SECOND EDITION.

DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Tuesday, June 21, 1892.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

THE 3rd Battle Tournament opened down in the south.

WORK for National Commissioner of a party named Smith, the tickets for admission alleged for his Territory, is looking as if there was something decaying in his particular locality.

A "LEADER" suggestion is authority for the statement that the retention of the police department will be determined by the 4th inst. great party. The result is a great deal of consternation and excitement among the offending police officials.

THE Democratic National Committee, by issuing the tickets of admission to the coming Republican delegation (Universal Harlesque), and set to 20, Perry, the National Commissioner, shows that the Tomorrow have been completely betrayed in the matter of the convention.

LATEST NEWS.

Calne and Henderson Appointed on Committees.

CHICAGO, June 21.—[Special to the DESERET NEWS.]—Henderson has been appointed on the committees on credentials and organization, and Calne on the committees on resolutions and order of business. The chairman of the delegation is Henderson, and secretary, Calne.

The Tomorrow are working outside and will contest everything. Powers looks sick and tired.

The convention passed a resolution sympathy for Blaine and adjourned till eleven o'clock to-morrow.

The Bimetallists are circulating pamphlets and circulars, and using all they can to enlighten the people on Utah. They are well received everywhere.

LATER STILL.

The nomination of Cleveland is now an assured act. The Kentucky delegation, which, next to New York, has opposed the Ex-President the most strenuously, decided this afternoon to give him its solid vote. Oregon also, which was instructed for Cleveland Pennoyer, has fallen into line and will give Cleveland its united support. Henry Watterson, editor of the Courier-Journal, is now for Cleveland after opposing him for a year or more.

The New York delegation has decided to drop Hill and will vote for Boies on the 2nd ballot.

LATEST COURT NEWS.

An Action in Which C. S. Varian and Judge Loufborrow are Plaintiffs.

This afternoon in the Third District Court a suit was entered in which the plaintiffs are James M. Gray, C. S. Varian and C. F. Loufborrow, and the defendants The York Mining Company, W. L. Andrew, secretary, John A. Groesbeck, Wm. Groesbeck, and Joseph R. Morris, trustees of the company. By the articles of incorporation the capital stock of the company is fixed at $1,000,000, divided into 200,000 shares of the par value of $5 each. Plaintiff Gray avers that $50,000 was paid up stock, Varian $75, and Loufborrow $75. At the time of the company's organization 50,000 shares of the capital stock were made treasury stock and set aside for a working capital, and are now unalloyed of. The articles expressly provided that no assessment shall be levied upon any of the treasury stock, for any purpose, until the said working capital has been exhausted, and not then except by order of a majority of the board of trustees. The complaint further alleges that on the 20th April, 1892, the defendants J. A. Groesbeck, W. Groesbeck and Joseph R. Morris, "pretending to act as directors," attempted to levy an assessment of 15 cents per share upon the company's stock, and advertised for sale all the unassessed stock, including that of the plaintiffs, "to pay said pretended assessments." At that time the 50,000 shares remained in the treasury. It is also alleged that the said trustees "are preparing wrongfully and fraudulently the means of said corporation in working grounds other than those owned by it, to which the corporation has no interest whatsoever," and from which only some private interests could be served. Defendants have refused, after requisition, to desist from their "illegal, wrongful and fraudulent purpose" to sell such stock. Plaintiffs therefore pray that the action of the trustees be declared void and that the illegal assessment be cancelled; also that a restraining order be issued.

Messrs. Varian, Loufborrow and Wm. Keighn are the plaintiffs' attorneys.

In the Third District court this afternoon, John B. Ingram brought suit for foreclosure against the estate of Chas. D. St. George, deceased, W. A. Kinney, administrator, Kate St. George and Sidney L. St. George, (heirs of Chas. D. St. George) and A. M. Jones and Mrs. Mary Ann Jones, defendants. The amount involved is $2000.

Probate Court.

