FIRST FLIRTATION.

"Mamma, have you any objection to my receiving the attention of that young gentleman who danced with me at last evening's hop?" inquired Edith Gray as she looked out of the window at the Ocean House, whither for the first time in her life she had arrived.

"Objection, my dear! I know nothing about the person you speak of."

"Why, ma, don't you remember Mr. Rodolphus McGilvery, the gentleman with long, flowing, black hair and a bronze face? I say that dip I came here, just before you went away, he asked to be introduced to me. He is of Scottish descent, and is making the tour of the United States. Well, in a very familiar manner he said to me: 'Miss Edith—can I be so bold as to call you so?' I shall wish to monopolize your society while I am here. I am fond of young ladies.' I had a sister once who strongly resembled you. That word on my lot between her decease.' And he wiped his eyes and looked so affectionately toward me, ma, I began to love him at once."

"Why, Edith, you should not indulge in such strong expressions! Remember you are a young lady and know but little of the world. You should be cautious, dear, about accepting attentions from strangers. Many a young girl has been duped by their falseness."

"Ma, I never saw such a doubting person as you are! What earthly motive could have induced him to have asserted such a thing unless it were true? There he is rising from his seat. I will run and ask him to come to our room."

"No, Edith. You must not be too forward. I tell you." But Edith waved her little hand for his approach, and he came into the hall, and there stood, awaiting her to join him.

Archness and thoughtless, she ran to him and began narrating all her late conversation, and after pressing Mr. Rodolphus McGilvery to go and see her mother he reluctantly consented to do so.

Upon entering the room he was the picture of smiles and the genus personified, so bland in conversation, so delicate in remarks, so apparently diffident, yet resolute, that Mrs. Bilthe did not wonder her daughter was fascinated.

The interview was a long one and ended in a full disclosure of the object for which he came to this country, indirectly keeping in view all the while that money was no consideration with him, his father having just died and left his sole heir to a princely fortune; that he sole pined for sympathy and companionship, and, as Edith so strongly resembled him of his deceased sister, he perhaps had ventured too far in endeavoring to gain the friendly regard of one young and innocent heart in a strange land.

These thoughts being uttered in a most winning accent, all combined with Mrs. Bilthe, and she ventured so far as to add that "if during their sojourn they could do anything to minister to his comfort they would most cheerfully perform it." And Edith was in ecstasy that she had thus won over her mother to become interested in Mr. Rodolphus McGilvery.

They rode and they walked with the Scotch gentleman and eventualized, as their intimacy increased, of taking a trip with him to his native country. To say that he essentially contributed to their enjoyment while at this watering place was not enough. He made Edith feel a kind of happiness she had never experienced before.

What did she care for that staid young man, Mr. Lester, from New York, or Mr. Fry, the rich bachelor who had promised Mr. Bilthe to extend his wife and daughter to his abonnet? It was certainly very ill timed and impertinent in the latter to inquire what they knew of the character of the gentleman with whom they were so intimately connected after he had told them so minutely his personal history. Truly, Mrs. Bilthe, you are as easily satisfied and as credulous as your daughter.

Mr. Fry, however, took it upon himself to ascertain authentically whether the statements made by Mr. Rodolphus were strictly true. He addressed a letter to a mercantile house in New York upon which he professed to draw for money, and found they were ignorant of the existence of such a man. He addressed another to Count Zeiland, whom he said he knew intimately, and was answered that he "never so much as heard of the gentleman in question." So that when convinced of the falsity of two asserventions, he began to distrust all others, which surely paralled and wound Mrs. Bilthe and her daughter.

When in the heyday of apparent triumph, having secured the affections of an artless girl, having flirted and danced in the substance of fashionable life, suddenly Mr. Rodolphus McGilvery disappeared, leaving the landlord with his unpaid bill, and at the livery stable a large unliquidated account "for sundry drives about the suburbs," in which Mrs. Bilthe and Edith had participated, and, worse than all, leaving a young and guileless heart to feel the chagrin which always attends an unsuccessful flirtation.

Mrs. Bilthe and her daughter now willingly accepted the protection of that estimable gentleman, Mr. Fry, whose inquiries unhesitatingly gave the walking ticket to the Scotch gentleman, and telling us they did that his protestations of regard were sincere, Edith was never questioned by her mother how far or how fast Mr. Fry had proposed.

