The Appearance of the Church.

"The Church in the village," says a Hudson contributor, "lives and works like all other churches, but lacks a distinguished in a crowd of other religions. Its churches and their members have straight, outward, city figures. In comparison with them the other churches are angular and disjointed and flabby. The Church's face is beautiful, too, although it is somewhat colorless, half in the regard it is like the average Kirk. The Roman communion is not detractive, so to speak, it is not attractive at the first glance; you must look at it to see its compulsion. Look at the Church's face and you find it beautifully cut in lines, with large, bold eyes of a bright blue color, with a steadily sharp gaze. The whole expression is calm and determinate. It remains one of a half hour of gay. The front of your corner early in the morning, it throws no subtle lure to the influence of love, and yields with it grace to its demands. Rare is the case with the Church so."

The Sign of Equality.

Mathematical readers will be interested in the following quotation from Robert Recorde, who introduced the sign of equality into algebra.

Recorde was the first English author who wrote on the subject of algebra. In his treatise called "Whetstone of Witte," published about 1557 he says:

"To avoide the tedious repetition of these words, is equalle to, I will write, as I doe often in worke use, a paire of parallel lines of one lengthe, thus: =, because no 2 thynges can be more equalle." —Notes & Queries.