Orders made before Judge Hatch today:

Estate of Ellen A. Johnson, deceased; petition for sale of real estate came on regularly. Proof of publication approved. Richard Bumles sworn and examined. Order made granting letters of petition and issuance of bond for additional bond in the sum of $24.

Estate of Charles Haybeck, deceased; final account and petition for distribution presented. W. F. Rapp sworn and examined. Account and allowed and decree of distribution issued.

Estate of Hannah Ashwick, deceased; petition for distribution came on for continuance. Proof of petition granted, but the matter of costs is contested so will lapse under advisement.

Estate of R. Young, deceased; petition for the sale of real estate came on for continuance. Dismissed for want of proper publication.

HIS TIME IS SHORT.

It is Said That Mayor Boskin Will Relieve Detective Johnson of His Star Tonight.

There is a well founded rumor today among those who are on the "inside" to the effect that Mayor Boskin will relieve City Detective Johnson of his official star tonight. The contemplated discharge of this officer grows out of the expose made by one of the alleged keeper of a house of ill-fame on Main street, run by a couple of Southern Belles notoriety.

Complications in other departments are also prominent. The session will be an interesting one.

Ratification and Disappointment.

Editor Deseret News:

To be disappointed is sometimes very serious, usually vexatious and agitating.

At the expense of considerable effort to overcome distance and adverse circumstances, I put in an appearance at the Republican ratification meeting, expecting to see and hoping to hear from that individual who was known in the late Minneapolis convention as the man who had lived in Utah since the time when "there was difference from the Mormons were destroyed," and "he would have been killed if the Mormons had dared." To see this prodigy of a man over whom the elect pickings for this life had been finished shining was to me the great unfulfilled interesting feature of that occasion. I was disappointed.

Since then I have been endeavoring to reason out the character of such a man. Not knowing what war he was born under, but his life should be secured to aids under such desperate conditions, I am under the necessity of adopting the plan of reasoning from cause to effect, so when one fact is established reason may justly arrive at other facts as deducible from the established premises or ultimate fact acquired.

Being personally a stranger to the gentleman in question, I have no other means of coming at tolerably satisfactory conclusions to take the place of disappointment.

As his name is a stranger, I am minded to most be very care-worn, grizzled, weak, lean and langre, as no one under ordinary conditions could possibly survive forty years of constant excitement under anticipations of being waylaid by the innumerable assassins who were inflicting death upon all "Mormons" dwelling in Utah. These years must have been full of mental excitement, leaving no terrors of care upon the ghostly visage that was able to carry them, demanding the pity rather than the contempt of every beholder. I trust that today his appearance is not "a living lie" to the declaration to which he has so freely indulged. He certainly must have something to show for the fearful apprehensions which have ever attended him in the midst of veritable assassins. The agony of such situations must have left deep marks of despair upon both countenance and consciousness.

But what is the mental condition? It is painful to contemplate the situation! The mind which must have been his constant companion, but some one should so far forget as to "share" to the terrible deed. Imagination takes in these years of sleepless, dreary nights, and the terrible exercise of that consciousness that never sleeps gives him no rest, but makes his scene of repose one of despair and inconceivable wretchedness.

His power of endurance must have been phenomenal, his human nature wholly given way under such a strain of excitement. That dream of blood at the midnight hour, that unerringly pointed him out as the victim of the assassins with death's despairing doom awaiting him, is enough in its ordinary consequences to unsettle the most clear minded—a mind to which he makes no claim. I am not surprised that under this awesome ordeal he has fled, but more surprised that any one should be so reckless as to "share" to the terrible deed. Imagination takes in these years of sleepless, dreary nights, and the terrible exercise of that consciousness that never sleeps gives him no rest, but makes his scene of repose one of despair and inconceivable wretchedness.

Such a fabled, brief sketch of what imagination pictures to be the one-third of one who has lived in a community where cure "there" is permit a realization of an anticipated end, however much that end was needed, or a guilty conscience could have desired.

IMAGINARY REASONER.

Taking fat drinks that of White bonds.