"Who is the reigning married belle of the season at the Ocean House?" I inquired upon my arrival the same evening.

"A Mrs. Fry from New York," was the reply. "She is truly lovely, and her countenance and manners are faultless. Besides she has a most fascinating man for a husband."

I guessed at the belle as she entered the dining hall. It was she who one year ago hung upon the arm of that disgraced McGilvery, and I thanked heaven that no bright and beauteous being had escaped the snares which adorn her first and last flirtation.—New York News.

A Desirable Primula.

The sketch here reproduced from American Gardening shows the Primula stellata, gem of the last of recent introductions to the primula family. The plant is described as of compact habit. The foliage is very dark purple, the flowers are pure white, about three fourths of an inch in diameter, produced in tiers one above the other, reaching 20 inches in height. The seed should be sown in April to get good sized plants and given a little more sun than is usual for Primula sinensis.

The Primula stellata is suggested also as an ornament for the amateur's window. In long flowering qualities especially recommend it for this purpose. The Primula stellata is not a new species, but is a developed strain of Primula sinensis.

Opera Glasses.

A hint to is conceivable the use of the opera glasses which are supplied in most of the theaters or concerts on a small fee is worthy of attention. It has been proved beyond doubt by oculists that these opera glasses are a most serious medium for spreading contagious diseases of the eye, and it is well therefore to be careful how we use them.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the physiological laws governing healthy physical life, which vanish before proper effort, gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many diseases and sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get the benefit of its effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the future, instead of good health, and the spirits in regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the care of physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well informed, everywhere, the Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

SUMMONS.

In the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the State of Utah, County of Salt Lake.

G. R. Bothwell and R. E. McCarnahy, copartners as Bothwell & McCarnahy, Plaintiffs, vs.
Hugh A. Arnold and F. G. Young, Defendants.

The State of Utah sends greeting to Hugh A. Arnold and F. G. Young, defendants:

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED TO APPEAR in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the State of Utah, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within twenty days after the service on you of this summons, if served within the county, or, if served out of said county, but in this district, within twenty days, or within within forty days if served out of this district, and in case you fail so to do, judgment will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint.

The said action is brought to have judgment against the defendant Hugh A. Arnold for the principal and interest thereon on a note for $1,000 for coal received by said defendant, on the 16th day of August, 1895, signed Angus C. Gillies, and on August 21, 1895, he paid September 1, 1895, and $30 paid October 1, 1895, and for his attorney's fees and costs of suit, alleged to be due from the defendant Hugh A. Arnold, upon a certain promissory note, executed by the said defendant Arnold, to the plaintiffs, on the 16th day of June, 1896, for the sum of $[illegible], due in one year after date, with interest thereon at the rate of 1 per cent per annum; the same being due and payable, and has not been paid, and on which no interest has been paid, being secured by a mortgage on certain real estate, duly executed, acknowledged, recorded in the proper office, and which said note and mortgage were duly assigned to the plaintiffs, to the said Angus C. Gillies, and the defendants are the lawful owners and holders of said note and mortgage, and the said Angus C. Gillies assigns the above named defendant, Hugh A. Arnold, and the said defendant Hugh A. Arnold, to have the usual reciprocity, and for the foreclosure of the said mortgage, and the sale of said premises, satisfying the proceeds of said sale, and the said defendant, the amount found due by this court, and the costs of this suit, and the costs and expenses of the sale, that defendants, and all persons claiming from, or under them, be forever barred and foreclosed of all claims or equity of redemption in said premises, and every part thereof; that said premises be decreed to be sold, and the said defendant, Hugh A. Arnold, for any deficiency that may remain, be adjudged to pay the same, and that the said plaintiffs have such other and further relief in the premises as to this court may seem meet and equitable.

Said premises are described as follows: Lots 1 and 2 in Block 3, Plat "A" Salt Lake City survey, and the same are situated in Central Park subdivision of Lots 1, 2 and 3 in Block 3, Plat "A" Salt Lake City survey, Same being situate in Salt Lake City, Salt Lake County, Utah.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the complaint filed herein as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness the Honorable Judges, and the seal of the District Court of the Third Judicial District, in and for the State of Utah, this 5th day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven.
