ALABAMA AND MORMONS.

In Monday's NEWS there was a dispatch from Montgomery, Alabama, stating that two Mormon Elders had been whipped by a mob of religious partisans, and had appealed to Governor Johnston, who had taken the matter up and used his official power to check such persecutions in his state. Today the NEWS received from Chattanooga a letter, dated April 26th, which evidently relates to the same circumstance. It is written by Elder Joseph W. Musser, who says:

EDITOR DESERET NEWS:—Perhaps the following letter from James F. Johnston, governor of the state of Alabama, will not prove uninteresting to the Saints and friends in Zion, many of whom have supposed, from past experiences, that very little regard is paid in the South to the rights and liberties of our Elders who are earnestly working here for the salvation of mankind.

Some few days since, Elders S. H. Brown and Charles H. Spencer of the South Alabama conference, accompanied by a few Saints, were leaving a meeting just held when they were stopped by a band of masked men. The Elders were taken into the woods and a promise was forced from them to leave that county. No particular bodily abuse was inflicted. The matter was immediately laid before the governor by Elder Elias S. Kimball, and the following reply obtained:

"STATE OF ALABAMA,
GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,
April 24th, 1897.

"President Elias S. Kimball, Chattanooga: Dear Sir—I have your favor of the 2nd, in reference to violence perpetrated upon Elders Brown and Spencer in Crenshaw county.

"Some days since I had a communication on the subject from a citizen of that county and wrote at once to Sheriff Ellington, directing him to go at once to the neighborhood, arrest the guilty parties and see that they were brought to justice. I have a report from him stating that he complied with my directions, that the parties were put under bond and would be tried, and that no further trouble need be apprehended.

"So far as I can I will see that all citizens have the equal protection of our laws.

"Yours respectfully,
(Sig.) JAS. F. JOHNSTON, Gov."

While the assurance of protection to our Elders and Saints from Governor Johnston is one of the most favorable that has been received, it is not at all uncommon for our rights to be vindicated in this way. High officials are becoming very friendly to our Elders, often loosing them material assistance in their labors. It would seem that the once turbulent streams of hatred and prejudice that issued forth from the lower s of mankind in the "Sunny South" have assumed a gentler course, thus permitting the Gospel light to cast the beams of its sons and daughters of God.

All the Mormons ask is that they be given the protection to which they are entitled under the law, and this Alabama's governor evidently intends they shall have—a procedure that is duly appreciated. The enforcement of the statutes against misdoers soon would make the latter very careful in engaging in persecution of the Mormons. Heretofore the failure in some localities to enforce the law when the rights of Mormons were assailed has given encouragement to persecutive spirits, but as Alabama does not afford such encouragement the mob spirit is not likely to find vent in violence to any great extent hereafter; and the action of Governor Johnston will have a salutary effect outside of his state, by calling attention to the fact that in Alabama equal protection under the law is a privilege which the chief executive of that state is determined all the people within the state limits shall enjoy.

TURKEY'S PRESENT ATTITUDE.

The true attitude of Russia in the oriental game is still the subject of much speculation. An influential Copenhagen paper some time ago expressed the view that an agreement had been reached between the queen of Denmark, the dowager empress of Russia and the princess of Wales during the recent conference between these ladies at Amalienborg castle, but what the plan formulated really is, does not as yet appear. It is probable, however, that the chief concern of the ladies would be some means of saving King George from the disgrace of an ultimatum. Still the conference may have been merely a family council dealing with personal rather than international interests.

In the early part of the war it was stated in several quarters that the Greek government assumed its aggressive attitude to help Russia start the conflict which has certainly succeeded in need for her oriental policy. Everything pointed that way. For thirty years King George has exhibited moderation and conservatism. Why should he suddenly depart from the policy, if not backed by outside might; influences exerted in that direction? It is more noticeable that he yielded to the pressure of the Athenian mob alone. The conclusion was irresistible that some European power was urging him on, and that this power was Russia.

But if that were the case Russia's designs have not been successful so far. The defeat of the Greeks and their precipitate flight from Larissa may have been on the program. The foundation of Thessaly and other Greek provinces may have been foreseen, but the exceptionally efficient behavior of the Turkish troops in the territory of the enemy is something new and evidently unexpected, and as long as it continues it furnishes no possible excuse for armed interference by Russia or any other power.

The outcome from the first given evidence that the attitude of Europe is as transparent to him as crystal, and he has so far positively refused to furnish the desired pretext for a foreign seizure of Constantinople. Prisoners of war are treated as human beings. The armed cities are kept in beautiful order. There are so far but few atrocities reported. What can Europe do with an enemy so humane, so strictly within the boundaries of diplomatic propriety?

The war, however, is to be continued, it seems. What the developments further will be, is beyond human foresight. The unbridled ferocitiousness of the Turk, whose sword is still red with the blood of innocent Armenians, does not simplify the problem now before the European powers.

CUBAN PACIFICATION.

