Frank Drury and a hackman in the police court yesterday afternoon for grand larceny. Drury is charged to have stolen a trunk from the office of the Oregon Short Line about two weeks ago. He was arrested yesterday in company with Detectives Parker and Ivy. He claims he did not steal the trunk, but that he found it in the passage where the office is located, and that he was induced to go to a 25 cent house to save it from being pawned or sold. The jury in the case returned a verdict of guilty, and he was sentenced to serve a 25 cent house to save it from being pawned or sold.

A Serious Runaway.

Farmington, Sept. 27, 1897.—Last Saturday afternoon about 2 o'clock, Miss Tipsetta, relict of the late John H. Tipsetta, who died on the 4th of 1897, and will a very prominent resident by her kindly helpful ministrations to the sick and suffering, met with a runaway team. In company with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Beulah Dustin Tipsetta, she was going to Farmington from her residence on her farm about one mile southeast of the city. When the wagon road crosses the D. & R. G. R. R. a freight train was backing now from a side car which some unknown person, some time, since the road being driven, on a siding to the town, the train blocked and rattled and rumbled. On the hill a little southeast of the station their speed was checked a little, but here they struck and apparently ran right over Tipsetta buggy. If the horses had tried to pass on the opposite side of the buggy both the occupants would undoubtedly have been trampled to death, but they turned to the east enough for the horses to pass, while the other jumped on top of the hind and front buggy wheels on the side, breaking every spoke of both wheels, the rim of one was smashed down to the axle and pressed so completely that only a small part of it was in sight; the hubs were left lying beside, thus ending the runaway. In his blundering his front foot struck Mrs. Tipsetta, but as her dress flounced and partly extricated her from the wrecked buggy, she was out of reach of the force of the blow. She is badly but it is thought not dangerously hurt; her daughter-in-law escaped with only a few bruises.

We have a city ordinance in regard to having teams unhitched and attended, teams too frequently run away on our streets, causing numerous narrow escapes the last one before this was a few weeks ago when a "broncho" horse ran more than three blocks before the collision. It was hitched to brake beam; it ran most of the distance on sidewalks generally with sprinkled with children, but the one only one 2-year-old was on the sidewalk; the boy jumped off to the horse, a 14-year-old sister, about fifty yards from the little one saw the danger and ran a head of the horse towards the child and when she grabbed the child the horse did not look his feet of crushing her, both of them rolled in the mud and water of the ditch, the older girl almost fainting with exhaustion and fright.
