SHE DOESN'T WANT MUSIC.

A POOR WOMAN'S HOME SUGGESTS OF AN EMPTY MILLIONAIRE.

One of the richest men living, whose immense wealth makes him a target for poor people, has recently been in Paris, and the way in which he repelled one of the applicants on his government is related (the tale) thus:

On the opposite side of the hotel table sat a woman who had evidently seen hard times.

"Monsieur," said she, "you Englishmen are so rich—so—so ready to assist those in distress."

"Yes," said the man of wealth, beaming. He had heard that before and thought he knew what was coming.

"Would you, with your generosity, do me a very kind and great kindness?"

"Yes, madam; that is, if anyone else—"

"Think well, monsieur, before you promise, for it is a great kindness."

The tones of the same old song he had heard many times before from parties who wanted a dollar.

"I am afraid, madam, that I shall have to—but what is your wish?"

"Only that you would be kind enough, monsieur, to pass me the mustard. You have everything at your side of the table."—Hornsby.

A SAD STATE OF SOCIETY.

COUNT DOLGIG THINKS THAT THINGS ARE BETTER IN AMERICA THAN ELSEWHERE.

In the London Standard is given an authentic account of an interesting interview which a Russian journalist has had with Count Leo Tolstoi.

The journalist had ventured approach the count of his interview and stated that the theme of conversation he wished to start would be "the vicious tendency of society," or briefly, "inborn sin," and the count consented to give his ideas on the subject as follows: "Suppose for a moment," said he, "that six tigers had been brought to a solid iron cage to some menagerie in the government of Tula. Go on to suppose that the beasts had broken loose and spread over the plot so and terror, attacking the inhabitants. Natural, yes. If these six tigers were killed or caught and shut up again in their cages, the member would be at an end. Some people seem to think that the case of vicious men is similar, in which they are altogether mistaken. Vicious human beings are not tigers in Tula, but wolves—wolves which regularly breed there and have done so for generations, and which it is absolutely impossible to exterminate."

"You go pretty deep, Count——

"I believe that if I find that in my own house flies are breeding it would be strange for me to try and catch those insects one by one. A much simpler way is to clean out all the dirt and rot from the house, and the flies will die; poor of themselves."

"And what have you to say, count, of the rapid development of the vicious tendency which is to be observed now even in the most cultivated society?"

"It is due to the absence of good sense and of love. I consider the cultured society of today, as you call it, as something abnormal. Common sense has lost its testing there, and, as for love, it is conspicuous for its absence. It is very sad. 'Inland sin' (says volta) leads to gruesome consequences, especially because it is never possible to define the point to which it is many to manifest itself or the victims predestined for it. If a dying horse in the street lashes out in spasms, any passer by may fall under his heel."

"You say a 'dying horse?'"

"A 'dying' or raging or boiling. It is all the same. I mean an 'abnormal' animal, just in the same condition as an abnormal man—of various tendency."

"And which nation do you consider the most abnormal at the present time—Americans, French, English, Germans?"

"At any rate, not Americans! To their credit must be put an immense national self love which cannot exist in an abnormal people. I one day wrote an article on America and the Americans, in which I did not particularly overload the latter with flattery. Nevertheless I sent the MSS. over the ocean, thinking it would be accepted by any paper as eagerly as any other production. Not a bit of it. The translator took it to fourteen different editors without it getting accepted and finally it had to be sent to England."

"If not America, count, then?"

"Why, France! Can anybody consider France as normal where such things as 'Panama' occur, where men occupying high positions in society are ready to commit any crime for gold? Is that a normal state? A thousand times no!"

Took the Train.

Employer—You are late again. Didn't I tell you to take the train because it would bring you much faster than you could walk the distance?

Boy—Yes, sir, and I did.

Employer—Then how do you explain your lateness?

Boy—I had to half around the station for half an hour waiting for the train, which was away behind time.—Philadelphia Times.

Safety Guaranteed.

An English inventor aims to provide security against liability to accident from the slipping of ladders. The novelty in this case is the introduction of a novel form of shoe suitably attached. It consists of a bracket which can be securely bolted to each side of the ladder, formed at its lower edge with a lug through which a hole is bored, a shoe being loosely pointed to this by means of a pin passing through it and the lug connection being so that the shoe
