RUN OFF THE RANGE.

Cattle That Were Stolen From Isaac R. Hardman's Herd.

WERE KILLED AND SOLD FOR BEEF.

The Men Run Down by Detective Paul On Trial for Grand Larceny. The Animals' Hides Identified.

The case of John Keller, Max Ottenheimer and Herman Kahn, charged with grand larceny, came up before Justice Smith today. Lougbourow and Kahn represented the defendants and Assistant County Attorney Eichner the prosecution.

Isaac R. Hardman, a cattle broker living at Riverton, Salt Lake county, was first placed on the stand. He testified that on or about September 1st he "missed" his heifers from the ranch on which he was stationed. Since that time he had seen the hides of those animals at the yards of the Utah Slaughtering company. That was on Wednesday of this week. He positively identified the hides by marks and brands upon them.

Cross-examined by Judge Lougbourow witness said he had charge of something more than one hundred head of cattle, which he was "summering" in Butter Ball canyon. The animals stolen were not his own personal property, but belonged to residents in the southern part of the county. Four metal tags bearing the marks "J. R. Hardman, Lout, Utah county, were found in the ears of the animals stolen. (These were here produced for inspection by counsel and court.) He could not state positively when the heifers were stolen, but knew they were driven off sometime during the last two weeks.

Mr. Hardman made an excellent witness and told his story in a most straightforward and convincing manner. He plainly spoken was on that Sergeant Wire exclaimed "That man is the best witness I ever saw." Others said the same thing.

City Detective Paul being sworn testified of his visit to the stock yards and detailed how he found the four stolen heifers there, and how, by the assistance of a yard company, he caught one of the animals and cut a metal tag bearing the name of Mr. Hardman from its ear. Mr. Keller claimed to think that the cattle were his, that he had bought them from a man whom he did not know. Later he stated that he had purchased them from an individual giving the name of Hunter.

Under the examination of Judge Lougbourow, Detective Paul said when he first went to the stock yards there were about eight head of cattle. Only half of them, he thought, had the Hardman tag in their ears. Subsequently an inspection of the hides resulted in finding additional tags. The seven hides were all dating business, as he understood it, on First South street, under the firm name of the Chicago Meat company. Keller at first declared that he had paid $15.50 a head for the cattle. Later he said he had only paid $14.50 and then that the "bunch" cost him $150.

Howard S. Page, yard foreman of the Utah Slaughtering company testified that on Monday last Mr. Ottenheimer ordered him to kill the animals in question after they had been inspected by Mr. Garrett. He remembered that four of the cattle had tags in their ears. One of them he examined and found the name of "I. R. Hardman." Another that of "S. Butterfield, Herriman."

William H. Fowler driver of stock for the Utah Slaughtering company gave corroborative testimony as did F. J. Schneider, who once asked Mr. Kahn how it was that the Chicago Meat company sold meat cheaper than other butchers.

This statement caused counsel on either side to lock horns on the proposition as to whether or not the question was pertinent. Witness was finally allowed to explain that Mr. Kahn replied that he did the buying.

Schneider was then turned over to the defense, but Judge Lougbourow said sharply, "Get out of that chair." "I have not been in it yet," was Schneider's prompt answer, and everybody who saw his efforts to get his six foot 250 pound frame into the chair believed him. The prosecution here ended and the defense opened by calling Mrs. Keller who said she lived over the river and saw an unknown man come to their home on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock and sell the cattle in question.

Asked by Attorney Eichner as to whether she had had trouble with her husband and threatened to "give him away," she replied tumultuously in the negative.

Sig. Simon's testimony was directed mainly to the good character of Keller.

William H. Young stated that Keller was at the Vienna cafe on Sunday morning at 1 o'clock.

O. B. Olsen saw Keller and a strange man together at the Clipper saloon about 8 o'clock Sunday morning.

Mrs. Rowe testified that Mr. Kahn remained in his room until midnight Saturday. William Lundberg gave similar testimony.

The court at this time adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

When the case was called this afternoon Keller was put on the stand. He denied that he was a member of the firm of the Chicago Meat Company but said he was employed by the company as buyer of stock. He purchased the heifers in question on Sunday morning last from a man named Hunter. He knew Hunter pretty well as he had "monkeyed around with him four or five hours" once before when he bought another bunch of cattle. Hunter he thought lived at Lehi. In fact, he was quite surprised at. Witness said he had not been out of the city for weeks.

Cross-examined by Mr. Eichner the witness said he came here from Kansas City about two years ago. He had been engaged in the cattle business about fifteen years, ten years in the city named. He didn't know whether the bunch of cattle had ears or not, but was sure they had tails because they were using them as passages to drive off the flies. When he bought beef cattle he looked at the "bodies and flanks and not the ears." Hunter wanted $125 for the bunch, but he only paid, he said, $110 for them as a sort of splitting difference compromise. He went to the stock yards alone and came back alone.

Mr. Eichner (warming up)—Now, tell me if it isn't a fact that a man got in the hurry and rode back with you from a point near the stock yards?

The witness here got very much mixed and stammered an affirmative reply.

Attorney Eichner—Why, then, did you say you came back alone?

Witness—I don't know.

Attorney Eichner—Who was he?

Witness—I don't know.

Attorney Eichner—Where did he get out?

Witness—I don't know exactly. Somewhere in the middle of the city.

Keller was held to await the action of the grand jury in the sum of $500. The other two defendants, on motion of the prosecution, were discharged.

Wayne Stake Conference.

The Wayne Stake quarterly conference was held in the tabernacle, Calmerville, Wayne county, Utah, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 25 and 26, 1894. Stake President Willis E. Robbins presiding.