1. Let no one suppose I made record to his left, relying on I supposed the man who signed. Having transacted business with Mr. Spencer, I discovered he acted in structured. Expected to do my part of the agreement. I tried it into an certain bond and completely carried it out. Being in a hurry I did not read it, but took it for granted that it was the same as the last one I had signed. Would terrific winds come on making black clouds? Was there danger? Would there be gore in resulting? But as the shadow greatly enveloped the entire atmosphere, hardly an ray of fear came, though the women's faces were white and the men's faces pale with anxiety. Then came a vivid flash of lightning and the booming report of thunder rendered the stillness sweet. Darker grew the nearly air. At length no great wave the outer darkness that the news reporters were compelled to pause, awhile to see. Quickly followed the rattling of the hailstones on the roof. Almost literally the water flowed down through a crack directly upon spot the head of the New York delegation. Thunder bellowed from the north, as the storm raged. Furious wind, thunder rain and rain dashes continued for ten minutes. Suddenly as the storm came it passed away and light followed. Within the great hall was a wall of love.

Then Chairman Brown of the national committee rose and announced silence.

Rev. John Rose offered prayer.

Secretary Morris announced the temporary organization: W. C. Owen, Kentucky, temporary chairman; S. P. Morris, secretary; Nicholas A. Bell, Missouri, principal reading clerk; Robert J. Bright, Indiana, sergeant-at-arms.

Organization conducted to the chair amid applause, and spoke as follows:

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN OWEN'S SPEECH.

Two great powers confront the Democratic party. One is entrenched in the interests, the other is the organization of the machinery of organized social, supported by the whole power of the government. The contest is now to be waged among the Democrats to make some among themselves.

Two roads, therefore, stand before us, the one leading to victory, the other to defeat. If this choice and gated stand as representatives of one it remains for you to apply the other. In this sphere I am not the representative, as the arrange guard of a grand army sent forward to share the pathway to victory.

The duty devolves in your responsibility, I need not tell you. If you work in wisdom, millions falling in the step and miles and field will rise and fall with the land.

The roll call of the Republic attests that its heart and conscience are with us in our war with the representatives of great. The best brought to our party is the platform that obtained approbation and invites the support of the people. We can succeed, but we must do more, we must deserve success. Our opponents, the Republicans, have a well-fought battle, we must rear a temple to plain people and hold a shrine so broad that every lover of his kind can come and worship. Some that lifted from the back of toil and to that end, it back right to demand that wrongs ever bears our burden must fill it shelve the mantle of oppression and die of fading, that every Democrat of the Union may follow its gravity of the sunlight and irresistible output. Let us not underestimate the gravity of the situation. It demands the broadest patriotism and every needful sacrifice.

Our work let begins here under the sun of summer and in the fresh air of nature, we must carry it forward with unfaltering courage in a triumphant close."

The speaker proceeded to characterize the coming campaign as one of education, to teach people everywhere their true relations to the tax gatherers. They must learn that no national prosperity can transpire the tribunes of the people, and no tax masters write our tariff bill. They must learn that for personal and political advantages their interests are threatened by the threat of war, and will learn with shame and regret that on the day the service message of their President was read in Congress, the general response of the little eight-by-ten-republic, Chile, accepting the terms of the Presidential ultimatum was read in every capital of the Union.

The speaker proceeded to denounce the billion dollar Congress and closed as follows: "Impelled by the one purpose of the public good, we will free ourselves from the shackles and heart-torture that characterized the Republican party since Sherman. Day went down at Minneapolis before nailed logistics of the iron-hand-butler brigade."

At the close of Owen's speech, on motion of Delegate White, of California, the roll was called for the consideration of the committees on credentials, rules, order of business, permanent organization and resolutions. All resolutions and communications were ordered referred to the committee on resolutions.

Hill Will Follow to the End.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Much gossip has gone its rounds respecting the intention of Senator Hill. Among other things, it has been said that his friends have been endeavoring to withdraw his name from the Democratic nomination. It can now be stated as a fact that Hill has not withdrawn, and does not propose to do so. He will fight to the end.

