WOULD BRIBE THE PRESS.

Sugar Trust People Accused of Another Villainy.

Money Received for Newspaper Men to Induce Them to Keep Silent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 29—The Sugar Scandal continues to be the leading story, which gives promise of an outcome of interest to the public.

It current reports are true, there is a syndicate writer in New York, whose name is to be found at the foot of articles in many cities of the Union, who may have a very unpleasant quarter of an hour with the Washington correspondents before the next session of Congress ends and.

The story was reached here, vouched for by sufficiently trustworthy people to be credible, that one of the leaders of the sugar trust campaign last winter was too anxious to a score by the superfluous people to be given to the newspaper correspondent to be inserted as in Washington among the press "the words 'we'd like to be the man.'" In the opinion of those who furnished the money. And that place was the pocets of those representatives of the press of the country now, who, with or without legal warrant, used to have to do more in Congress, and in the moulding of public opinion throughout the country. There were instances even that the men who furnished the money did so under the impression it was to be distributed pro rata among the representatives of the press in Washington, to be expected that the considerate upon the operations of the sugar trust would be rather less severe of but they would be altogether withheld. It is, of course, assumed that the distributer of the bribe was to receive his commission.

There are intimations even that a list was furnished of the names of correspondents to whom the money was to be distributed, and that the expectation was that it would be expected to take part in dinners, in part to ways that would be appreciated by those for whom it was intended.

If there is anything in this story, it is safe to say that not an editor of the slimpst newspaper passes to the responsible correspondents for whom it is intended that it was bribe-money. The man who undertook to bribe this fund and to win the full knowledge that it would and to safe for him to appear any of the men whose names may have appeared on the pretended list for any such purpose whatever. He not only is not on friendship of one 6 men whom, but he never calculated upon any of them when in Washington.

Efforts are being made to ascertain the truth of the report, and it shall be found some of the correspondents named but he will least more later, possibly in the events are to be being before a committee of investigation.

CHEAPER BREAD.

Prices Reduce the Price Owing to the Slump in Wheat.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—The unprecedented slump in the price of wheat has caused a corresponding cheapening of bread. The New York bakers following the lead of their fellow tradesmen of Washington, have decided to reduce the price of bread to conform to the relative price of wheat. Ever since wheat began to tumble to the lowest price recorded in the history of trade, a reduction in the domestic loaf on bread has been looked for, but it was not until last week, when the bakers in Washington knocked off a cent from the price of ordinary bread, that the breadmakers in New York and other cities began to consider the matter seriously.

The reduction in Washington has compelled the New York bakers to make a similar concession, although they will maintain larger prices. The weight of the loaves is to be increased to make up the present weight. In Washington a five cent loaf of bread is now sold for four cents. In New York the five-cent loaf will be retained, but the pound loaf sold for 10 cents will give place to a two pound loaf sold at the same rate.

Nelson's Appeal.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Arguments on the appeal of John Y. McKane from the sentence of six years' imprisonment, for procuring violation of the election law by inspectors of election, were heard by the court of appeals today. One point upon which the appeal is based is that the section under which the indictment was found applies only to election officers, and as McKane was not in that category it was not applicable in his case.
