Those intending to compete should give the architects by calling on the clerk of the board at his office at any time before those examinations close.

That Police Investigation.

Several weeks have elapsed since charges were preferred against Captain Parker and Sergeant Glover for unofficial conduct, by twenty-six subordinate officers. The complainants alleged that they had been harshly and turbulently treated by the accused officers; that indignities of the most humiliating character were ignominiously heaped upon them by their "betters." Such were the character alleged crimes that led to the investigation that has been conducted with the utmost secrecy from the beginning. It was confidently expected that a report would have been brought in by the committee at the last City Council meeting, as the result of the election was then known. For some reason, however, not difficult to divine, the report was not made.

A number of the committee who have been sitting on the case informed a NEWS reporter last evening that the result of the investigation would be made public at the council session tonight. This, however, seems doubtful.

ROMANCE IS DEAD, ALIFE.

A Husband Reappears—Mr. Wiggins Has Been Married to Twice.

In Judge Zane's Court many interesting cases arise from time to time, one which came under his notice yesterday afternoon may certainly be viewed as altogether out of the ordinary run. The story as narrated by one of the three chief actors in this domestic drama was not only extraordinary in its character, but has its pathetic side.

An Italian by name Giuseppe Poggio, his wife Mary, and their little daughter at one time resided together in Denver, and nothing had occurred to mar the comfort and happiness of their domestic life. But in the year 1882 the husband suddenly disappeared from view, and despite the long and anxious inquiries of the wife, no trace could be gleaned of the missing one. After a while, however, news reached the ears of Mrs. Poggio that her husband was dead, and she mourned for him in all sincerity.

Then came the second act in the strange drama. The suppose widow, after a lengthy interval of mourning, made the acquaintance of a respectable master carpenter named Dowling, recently escaped into Denver, and some three years since they married. The parties from that time on have resided in Salt Lake, Mr. Dowling being in business here, and successful in his undertakings.

Act the third: Everything "went merry as a marriage bell" until quite recently, when the astounding information came to Mr. and Mrs. Dowling that Poggio was still alive, and in the land of health! It was further learned that Poggio having his wife and child Poggio started for Europe, where he led a nomadic sort of career until his arrival in New York a short time ago, and from which place he himself notified his wife that he was safe and sound. Mr. and Mrs. Dowling took an honorable step on discovering that husband No. 1 was still in the flesh: they at once separated, awaiting the turn of subsequent events, and Mrs. Dowling (or Poggio) departed for New York taking her daughter with her. She had an interview with her long lost husband, and then the parties structured together to Salt Lake. Explanations followed on all sides, and the strange situation having been thoroughly discussed, the client wife reached yesterday afternoon, Mr. Poggio petitioned the Third District Court to have the marriage with his wife annulled, and Judge Zane, after listening to a recital of all the facts, disposed of the matter by granting the prayer of the petitioner.

Mr. Poggio is free from matrimonial bonds, and Mr. and Mrs. Dowling have set out again on life's voyage, their happiness is no way lessened by the strange date altogether unexpected incident which for a brief season threatened to make "confusion worse confounded."

IN THE COURTS.

Three Prisoners Overturn Still Still at Large.—Etc.

[illegible] and ex-[illegible] was at two minutes to [illegible], when [illegible] in receiving his attention each day to the Supreme Court business.

Commissioner Greenman had no case before him this morning, civil or criminal.

Commissioner Norrell arranged that the case of J. R. Wiggins should come before him this afternoon. It would appear that recently one J. D. Sullivan purchased of Wiggins the furniture, goodwill, etc., of the Enterprise house, with the understanding that the property included in the sale was free from all encumbrance. A few days after entering upon possession of the house Sullivan learned that the property was encumbered by a chattel mortgage for $255, which had been given by the former proprietor, Wiggins. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Sullivan went before Commissioner Norrell and filed not a complaint charging Wiggins with obtaining money under false pretenses. Wiggins was arrested, but now was released on bonds to secure his appearance today.