A Gloomy Tammany Meeting.

CHICAGO, June 21.—The Tammany gloomy meeting this morning. Governor Flower of New York, and after it was over that Hill's friends were ready to cast their votes for any Democrat who was not carry New York and would even consent to Hill's name not to be mentioned in the convention, if such a man could be found. If the friends of Governor Flower or Morrison could show that they could carry New York, Tammany would vote for him.

The Kentucky delegation met this morning and 15 votes certainly, perhaps the votes of the 26 will be cast for Cleveland. Carlisle's name will not be presented.

Hold Settled.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The committee to notify Whitelaw Reid of his nomination for Vice President went to Ophir Farm, Reid's country residence near White Plains, where they proceeded to carry out their instructions.

The address of notification was delivered by Senator Dubois. Reid's speech was very brief. It referred in well chosen terms to the nomination by the Minneapolis convention, and advised voter to see that that is cast for sought and with fate unanimity and then continued: "Your unusual, consistent and effective advocacy of Republican principles for many years and the honor and dignity with which you represented our country abroad, have marked for you the distinction. The American people appreciate the patient, skilful diplomacy by which you opened the market of France to the products of the American farmer. We believe the people will sustain the Republican principles and endorse the personalities of our standard bearers, and that the wisdom of our action at Minneapolis will be fully demonstrated by your triumphant election at the polls in November."

Mr. Reid, in replying to the speech, expressed that he felt sincere gratitude for the confidence shown and the high trust devolved by the nomination. He spoke of the Republican party as one that guided the country in the path of unparalled prosperity, with but four years' interval since 1861. He said the profound sense of responsibility and of the earnest desire to carry the trust reposed in the administration of sixty-five millions of persons and for the vast interests of the country are the most impressive considerations of the hours. He continued: Not having sought the great honor you confer, in you have justly stated, I am the more prompt in accepting these utterances and a Republican I shall not shrink from the duty you have imposed. The speaker said he accepted and adopted in full the platform of the recent Minneapolis platform. They were the principles under which the country had attained unsurpassed prosperity and growth. Under them labor had been freed, honored and better rewarded than elsewhere and the largest example given of equality before the law than the world has had yet seen promulgated. In regard to these principles would be to indict the glorious history of the nation for almost a quarter of a century. Referring to Blaine, he said: "I cannot suppose in this occasion too words of effectiveness expression for my friend in so many previous partial campaigns, for I have caused whose present cruel bereavement, following hard on two similar sorrows, has touched the tenderest sympathy of all who appreciate the strong manly and both patriot and the whole country." The speaker closed by predicting Republican success.

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

A Dynamite Fuse Fire of a Steamer.

BOSTON, June 21.—A frightful accident occurred yesterday on board the new French cruiser Chappy on Chesapeake.

Trial was being made of her machinery when the bend of one of her boilers was blown out and an explosion occurred in one of the coal bunkers, totally disabling the vessel. The fire hold was at once filled with scalding steam and smoke while the boiling water covered the floor in the depth of several inches. The unfortunate stokers and engineers imprisoned in the hold writhed in agony as the scalding steam filled the lungs and, falling to the floor, they were soaked by the water. In their agony they bit themselves and companions and fought and struggled together. Attempts to rescue them were met by the same frenzied resistance. They bit those who tried to drag them out. Finally, fifteen of them were taken alive to the hospital and a number of others who unfortunately die in a short time.

A Fusion Ticket Against Greenbacks.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 21.—In the municipal election yesterday the union ticket composed of Democrats and Republicans defeated the straight Republicans ticket with the exception of two councilmen.

THE CONVENTION.

Hill and Boies Alone in the Field Against Cleveland.

CHICAGO, June 21.—The opening of convention day finds the clouds of political discussion clearing away. It does not require the divine gift of prophecy to predict the nomination of Grover Cleveland on the first ballot. Indeed, this result is commended, even by the friends of Hill and Boies, the only other candidates now in the field, though every indication is that they will go down to defeat with their cause flying, and the solid support of their respective States behind them.