There has not been much fighting in Cuba of late; the cause appearing to be that the Spanish troops have not sought diligently to disturb the revolutionists. The impression of pacification which has been sought to be conveyed appears to have come from a desire of the respective armies to keep at a respectful distance from each other rather than from any real advantage either party had gained in recent events. Now, however, the revolutionists are active again, and there comes news of several engagements, at first of Spanish victories which afterward proved to be defeats, and later of direct and important triumphs of the revolutionists. The situation is so far changed from that of six months ago as to leave little doubt of the outcome. In November last, the Spanish administration stated that the revolution was about to collapse, and General Weyler announced officially that by March last he would have everything arranged satisfactorily to Spanish supremacy. The time limit having been passed, and the Cuban cause showing more vigor and vitality than before, it may be anticipated that the attempted pacification of the island by Spanish warfare will be continued for a few months longer, and then be accomplished by the retirement of the Spanish forces. The prospective independence of the island never appeared more distinctly as within reach of a few months' time at most than it does today. If the revolution is to collapse it must do so pretty soon, or Cuban and not Spanish administration will supervise the long promised and sanguinely desired Cuban pacification.

FURTHER OFF THAN EVER.

Reverend Mr. Varley is as unfortunate in his illustrations as he is in the position he has taken relative to the Messiah law. His argument is that the Lord foresaw Israel full of iniquity and therefore by law permitted them to continue in this iniquity, partly at least. Then he illustrates this apparent absurdity by reference to the "crimes bill" enacted in consequence of the Phœnix park murders in Ireland. But the illustration does not illustrate—decidedly not for his side of the controversy. Parliament did not meet "this abnormal outbreak of murderous violence" by a bill permitting and regulating assassination, but by prohibiting and punishing it. And that is exactly what the Mosaic law was framed for—to prohibit iniquity, not to permit the people to remain in sin. Our reverend antagonist appears to be not less uncertain in his theology than in his logic.

ARBITRATION TREATY DOOMED.

The proposed arbitration treaty between Great Britain and the United States is expected to come up in the Senate tomorrow, Wednesday, on a final vote. From what can be learned at this date, the treaty is not likely to be entered into. In giving a summary of the vote the New York Herald publishes a list of the senators who are opposed to the treaty. According to this, when the time for voting comes, it will be defeated with eight votes to spare. Among those who are registered as against the treaty are Senators Allen, Cannon, Carter, Chilton, Hansbrough, Mantle, Heath, Jones, Shoup and Tillman.

Relative to the subject of arbitration, it is conceived, the sentiment voice, if it is antagonistic to the measure under consideration, cannot be taken as official expression against the principle of settling international difficulties without resorting to violence. It is their hand, if that were the only one in the real, there is little doubt the treaty would receive an almost unanimous vote in the Senate. As it now, however, there are some objections to the provisions of the document as agreed upon by the diplomatic representatives of the two nations, but behind these is the general feeling that there is too much of a scheme of selfishness on the part of Britain, who would gain the greater advantages under the compact. In fact, the past record of Britain in treaty matters, especially when connected with weaker powers, has been a means of awakening, in this country, latterly, an idea that the English statesmen are in life business more from selfish motives as to what advantages would accrue to England than from any devotion to arbitration as a principle of peace.

Whatever the foundation for suspicion especially selfish motives on the part of Great Britain in regard to the proposed treaty, probably it is better for the friends of arbitration not to have such a compact between the two countries rather than have the agreement upon to suspicion of abuse by one or the other party. Yet an arbitration treaty, entered into candidly and sincerely by the two great nations named, so that it could be lived up to in confidence, could not fail to prove an object lesson beneficial to other powers.

It is a common bigotry of an anti-religious press which says, when the great calamities of the present are referred to as having been referred to by the voice of prophecy, that those who direct attention to that fact look on "compassionately as a great fool carries helpless women and children to death." The very act of directing attention shows a concern for the people's welfare that is not compossibly nothing at disaster, but that seeks to preserve others therefrom. Neither is it unmeritorious of nature's laws or of historical facts to say that judgments come on the earth because of man's wickedness; nor is it an impoverishment of God's mercy to note that He takes away the innocent and preserves them from the contamination which would come from continued association with an unbettering generation. "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away;" and there is as much mercy in the Divine power taking as in giving, when the purpose and effect are merciful, as with One who "doeth all things well." And that men might prevent ill results and the coming of evil upon innocent people, by reforming themselves from wrongdoing, is plainly established in daily experience in cases bringing, by neglect and crime, sorrow and suffering to those who are innocent of wrongdoing.

In discussing American beef sugar upon the reports of government officials relative to the product, the New York Sun says:

More than one-half the weight of sugar in the beets comes from the sunshine and not from the soil, and those countries which have a mild climate, combined with the greatest amount of sunlight, with a minimum of air moisture, are the favorite localities for sugar beets. The richest in sugar and with the highest degree of purity. This accounts for the fact that California, Utah and New Mexico have beaten the world's record in raising rich and pure sugar beets.

NEWS comes of the death, last week, of a Maine woman who was told twenty-six years ago by numerous physicians that she could live but a short time, since which date eight of those doctors have died. Some of these women are exasperatingly contrary.

It is reported by a morning contemporary that the wife of the late Johnnie Hamilton was unconscious for several hours yesterday. That contemporary must not forget that her husband's condition is still grave—he is dead.