When the Territorial Supreme Court meets in September the judges will not by any means come discovered among the "unemployed." There will be a great deal to do before the docket is cleared.

Said the "Liberal" drummer, "I sold to begatly disgusted a man who lives in which Commissioner Frost deals with him, and he intends doing his utmost, through counsel, to induce the higher court to upset the convention and so wipe out the $50 stain.

Marshal Parsons' staff of deputies and a "special engagement" of determined men, whose lives are of little or no obligations, in search of the three convicts who, metaphorically, threw dust in the eyes of the Penitentiary officers last Saturday and made good their escape to pastures new. It is claimed that the hounds are now on the scent of the criminals, and Detective Franks, it is said, this morning started for the north to follow up a supposed clue. It is a matter of regret to most in the penitentiary guards have the characteristics title placed in their keeping got away in the manner they did. They, however, think the convicts must have been "well greased" by the time they emerged from behind the stone walls, which so unceremoniously limited their place of convalescence while passing out of the penitentiary environments.

Solomon Merrill and the attorneys on either side have spent the entire day in the mining case this morning in the Third district courtroom.

United States District Attorney Varian and his assistant (Mr. Maginnis) are working upon the criminal calendar for the next term of the Third district court.

Judge Anderson is not expected back from the East for a week or more to come.

Attempted Burglary.

An attempt was made at an early hour this morning to break into the Tenth ward co-op. store, on Fourth South street. About 2 o'clock the young man who was sleeping in the store was awakened by a rocket at the front door. He soon discovered that burglars were at work, trying to pry it open, and shouted to them to leave, but they paid no attention. He then fired at them, and they decamped. The police were informed of the occurrence but it is said, refused to go after the thieves. An examination of the premises revealed that the boneheads had contented themselves by carrying off a large chisel, which, in their haste, they left on the ground. The chisel was marked with three crosses, and bears the name "Wilberly."

Found Dead Near the Track.

On Sunday a young woman tramping on the R. G. W. track, a short distance north of Provo river bridge, discovered the dead body of a man lying near the track. The officers at Provo were immediately informed. In the absence of the coroner, Justice W. H. Brown went to the spot and held an inquest over the remains. The body proved to be that of a section hand named George Williams. The deceased had come to his death through a violent fit of coughing, resulting in hemorrhage of the lungs. Nothing is known of the dead man's relatives. He is a native of Quinton, Lancashire, England, and is said to be left to mourn $15,000 at home. Twenty dollars was found on his person, which will be used to defray the expenses of burial, etc.

A Crazy Chinaman.

A wild and drunken Chinaman with disordered hair and bloodshot eyes was arrested at the corner of Franklin Avenue and Second South streets, by Officer Sanders, at 5 o'clock this morning. The crazy celestial, it seems, had been suddenly seized with a desire to demolish the windows of all buildings within his reach. He accordingly gathered an armful of stones and sticks and proceeded to shatter pane after pane of glass, and as the pieces fell to the ground he would turn around with a fiendish grin of satisfaction and wave spectators not to interfere with him. His sport, however, was abruptly ended by the officer taking him off to the City Hall. When locked up he entertained the city prisoners by singing a series of Chinese choruses.

"That's Different."

Yesterday was the appointed time to open bids for the sale of $50,000 bonds as advertised for by the City Council. A NEWS reporter today inquired of a member of the present administration whether he met on the street what the result had been. He replied that the finance committee had met and consequently the bids were not opened.

"Why are there any bids received?" asked the newspaper.

"That's different," replied the cheery interrogated official, with a smile, as he proceeded to his office. Of course the reporter learned that no bids had been received, and therefore the committee did not meet."

They will try again.

TERRITORIAL NEWS.

Sunday's Fires in Ogden.—A Number Drowned in Bear River.

The fire in the [illegible] Mill took out a [illegible] and [illegible] property to the value of about [illegible]. The damage to the mill is offset at $600. A. A. Richter, the state bullder, lost [illegible] in the set stored in the building, and the Utah and Oregon Lumber company lost $2000 in lumber.