The efforts of Governor Boies of Pennsylvania, Illinois and Indiana that they have decided to make their delegates unanimously for Cleveland on the first ballot, have proved effective, and it is assured that several of all cools from the Cleveland. Then all-day horses, including Gorman, Morrison, Russell and Campbell will make solid votes are heading to counter from the band wagon of the winner.

The general expectation is that ex-Governor Gray, of Indiana, will be nominated for vice-president. It is understood that his withdrawal from the race for the first place was made at the instance of Mr. Cleveland and was a strong appeal him for the second, and as the Cleveland force is well disciplined there is little doubt that the compact will be carried out. The Cleveland people are so secure that they will make no fight against Owens as temporary chairman, though he is an anti-Cleveland man. Late we published reports, given out by the Cleveland managers this morning but the Tammany leaders are still sullen, and continue to maintain that Cleveland cannot carry New York. Some of the lower lights even declare that they will bolt, as a protest, cast any New York votes against Cleveland on the ground of making his nomination unanimous.

THE NEW DELEGATION STILL FOR HILL.

Every effort of the Cleveland people to persuade the Iowa delegation to instruct Governor Boies has proven signally unsuccessful, despite the almost certainty that Cleveland will be nominated on the first ballot, the Boies people have announced that their candidate will remain in the race till the end, and cast his vote, as a matter of State pride, but as a protest against the nomination of a candidate not supported by his own State. Indeed Boies' friends are almost as bitter as the Hill men in their protestations against Cleveland's nomination.

The delegation this morning decided to cast the solid vote for Boies, even if every other delegate in the convention voted for Cleveland, and under no circumstances to allow the consideration of his name for the second place. They say there is no reasonable hope that Cleveland can carry Iowa.

It is generally believed now that the contesting delegates from New York will content themselves with formal protest and allow the Hill delegates to take the seats in the convention which rightfully belong to the contestants. A definite decision on this point will be reached this afternoon after the close of the first session of the convention.

The Democratic Wigwam.

CHICAGO, June 21.—A circus tent, greatly magnified with a dozen huge white pyramids stretching from covering to floor was the appearance of the Democratic wigwam from the exterior today.

What appeared to be pendants were really wind pads supporting a moments circular canopy of wood raised some distance above the walls to admit light and air from all sides. Blue silken banners were hung on the main floor and bearing the names of various States showed where the State delegations would be seated. Around and back of them, rising like an amphitheatre were tiers of seats containing spectators, the entire structure having room for more than twenty thousand people.

The Chairman's desk, the same over which Cleveland and Hendricks were nominated in 1884, was surrounded by huge bouquets of flowers. The great hotel was crowded with red, white and blue streamers, flags and banners. There were here and there shields of different States and portraits of honored Democrats of the past.

The delegations were seated according to the alphabet, Alabama having the front seat and New York well back.

The crowd began to gather as early as eleven o'clock, though the convention was not to be called to order till noon, and it was evident that hour before the actual calling to order took place. When the gavel finally fell, the great structure was completely filled with people.

Opening of the Convention.

CHICAGO, June 21. — Chairman Brice called the convention to order at 12:05.

While the convention assembled, the blue silk banner of the Horse Shoe club, Davenport, Iowa, was borne forward and waved over the delegation of rugged men who will sit in the convention and vote for their governor to the last ditch. They were greeted with applause as were the Tammany leaders from New York, who followed closely. Then came Illinois and Pennsylvania. Then in groups, both or nearly, the other States took their places.

