen—"may smile as he recognizes the ardor, the correctness, the lavish gravity of the political speeches in letters which discuss the merits of carrots in fattening porkers and the precise degree to which they should be [illegible]."

Wordsworth, Dickens and Longfellow were immense pedestrians. Wordsworth did the major part of his writing in the open air. A visitor who asked to see the poet's study was shown a small room, the home of a few tattered books. "This," said the servant maid, "is master's library, but his study is out of doors."

Dickens liked the sights of a London walk, and was also fond of a tramp on the sea downs. Carlyle invariably covered several miles before beginning work, and enjoyed riding inside an omnibus, while Victor Hugo preferred the outside. No weather could detain Buckle from his fifteen minutes constitutional before breakfast, and Macaulay was likewise a great walker, always accompanied, however, by a volume of some sort. Shelley used to sail paper boats on the Serpentine, and took as much interest as a child in their safety. Sir Walter Scott's chief pursuits were riding and coursing, his dogs and he appear in the same piece of sculpture, testifying to his habits. Later in life he patronized gardening, in which the American historian, Bancroft, has since borne him company. Milton sought relaxation in the companionship of the "pealing organ," and Byron amused himself by shooting at a piece of money fixed in a stick, and practiced this more persistently than he ever did anything else. Of present celebrities Mr. Chamberlain is an amateur horticulturist, Sir John Lubbock passes the dying months studying his ants and bees, Mr. Black enjoys yachting among the Hebrides, and many of the nobility have a pronounced fancy for horse-racing.

THAT BALEFUL LONDON FOG.

MISERY WHICH ACCOMPANIES AND FOLLOWS ITS APPEARANCE.

[Fortnightly Contemporary Review.]

It is not necessary to describe the misery of a London fog to any one who has been compelled to reside in the metropolis during a few days of its prevalence. The painful irritation to the eyes, the choking sensation in the chest, together with the general depression of spirits and many other ailments, are the lesser sufferings that few who are exposed to it escape. But it is not yet realized what an amount of serious illness or how many deaths one week of London fog causes. It may be accepted that every ten days of this terrible visitation kills 2,000 people, and if we calculate nine serious cases of illness to each death we have 20,000 people laid upon beds of sickness.

To a certain extent the cold that always prevails during these dense fogs may be credited with a portion of this sickness, but not to any great extent, as neither fog nor cold in country places produces any such change in the death rate. There can be little doubt that the extreme discomfort, as well as the deadliness of the London fogs, arises from the poisonous gases with which the damp air gets saturated, and increasingly so the longer the fog lasts. The smoke which gives the fog its yellow appearance and is so dirty and unpleasant, is not injurious, being only carbon; probably, indeed, it prevents the poisonous gases from doing more harm.

The fog, it is needless to say, is caused by atmospheric conditions which keep the lower stratum of the air comparatively stationary and prevent smoke from rising as it ordinarily does, even when there is no wind to move it. Consequently the air in our streets remains, to a great extent, unchanged during the prevalence of a thick fog, but it by no means remains in the same state, for the gas generated in the 2,000 miles of sewers is rising through the "grates" and mixing with the air, which is also being polluted by the exhalations from the millions of men and animals that live in the metropolis.

It is difficult to realize how foul must be the condition of the air Londoners breathe after two or three days of fog, and the wonder is not that so many are sick and so many die, but that so few do so. The poisonous fog so deteriorates the vigor of life that, in addition to its directly injurious influence, it renders the system incapable of resisting the cold. To prevent these fogs seems impossible; the draining of marsh land would possibly do something to mitigate them; the discontinuance of the use of open fires, or the general use of smokeless fuel, would make them less unpleasant, but they would remain as poisonous as ever.

Dotted about all over Britain there are somewhere about 2,000 observers who send up to London periodical reports of weather experience on hills and in valleys, on moors and heaths, in towns and villages.

LEGAL NOTICE.

In Probate Court in and for Salt Lake County, Territory of Utah.

In the matter of the Estate of Jonathan Westerman, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT [illegible] Westerman, executrix of the estate of Jonathan Westerman, deceased, has rendered for settlement, and filed in said Court, her final account of her administration of said estate and petition for final distribution of the residue of said estate among the persons entitled thereto, and that Thursday, the [illegible] day of August, A. D. 1892, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court Room of said Court, in the County Court House, Salt Lake City and County, Utah Territory, has been duly appointed by the Judge of said Court, for the settlement of said account and hearing said petition for distribution, at which time and place any person interested in said estate may appear and show cause, if any there be, why said account should not be settled and approved and final distribution made as prayed for.

Dated August [illegible], 1892.

E. E. ALLEN, Clerk of the Probate Court.
By [illegible], Jr., Deputy.

LEGAL NOTICE.

In the Probate Court of the County of Salt Lake, Territory of Utah.

In the matter of the estate and guardianship of Horace E. Gillett, Minor.

Order to show cause why order of Sale of Real Estate should not be made.

CELESTIA A. GILLETT, THE GUARDIAN of the person and estate of Horace E. Gillett, Minor, having filed her petition herein, duly verified, praying for an order of sale of the real estate of said minor, for the purposes therein set forth, it is hereby ordered that the next of kin of the said minor and all persons interested in the estate of said minor, appear before the said Probate Court on Tuesday, the [illegible] day of August, 1892, at [illegible] in the forenoon of said day, at the Court Room of said Probate Court, at the County Court House, in the city and county of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said guardian to sell so much of the real estate of the said minor at private sale as shall be necessary, and that a copy of this order be published at least four successive weeks in the DESERET EVENING NEWS, a newspaper printed and published in said city and county.

Dated July [illegible], 1892.

E. W. BARTCH, Probate Judge.