At 9 o'clock Monday morning another fire occurred in "Nigger Alley," Ogden, which was soon extinguished, however, with but small loss.

The standard of this morning gives account of a fire in Huntsville on Thursday which destroyed the barn of Christian Freeman, involves a stock of hay, grain, etc., a span of horses, three hogs, a set of harness and a number of other things. He carried no insurance, so the whole loss must be borne by himself. He states it to be inconsiderable.

The Logan Nation reports the drowning of N. S. Simons of Cornish, in Bear river near that place. He and prepared to take a bath in the river. On leaving his wife, only seventeen years of age, he said jokingly: "Good-bye, Fanny. I'm going off to drown myself." But there was the last words she heard him utter. The next time she looked heard his wife saw a disembodied head floating down on crossing the nearly turbulent stream, his strength gave out and he sank.

The Brigham Bugle says: "Jesse Dalton, of Willard, met with a severe and almost fatal accident last Saturday. While in a hole shovelling sand, a heavy bank caved in on him, he came plunging down upon him, almost burying him alive. He was badly injured.

Brigham Bugle—Two violent and destructive tornadoes swept over Portage City, twenty miles south of Brigham, Wednesday and Tuesday of last week. Both were accompanied by rain and large hailstones. At Hadley's hotel the wind appeared like a burning chaff, the ground was deluged with rain, and the water fairly poured into Bear River.

DEATH OF SISTER MERRILL.

She Passed Away While on a Mission To Samoa.

The following is an extract from a letter to the First Presidency, dated Pagalli, Samoa, July 13th, 1891, written by Elder W. O. Lee, president of the Samoan Mission:

"We have very bad news to report this month, and our hearts are filled with sympathy for all those who will be affected by the news. In reporting Sister Merrill's condition last month we thought she was recovering, but she had a billious attack and could not keep any food on her stomach. As a result she became very weak and a premature birth was the sad consequence. This happened on the 28th of June. The child died next day. As hour after hour passed by, the mother's relict Elder Lee to her bedside and after thanking her for waiting on her during her sickness, said that she was "going to take her home to rest and stay." because "they had come for her." She then talked with her husband, found him grieving, and all was over. The cause of death was left a mystery now to mind that nothing but time and the sight of God can dispel. The funeral was held the next day. The mother and baby were buried in one coffin. By permission from the manager of the German plantation, we buried them in the grove of a half mile from the house. Sister Merrill's death was a great shock to the people. We received the sympathy of our whole mission here and also many offers of assistance. We can say all that is good about our dear sister. Her life was good and pure, and a great desire to fulfill her mission, and do all the good in her power.

Sister Hale Ellen Hale Merrill was born Dec. 19, 1871, at Grantsville, Tooele, Utah, and was the daughter of Alma H. and Sarah A. Clark Hale. She left home in company with her husband, Elder Joseph Harris Merrill, of Smithfield, last February, and had been an active worker in the Sunday school and Y. L. M. I. A. She is the first sister who has died while on a mission.

Serious Accident.

Martinus Jensen, of Mountain Dell, called at our office today and related an account of a serious accident that occurred to his daughter Mary, in Farley's canyon, a few days ago. The young lady was out rolling with a lady and two gentlemen friends at the time of the accident, which was caused by her horse taking fright and throwing her off. Her foot remained fast in the stirrup and she was dragged a considerable distance, her head on the rocks of the animal before she could be rescued from her perilous position.

When picked up she was unconscious and in that condition carried to her home.

In Sugmore S. Young, who is spending the summer in the mountains, with his family, by near to where the accident occurred, was summoned and by his treatment the young woman is gradually recovering.

Strangers in my ears bones were broken, though Miss Jensen sustains the loss of three teeth. She was badly bruised and internally bruised.

Resigned to Go East.

