Congressionalists at Quintero bay to Balmaceda's officers, even going so far as to state that he had on board his ship a representative of Balmaceda's army. This was called to Admiral Brown's attention by Minister Egan, and the admiral replied at some length, entering an emphatic denial of the charges made by the Chilean papers. Admiral Brown says that when he went ashore on the morning of the 20th, as was his custom, to take a walk, he met a government officer who told him that the opposition had made a landing at Quintero. The admiral proceeded to the office of Balmaceda's admiral, Viel, who gave him the particulars of the landing of the Congressionalists. There was no secret about it. Everyone on the streets of Valparaiso knew it. When Brown went back to the flagship he told the German admiral and the senior British officer that he was going to Quintero bay and would take an officer from their vessel if they desired. The German admiral sent one. Seeing no evidence of a battle near Quintero, Admiral Brown returned to Valparaiso late in the afternoon, and sent a cablegram to the navy department. The officer who went on shore with the dispatch told the admiral that every one knew the opposition had reached Aconcagua river. In fact, he obtained more information than the admiral had. The latter gave no information whatever of what he had observed, and the crew of the boat which went ashore were cautioned to answer no questions.

Admiral Brown's letter was published in the Valparaiso and Santiago papers, and the original charges were reiterated, and the fact the officials of the Balmaceda government had been given protection on the American warship was cited as a further proof of American hostility, although the same course had been pursued by the German Admiral. Quality of Pears.

[illegible] Again, if a tree which usually bears fruit of good quality gets a little sick, bringing on premature ripening, the fruit will be poor. Still again, those pears which ripen very soon after gathering are much improved by being taken from the tree before quite mature, while late ripening kinds like to stay on as long as possible. Some ripen better in a dark room and others in full light. In nothing is skill more at issue than in the proper ripening of pears.

"German Syrup"

Martinsville, N.J., Methodist Parsonage. "My acquaintance with your remedy, Boschee's German Syrup, was made about fourteen years ago, when I contracted a Cold which resulted in a Hoarseness and a Cough which disabled me from filling my pulpit for a number of sabbaths. After trying a Physician without obtaining relief—I cannot say now what remedy he prescribed—I saw the advertisement of your remedy and obtained a bottle. I received such quick and permanent help from it that whenever we have had Throat or Bronchial troubles since in our family, Boschee's German Syrup has been our favorite remedy and always with favorable results. I have never hesitated to report my experience of its use to others when I have found them troubled in like manner." Rev. W. H. Haggarty, of the Newark, New Jersey, M. E. Conference, April 25, '90.