Present on the stand, the Stake presidency, High Councilors and Bishops.

Elder Robbins expressed joy in meeting for the first time in conference at Calmerville; the health of the people in this Stake generally is good; the Stake presidency have since last conference visited every ward in the Stake and all are in a prosperous condition; there are fair prospects for a good harvest; the Saints here have great cause to be thankful, as we have no saloons in the Stake, and are measurably free from many of the evils that afflict settled places. He referred to the revelation given to the late President John Taylor, impressing upon the saints the necessity of setting their houses in order.

Counselor Hans M. Hansen addressed the Saints upon individual salvation, demonstrating that our salvation depended upon the good works we perform while tabernacling in the flesh. The speaker fell to compliment the Saints of Blue and Grass valleys on the success made in converting the once desolate country into a place of gardens and orchards. He remembered passing through those valleys when there were very few settlers and less attractions than meet the eye of the passer-by today.

Elder Seth Taft quoted the prophecy that "God would in the last days take one of a city and two of a family and gather them to Zion;" also the prediction of Isaiah that "the mountain of the house of the Lord should be built in the top of the mountains," etc. He showed that in fulfillment of the prophecy the Gospel had been restored, Elders were sent out to proclaim the "glad tidings of great joy," many have gathered from the nations of the earth, and temples have been built, and Saints are now dwelling therein, thus fulfilling to the very letter the prophecies quoted.

When the Saints assembled in the afternoon a choice variety of fruit decorated the stand, consisting of very fine peaches and pears, and extra apples that measured 15 inches round, that had been raised in the Calmerville ward. The Calmerville, Blue Valley, Fremont and Lea wards were reported in good condition by Bishop Walter Hanks, Bishop Hiah E. Mayfield, Elder Jonathan Hunt and Elder John T. Lozenby.

Counselor Gustave S. Bastian said that thus far the Stake Presidency had strictly followed the counsel of Elder G. M. Lyman in regard to visiting regularly the wards in the Stake. The speaker referred to the hard times endured by the people of Dixie in settling that country. He believed that the climate of Blue Valley was favorable for the raising of nearly all kinds of fruit that have been raised in Utah; spoke briefly upon the evil of card playing and sabbath breaking, and encouraged parents to lend a helping hand to the Sunday school work.

Elder Wm. L. Callinan spoke briefly upon the influence and power of example; advised Saints to take a review every night of the day's proceedings, note their failings and seek to do better on the morrow.

Immediately after the afternoon meeting a Stake Priesthood meeting was held, when the Priesthood were instructed in their labors and duties by the Stake presidency and Elder Franklin W. Young.

Sunday morning, Aug. 26th.—The following wards were reported to be in a prosperous condition. Temple ward, by Elder Lewis Adams; Fremont ward, by Bishop Wm. Meeks, and Lyman ward, by Bishop Peter J. Christensen.

Elder Franklin W. Young then addressed the congregation on Temple work and impressed upon parents the necessity of seeking to give their children a good education, even though it may cost much sacrifice. Himself, Elder Hunt and three other men were the first to visit this (Blue) valley; he felt to rejoice greatly in seeing the people so comfortably situated.

Elder John Giles spoke upon the usefulness of the House of God, and Elder John W. Jackson, who said he was raised in the Church and born in these valleys, bore a faithful testimony to the truth of the latter-day work.

At the afternoon meeting the Sacrament was administered, the general and Stake authorities were presented and sustained by the people, and vacancies having occurred in the Sunday school and primary work, the officers were filled as follows: Joseph Eckersley was sustained as Stake superintendent of Sunday schools, with Walter H. Jeffery as first and Sidney A. Hanks as second counselors; L. S. Hansen Hansen as first assistant in the Stake presidency of Primary association.

Elder Hans M. Hansen related to see the sixty missionaries taking, said it was the duty of all to sustain by their faith and prayers the brethren and sisters just voted for. He spoke in relation to the false doctrines now being taught by men who claim to have had more revelation than the Latter-day Saints, and warned the congregation to be aware of false teachers. He encouraged the people of Blue Valley to plant orchards and shade trees and beautify their homes.

Elder Willis E. Robbins said it is wrong to make the Sabbath a day of pleasure; it was ordained of God to be a day of rest and worship; impressed upon his hearers the great need of faithfulness and evil speaking; was pleased to see a disposition among the people of Blue Valley to manufacture straw hats and other things suitable of action, encouraged the youth to study and prepare for positions of responsibility in the land; referred to the fact that many of the brightest and prominent men in our Church today are sons of humble parentage, who have struggled in poverty to reach the position they hold today. He felt to thank sincerely the good people of Calmerville for the kindness shown to the visiting brethren and sisters; also the choir for the sweet music rendered, and all who had taken part in making this conference a blessed refreshing.

On Friday, August 24, the first Sunday school teacher of the Calmerville and Blue Valley Sunday schools of Wayne Stake was held in the county at Calmerville. There was a very large attendance. In addition to the exercises rendered by the schools represented, which were very appropriate, instructive and entertaining short addresses were delivered by President W. E. Robbins, Counselor Gustave S. Bastian, Bishops Walter Hanks and Wm. Meeks, and also Superintendents Joseph Eckersley and Walter H. Jeffery and Sunday School Missionary Sidney A. Hanks.

Immediately after conference adjourned the Stake presidency of the Relief Societies held a relief meeting, and a meeting of High Priests was held, when a number of brethren were ordained as home teachers.

All the meetings of the conference were well attended. The weather was favorable and a good spirit prevailed throughout. The people of Calmerville did all in their power to entertain and make happy the brethren and sisters from Fremont valley.
