Twentieth Ward Lecture.

Dr. James E. Talmage will deliver his interesting and instructive lecture on Fairies and Heroes, in the Twentieth ward meeting house tomorrow (Sunday) evening. The ward choir will render some choice music, and a social hour will follow the lecture. As the attendance is extended to the general public.

Lower South Hold Up.

Henry L. Smith was held up last night a few minutes after 9 o'clock at a point on the third floor between Sixth and Seventh East streets. The young man lives at 161 Fifth street, and while walking his way home two men jumped out of the shadow and told him to throw up his hands. As he was brought to close quarters with a revolver Smith thought it best to do their bidding and allowed the men to rifle his pockets in search of his effects. They secured a silver watch, a back cross guard and $120 in cash. Smith did not know the men.

Death of Sister Richards.

Sister Ann Richards, wife of Hyrum H. Richards, died at the residence, rear of 46 west Seventh South street, at 12 o'clock last midnight, the immediate cause of death being pulmonary congestion. The deceased was a sufferer for a week past and failed for lately only into feeble age. She was a native woman, a kind and loving mother and faithful wife, and died in full faith of the Gospel, in which she was a devoted adherent. Deceased was born in Wales, England, March 10, 1816, and leaves a bereaved and four young children to mourn her departure.

Funeral will occur from the Fifth ward meeting house, tomorrow, Sunday, at 12 o'clock, noon. Friends are invited to attend the obsequies.

IAMHOLL IN BOSTON.

Large Crowds Turn Out to Hear His Great Lecture on "Evolution."

Special Correspondence "News."

Cor. Sewell G. Ingersoll delivered at the Boston Theater last Sunday night his new lecture on Supernatural. The theatre and expansion of the speaker were the same as in his previous lectures, as did the large number of his admirers in the East here. Colonel Ingersoll has many admirers, yet the greater number of the intelligent people do not take any work in his arguments. Perhaps at no other time was the great Agnostical lecturer more in a rational mood against the idea of a supernatural creator, as he does to-day. I know of no reasonable person (that is, I mean of no reasonable person) who believes that Ingersoll ever made an expression of supernatural that "the Supreme Being" is a reality. Ingersoll in the early part of his lecture said: "Superstition wears a robe of patriotic imagery, stalked with hate and crowned with ignorance, and compels us to believe without evidence, to explain the mystery with answers to questions we do not understand, and to believe that matter was created out of nothing, that a man lived and died and rose from the dead, that the world was created in six days, that God ceased to work on the seventh, that the sun was created after the plants and trees, that the moon was created to govern the night, that God walked in the garden of Eden, that he talked with Moses in the burning bush, that he hardened Pharaoh's heart, that he ordered the Israelites to steal from their neighbors, that he commanded the priests to make a golden calf, that he sent a lying spirit into the mouth of a prophet, that he ordered the Israelites to kill every man, woman and child in the cities of Canaan, that he commanded the priests to make a brazen serpent, that he ordered the priests to make a golden mouse, that he sent a bear to devour forty children, that he sent a lion to devour a man of God, that he sent a fish to swallow a man, that he sent a whale to vomit a man upon the land, that he sent a fish to carry a piece of money, that he sent a star to guide three men, that he sent a star to stand over a house, that he sent a star to fall upon the earth, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the waters, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the sun, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the moon, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the stars, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the heaven, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the earth, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the sea, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the rivers, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the fountains of water, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the day, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the night, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the darkness, that he sent a star to fall upon a third part of the light
