NEWS OF THE WEST.

Malachi Dillon Receives an Ovation Upon Reaching Rawlins, Wyo.

CHARGES AGAINST A POSTMASTER

Chinamen and the Geary Act in Wyoming.—Safe Crackers in Nebraska, Etc.

Nephi, says the Ephraim Enterprise, is now trying to make another boom this time over the salt deposits that are said to be plentiful.

H. F. J. Warren, the Colorado Springs newspaper man, is again in trouble. Monday he was arrested at the Springs on the charge of perjury, for which offense he was indicted in Conejos county about eight months ago.

Malachi Dillon returned to Rawlins Thursday morning at 5 o'clock and was kept pretty busy all day long shaking hands with his friends. Malachi never looked better in his life. He came near being carried off his feet by the great rush of his friends to grasp his hand as he stepped from the train. His friends are doing all that is possible to induce him to remain here.—Rawlins, Wyo., Journal.

The farmers in the Cache la Poudre valley, Colorado, are now looking forward to a season of good crops and unusual prosperity. The much needed moisture has been received in the form of copious rains. It is estimated that an inch and a half of water has fallen during the past two days. The ground had become very dry, and rain was much needed. The grounds has been well watered, and the spring farming operations will now progress rapidly.

One or more safe crackers, it is impossible to state the number, broke into the bank of Wilsonville, Nebraska, on Wednesday night, cracking the vault outer doors of the safe, and nearly succeeded in opening the money chest where $2,500 were deposited, being only prevented by the dawn of the morning. They secured but $11.35 from a private drawer in the safe. No clue has been obtained to the guilty parties.

Three indictments have been found by the federal grand jury at Cheyenne. The first is against John T. Gallin, postmaster at Sayreville, in Fremont county, charged with robbing the postoffice. There were two counts against him, the second being for opening a registered letter. There was also an indictment found against Mrs. Gallin, charging her with taking the contents of a basket, which was passing through the postoffice. An indictment was found against Burt Montague, the former mail carrier between Cheyenne and Bear creek, charging him with stealing postage stamps. William Smith, a soldier at Fort Washakie, was indicted for selling liquor to Indians.

Says the Richfield Advocate: Wm. Morrison has employed Attorney Jacob Johnson to institute proceedings in the First district court against Chris. Sorenson to obtain title to thirteen acres of land alleged to have been sold to the plaintiff, but the deeds to which have not been given. This is the case wherein Morrison exchanged a ranch in Clear Creek canyon for twenty-six acres of land in Monroe field. Sorenson afterwards claimed that the patent would not issue to some of the land which Morrison had sold him, and demanded that the contract be rescinded, claiming that it was voidable under the statute of fraud. Nothing having been done by Sorenson to finally settle the matter, Morrison now commences the plaintiff and proposes to have the matter forever settled.

United States Deputy Collector Sniltzer, who has just returned from an official tour over the state of Wyoming, reports about 200 Chinamen in Wyoming as having refused to comply with the Geary law compelling them to sign certificates of registration. These men stand in with the contesting Six companies of San Francisco, and have resolved with them to take their chances on the decision of the United States Supreme Court next Wednesday, when the constitutionality of the law will be argued. Should the decision be against them, as now seems probable, every non-registered Chinaman will be arrested and sent back to his native country. The total number of Chinamen so far registered in Wyoming is 675, distributed as follows: Rock Springs, 617; Evanston, 20; Cheyenne, 18; Buffalo, 3; Fort McKinney, 3; Newcastle, 3; Fort Steele, 1.

Another sensational chapter in the celebrated McKellar murder case has been developed. One year ago, McKellar, a British subject, and one of the richest stock men in Mexico, was shot down from ambush and killed. The murder attracted attention throughout Mexico and England, owing to the prominence of the victim. Adolfo Villareal, a Mexican, whose ranch adjoined that of McKellar, was arrested on the charge of having instigated the murder. Villareal is worth $600,000 in land, stock and money, but with all his wealth he could not purchase favors from the Mexican authorities, who placed him in jail, while they continued work on the case. His accomplice was finally discovered—a poor laborer named Deonsio Galan, who was paid $1000 by Villareal to commit the murder. The cause that led to the crime was the construction of a wire fence by McKellar around his ranch, shutting out cattle of Villareal from grazing on his land. Upon Galan's arrest Villareal made full confession, and the case was tried a few months ago in the court of first jurisdiction, and the defendants were sentenced to twenty years each in the penitentiary. Villareal's property was also confiscated by the government and $40,000 paid to the widow of McKellar. It has been announced that the supreme court, to which the case was submitted for review, finding that a penitentiary system does not exist among us, and judging that the crime committed by Villareal and Galan merited death, revised the sentence and condemned the criminals to be shot. Defendants have secured a stay in the return of the mandate.

Cutting Seed Potatoes.

Cutting seed potatoes for planting has been a prolific subject for discussion, and many even today hold adverse opinions concerning the size of the pieces for planting. At the Indiana station there have been experiments conducted for a long time, and the authorities give as results arrived at by one of the men connected with the station. It was found that pieces of the same size, but some containing more eyes than others, produced almost the same size stalk and number of tubers. There was really no advantage in increasing the number of eyes to the piece. Increasing the size of the piece of potato, however, gave a corresponding increase in the number of stalks. From this it may be judged that a small piece of potato with enough only one eye, so preserving the number of eyes within decreasing the size of the piece of potato of no avail. The eyes at the most end of the potato act as single eye, and are as independent ones capable of producing as many stalks as there are apparent eyes. There is more importance to be also in which the potatoes are cut than to the number of eyes to the piece. Tubers should be cut uniformly in about 1, 2 or 3-ounce pieces. This may be done in almost entire disregard to the position of the eyes. It is desirable of size to the pieces that produces the most uniform and best crop, according to the experiments conducted at the Indiana station.