Dr. J. L. Stera, who was elected Rabbi of the congregation of B'nai Israel of this city on June 22nd of the present year, has resigned his office to return East.

Rabbi Stern will leave near the Rio Grande Western tonight on the 8:00 train to go to New York and Washington, D. C., where he will spend his vacation. He will subsequently join his wife in the suburbs of Baltimore, with whom they will go to their old home in St. Louis. One of the reasons why Rabbi Stern vacated his office was a throat affection that has seriously troubled him of late. He said, however, in conversation with a NEWS reporter today, that he intends eventually to locate permanently in Salt Lake or some other western city.

Salt Lake City, he said, has splendid opportunities and resources within itself, in fact, it has every essential in the line of a large and prosperous [illegible]. It has an excellent climate, is healthy, has good water, and is in fact, perhaps, a more desirable place to live.

Bellamy's Idea of Home Rule.

LONDON, August 11.—Bellamy, chief secretary of Ireland, in a speech delivered at Tipperary yesterday, outlined the ideas of home self-government. He said he was in favor of home rule for the Conservative party, defined his proposal, but he argued that there were two reasons why local government should not be established from Dublin. The first was a sentimental one—because it had already been given to England and Scotland; and the second, because local government had been repeatedly promised to Ireland.

Balfour declared it would be madness to allow the necessities to administer the affairs of any class not represented in those bodies. Such permission would convert them into engines of tyranny and oppression.

The police question, Balfour continued, causes alarm, but he would never consent to the decentralization of the police, by placing over the local police, either to councils, or to local authorities in association with the grand jury. He further believed there would be no security for life and property, besides to secure the control of so costly a force. He was compelled to admit that he feared the result of the change would be to cost the taxpayers from a share in the government. Under the present system they guarded the councils by some form of minority representation. This, he said, he feared, would be frustrated and believed, as the political majority solidified, as the ancient rancor was forgotten, the gradual effect of the latter provisions would be to, that, those gentlemen, if they remained, would be largely recognized and elected as the best men to carry on the county business, and then remedy the chaos which have been too much, and too long separated.

Ruda's First Railroad.

The first Russian railroad was built during the reign of Ivan "Ivan" Czar, Nicholas I., from St. Petersburg to Moscow. It is the straightest road in existence, and was built in strict accordance with the Czar's instructions. The railroad at first met with the greatest opposition from the peasantry, and even from some of the merchants who refused to ride on it, saying that "the engine possessed the power of the devil," and as it passed them they always made the sign of the cross. There is a tradition in this country that before the destruction of the world anti-Christ will appear with a big iron stove. He is he will place all those who confess that they believe Christ to be the Son of God, and those who persist in the Czar's instructions, in the stove, when they saw the innovative emitting smoke and drawing a train of cars, shouted: "Anti-Christ has come among us! Let the power of the cross save us! In the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, let that instrument of the devil be crushed!" But the locomotive passed on without the slightest attention to their prayers. They next brought the miraculous image of the Virgin from the church and placed it on the tracks, and to see it grind to atoms. This caused the peasants to run away in the greatest fear crying out: "Woe to us! Woe! the power of the devil is greater than the power of God!" The without alarm spread among the people and they would not be seen near the iron cars. Determined to dispel this fear, Nicholas ordered thousands of the peasants to be taken by force and placed in the cars. Some were carried there in wagons, accompanied by a staff of priests raised in their canonized vestments. Thus numbers of the people were forced to ride from St. Petersburg to Moscow in the effort to convince them that the railroad was not the work of the devil, nor the invention of man. Some curious incidents frequently happened on the road. Two fat merchants were one day occupying the same carriage, when one said to the other: "Why, sir, are you going, Sabbatha little fatter?" Ivan Ivanovitch?" "Ha Mamov, Petr Garryovitch," he replied, "and you?" "Ha, ha, I am going to St. Petersburg," said Petr. "What wonderful inventions we are having in this Nineteenth Century. Here are you and I sitting in the same carriage yet going in different directions."
