CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., April 11.—A special to the Post from Cripple Creek, Colo., says: The bold and serious wages with motorman of the Midland Terminal railway at Gillett, was reached and short time after train was stopped by the men who generally wanted the money. Robert Smith, assistant conductor, secured a valise package containing $2,000 and carried it to safety. The bandits then took about $50 which was in the possession of Deputy Sheriff Tom Ryan, who was on the train, and then made their escape on the road toward Cripple Creek. The robbers were masked and armed with Winchesters. The men were in the middle of the road when the train came in sight. Two of the men ordered the train to stop and then ordered the men to get down, with a pistol in each hand. One of the men then ordered the conductor, and told him to be careful with guns they were not shot but the mail and express valise. Smith saw the valise was not being shipped to one of the Cripple Creek national banks, and concealed the valise package, they intended to take leading future, which was not the case. The bandits made their and rode off rapidly in the direction.

Both men are very weak and treacherously, above the city so that they can be drawn in a line of the Tango Express office, to hold and hold from the west. It was stated in a few minutes that the road and had fallen blind. Within twenty minutes from the time the valise was discovered, Deputy Sheriffs Sterling and Jackson and Constable Ryan and a posse of men were on the road in search of the bandits, who have so far left no trace behind them. The robbers were masked and armed with Winchesters. Two men were seen in the vicinity of Gillett, but they were not seen to be the men who held up the train. The robbers appeared over Cow Mountain and came down the road in the middle of the road. They
