ELECTION RESULTS.

Favorable Influence on English Commercial Interests.

VALUES RISING IN ALL MARKETS.

An Era of Long and Active Business With the United States Anticipated.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—[Copyrighted, 1896, by the Associated Press.]—The Associated Press has commissioned a number of competent observers to make inquiries in various business circles of London as to what effect the election of McKinley had on the business outlook in England. In reviewing and summarizing the result of these inquiries, it is shown that the election has had a most favorable effect on the financial and commercial interests here. The universal rise of values in all markets here demonstrates this. The buoyancy is perhaps due to a release from the strain of anxiety which prevailed in all circles by the American campaign. It seems evident, also, the rise of values of English market is partly due to a belief which has gained currency, and which is based on cable advices from the United States, that while a Republican tariff extends than the present one is likely to be enacted, Mr. McKinley will not resort to the extreme protection policy which has generally been attributed to his name.

There is a feeling prevalent in this city that an era of long and active business will, the United States is about to begin on the stock exchange. The buoyancy which has characterized home trading is expected to extend to other departments.

In commercial quarters in London large estimates are given of the value of American stores which have already been received since the election. The dry goods business has recently been of moderate proportions, but the Manchester market now expects a spurt in American trade. Large shipments from the United States were until November 6th subjected to the condition that they should be endorsed if McKinley was defeated, but they are now being hurried forward.

The traffic managers for the American steamship lines are already feeling the change in this respect. During the recent business depression steamships were almost as rare as the belated dodo, but they are now rolling like manna in the desert.

In the iron market the effect of the election of McKinley is already beginning. Reports received from Birmingham are that a strong tone now more disposition to do business prevails in all departments. The prospect for the standard means continued prosperity here. It signifies large dividends for our mills and banks, thus carrying into effect many large loans, thus undertakings for which capital would not have been obtained in the United States had Bryan been elected. The result is for the general good of Mexico."

THE NEXT SENATE.

Difficult to Estimate Its Standing on the Silver Question.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The next Senate, it is believed, will stand Republicans 44, Democrats 35, Populists and Independents 12. This table takes all reviews out of the doubtful column:
