Desperadoes Against the Wishes and Proclamation of the Sheriff.

SIDNEY POST.

BOISE, Ida., May 8.—Sawtelle, the "Blue Creek" and Dubois, alias "Dynamite Bill," leaders of the notorious Dubois gang of outlaws who were killed last week, were buried here today, attended by but the relatives and severally wandered over the dead women their lives they died under their lives.

The Sawtelle murder is a story of a lighting manner in Dubois figures, in close to the house, who had come about May morning by the mysterious murder. Dubois, it is made to the murder.

The murder of Sawtelle was very peculiar in every way. Early on the morning of the 2d of May, Sawtelle was in bed in his cabin on the Dubois ranch, when he was shot through the window and killed by a volley from a gang of desperadoes who had been hanging around the place for some days. The cabin was riddled with bullets, and Sawtelle was shot through the heart and head. The murderers were not disguised, and it is thought they were recognized by Sawtelle. The murder was done in broad daylight, and the murderers rode away in full view of the people in the town. Dubois, who was at the time in the house, ran out and fired a few shots at the murderers, but they escaped without harm. Dubois, who was
