UTAH COUNTY TEACHERS.

In Session at Payson—Discussions on Psychology.

PAYSON, Utah, Aug. 17, 1896.—The annual institute of the Utah county teachers convened in the Tabernacle today at 11:45 a.m.

After invocation by Mr. Charles Hewerton, a committee on organization was appointed.

Singing, America, under the leadership of Prof. Geo. H. Dove.

Words of welcome by chairman of school board, J. J. McClellan and City Councilman Wm. Wormsordt.

Response, W. S. Rawlings, superintendent of Provo city schools.

The following organization was effected: President, C. H. Christensen; vice president, W. S. Rawlings, Jos. A. Bass, C. E. Christensen, O. N. Child and D. H. Bennion; secretary, Annie Howe of Spanish Fork; enrolment, Geo. H. Dove of Payson.

Prof. N. L. Nelson of the Brigham Young Academy spoke upon the subject of elementary psychology. "Elementary psychology is so extensive that it embraces everything. It is a subject that engages us every day of our lives. We call it by different names according to the version of approach, but such is not technical psychology. Elementary psychology does not hold the same relation to advanced psychology as the primary does to higher studies, but it consists in dealing with the truth and a few of the leading branches. To set something more interesting we must pass further out, so as to inhale the perfume of the flowers, and to partake of the fruit. So it is with all study; the farther you get from the source, and the nearer to the special, the greater the interest, the honest the enthusiasm. Let us consider the possible state of the human soul. Imagine one who has been in possession of all his faculties, to successively lose them and still live. The brighter part of the world would be gone, calamity would then overcome the person, the soul would be in utter darkness; yet if we should lose all the five senses perhaps we should find a skylight—an avenue of communication with the Creator that would rob their utter entirety of its horror. The next state: Imagine one to have all the power of impression more acute than ever, and still being unable to respond—being dead to the world but alive to self. Life depends upon the activity of the receptacles and motorium. All the difference in power from ignorance to the greatest mastery is simply the relation these two hold to each other. Education is simply keeping the balance between these two, strengthening one or the other as necessity demands. One theory of education is that the mind begins with an inert realm of wonderful potentiality, which is acted upon by outside impressions, until its mental is lost, and it becomes an active power. All ideas are the result of impressions received through some of the senses. Another theory starts with the idea that the human soul is a center of truth and light, and that our system of education is not so much admitting light, as providing openings through which light may escape. It is intangible of manifesting itself until it reaches the receptacle. The only at first is entirely opaque to such light, and finally becomes translucent and eventually transparent in the organs of the five special senses. If we live eternally probably the whole body may become thus transparent, for we must respond to the world teeming with intelligence. Wielebrew theory is that the teacher's only mission is to equally train the activities of impression and expression.

Sunday School Union Meeting.

The regular monthly S. S. Union meeting was held in the Latter-day Saints' College building on First North street last evening. The singing was furnished by the Union warm choir, and the reports showed the schools of the Stake well represented.

Elder Willard Done was the speaker of the evening, and his remarks were upon the general organization of the Sunday Schools and Sunday School Union—a plan which is about to be carried out, beginning at the work of the September Union meeting.

The speaker gave out the following headings as future subjects for the present organization: Duties and qualifications of officers; how to secure regular attendance; how to secure punctuality; how to avoid disorder; use of the walking book; continuous use of grading; how to make singing spiritual and effective; how to save time at school; best method of preparing Sunday school lessons.

After a few remarks by Superintendent Griggs on the new Sunday school songs book, the meeting adjourned to meet at the same time and place a month hence.

DOGS AND PONIES.

Prof. Henry Hill's Big Dog and Pony Troupe Drawing the Public Last Night.

One of the most pleasing and instructive undertakings entertainments that have appeared in Salt Lake this season was shown last night on Fourth South between East Temple and State. The remarkable training to which Hill's ponies may attain is simply phenomenal and those who witnessed the performance for the five time could hardly reconcile their senses to such intelligent resembled action on the part of Henry's trained animals.

The performance commenced about 8:30 with a good audience in attendance. The first thing on the program was a drill by eight ponies, some twenty-five or thirty canine species, the white, occupying reserved chairs at the edge of the ring. The ponies are all spotted and as they seemed to and act through the intricate maneuvers of the march they produced a beautiful sight indeed. Perhaps the most highly delightful part of the performance, especially to the little ones, was the labor dogs (bears) to represent a man, woman and child. They came into the ring next in state, being drawn in a handsome little carriage by a spotted dog. In the ring they were taken from the carriage and put through a number of physical turns, sitting in small coats, walking to music, etc. The clown dogs are an overwhelmingly laughable feature of the entertainment, there being three or four of them, never losing an opportunity to do some drollest that always merited and received a hearty response from the audience. Another novel feature is the rope jumping dogs, and also the leaping and back somersault exhibit. The latter is a very difficult test and there is only one dog that can accomplish it to perfection. The horse-riding dog and the horse-riding monkeys are unique and pleasing features, as is also the high jumping contest and the quadrille of praying dogs.

The crowning feature of the dog and pony show is the living picture tableau composed of dogs and ponies, and this to-morrow night winds up a most enjoyable evening's entertainment, after which the children are given a brief opportunity to pet the animals.

The performance will be given every night this week.

LITERARY NOTES.

McClure's Magazine for September will contain the first report ever published of Abraham Lincoln's famous "Lost Speech," delivered at Bloomington, before the first Republican state convention held in Illinois. "I never witnessed such a scene before or since," says Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune, who was a member of the convention and will act as witness to the report of the speech describing the occasion.

HANDSOME NEW STORE.

A Fine Class of the Finest New Quarters of the R. K. Thomas Dry Goods Co.

One of the most important dry goods establishments located in Salt Lake is the handsome new store of R. K. Thomas, at 34 and 36 East Temple street. Nothing has been omitted in the arrangement of this handsome dry goods emporium that tends to make a shopping place popular with the purchasing public. In the matter of light it is probably superior to any store in the city and the departments are artistically and conveniently arranged, fully and economically equipped to facilitate accurate and rapid handling of trade. There are some ten or a dozen different departments, including silks and dress goods, domestics, notions, hosiery and gloves, ladies' underwear, gents' furnishings, shoes, boys' clothing, clerks and cashiers. One of the finest of these departments, perhaps of the most pleasing to the city without exception, is the cloak and suits. In size it is 30x65 feet, modern in every respect, provided with beautiful wall cases entire, and hung with inlaid-oak cabinets, while the floor is laid with elegant Brussels carpet. At convenient points about the room are contained comfortable settees which will be found very inviting to the wearied shopper, who will, while resting, be also on the moment in the up-to-date world of fashion.

The full length of the new store is 165 feet, and with the Enoch Wrigley extension, with the lot to be laid in the market, floor from the right at foreign market, and the 1st, there 30. Thomas now is to purchase the new full stock.

I hastily gave him a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He was soon relieved, to the first words he uttered were, "Hatch you had your pill you gave me?" I informed him.