It was high noon when a black shadow crept up from the north and enveloped the city. Over the great spaces in the galleries became dim and shadowed. A hush crept over the throng of white faces turned upward toward the opening beneath the light wooden roof. Was fire and death to be blown away? Would terrific winds come on making black clouds? Was there danger? Would there be gore in resulting? But as the shadow greatly enveloped the entire atmosphere, hardly an ray of fear came, though the women's faces were white and the men's faces pale with anxiety. Then came a vivid flash of lightning and the booming report of thunder rendered the stillness sweet. Darker grew the nearly air. At length no great wave the outer darkness that the news reporters were compelled to pause, awhile to see. Quickly followed the rattling of the hailstones on the roof. Almost literally the water flowed down through a crack directly upon spot the head of the New York delegation. Thunder bellowed from the north, as the storm raged. Furious wind, thunder rain and rain dashes continued for ten minutes. Suddenly as the storm came it passed away and light followed. Within the great hall was a wall of love.

Then Chairman Brown of the national committee rose and announced silence.

Rev. John Rose offered prayer.

Secretary Morris announced the temporary organization: W. C. Owen, Kentucky, temporary chairman; S. P. Morris, secretary; Nicholas A. Bell, Missouri, principal reading clerk; Robert J. Bright, Indiana, sergeant-at-arms.

Organization conducted to the chair amid applause, and spoke as follows:

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN OWEN'S SPEECH.

Two great powers confront the Democratic party. One is entrenched in the interests, the other is the organization of the machinery of organized social, supported by the whole power of the government. The contest is now to be waged among the Democrats to make some among themselves.

Two roads, therefore, stand before us, the one leading to victory, the other to defeat. If this choice and gated stand as representatives of one it remains for you to apply the other. In this sphere I am not the representative, as the arrange guard of a grand army sent forward to share the pathway to victory.

The duty devolves in your responsibility, I need not tell you. If you work in wisdom, millions falling in the step and miles and field will rise and fall with the land.

The roll call of the Republic attests that its heart and conscience are with us in our war with the representatives of great. The best brought to our party is the platform that obtained approbation and invites the support of the people. We can succeed, but we must do more, we must deserve success. Our opponents, the Republicans, have a well-fought battle, we must rear a temple to plain people and hold a shrine so broad that every lover of his kind can come and worship. Some that lifted from the back of toil and to that end, it back right to demand that wrongs ever bears our burden must fill it shelve the mantle of oppression and die of fading, that every Democrat of the Union may follow its gravity of the sunlight and irresistible output. Let us not underestimate the gravity of the situation. It demands the broadest patriotism and every needful sacrifice.

Our work let begins here under the sun of summer and in the fresh air of nature, we must carry it forward with unfaltering courage in a triumphant close."

The speaker proceeded to characterize the coming campaign as one of education, to teach people everywhere their true relations to the tax gatherers. They must learn that no national prosperity can transpire the tribunes of the people, and no tax masters write our tariff bill. They must learn that for personal and political advantages their interests are threatened by the threat of war, and will learn with shame and regret that on the day the service message of their President was read in Congress, the general response of the little eight-by-ten-republic, Chile, accepting the terms of the Presidential ultimatum was read in every capital of the Union.

The speaker proceeded to denounce the billion dollar Congress and closed as follows: "Impelled by the one purpose of the public good, we will free ourselves from the shackles and heart-torture that characterized the Republican party since Sherman. Day went down at Minneapolis before nailed logistics of the iron-hand-butler brigade."

At the close of Owen's speech, on motion of Delegate White, of California, the roll was called for the consideration of the committees on credentials, rules, order of business, permanent organization and resolutions. All resolutions and communications were ordered referred to the committee on resolutions.

Hill Will Follow to the End.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Much gossip has gone its rounds respecting the intention of Senator Hill. Among other things, it has been said that his friends have been endeavoring to withdraw his name from the Democratic nomination. It can now be stated as a fact that Hill has not withdrawn, and does not propose to do so. He will fight to the end.

A Gloomy Tammany Meeting.

CHICAGO, June 21.—The Tammany gloomy meeting this morning. Governor Flower of New York, and after it was over that Hill's friends were ready to cast their votes for any Democrat who was not carry New York and would even consent to Hill's name not to be mentioned in the convention, if such a man could be found. If the
