THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Governor Heber M. Wells has addressed to the Utah State Legislature his first message, which is given in full in the NEWS. The document covers a wide range of subjects and presents many important recommendations for consideration by the legislators. It is probable that each topic treated of will come up for discussion in some form in the regular legislative proceedings, when it will be given such attention in detail as the occasion seems to demand. Taking the message as an entirety it is broad and statesmanlike, dealing with issues of importance to the State in a frank and vigorous manner. The Governor has set a commendable example to the legislators and others, by his dignified and dispassionate method of performing an important public duty, which cannot fail to inspire a full confidence in his justice, courage, integrity and ability as chief executive of the State.

THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK.

The events in the political world have changed recently with such suddenness and kaleidoscopic diversity as to defy prognostications even with regard to the immediate future. In the Turkish question the leading feature is the European harmony. The sultan was confronted with a whole continent and yielded, apparently, to the demands made by the united powers. Then came the Venezuelan boundary question, and the European harmony was scattered to the four winds, England standing practically alone in her attitude toward the South American republic. But the Venezuelan question soon became overshadowed by the complications arising from recent events in Transvaal and at present these have developed an account with Germany, as the Venezuela trouble involved a reckoning with the United States. That the spirits of war are exercising a mighty influence among the children of men at present is undeniable. Will they succeed in igniting the torch that is to cause a general conflagration? is the question uppermost in the minds of many.

The Transvaal question is undoubtedly the most critical one so far. The builders of that little republic settled there for the purpose of having a country of their own, where they could follow their particular institutions, politically and religiously. They are mostly farmers, content with their own mode of living. They fought valiantly for their independence and bought it dearly. They invited nobody to come to their country, and molested nobody.

In the last ten years quite a foreign population has been attracted to this country on account of valuable mines discovered. They commenced by finding fault with existing conditions. The mode of living of those Uitlanders, or foreigners, is entirely different to that of the original Boers, or farmers, and yet they demand control of the country on account of their numbers and the revenue they are required to pay. They object, among other things, to being compelled to contribute to the maintenance of a state church and also to a law by which only Dutch is a compulsory study in the schools. That the Uitlanders have obtained sympathy in England on account of these and similar grievances is a fact, although it is well known that England herself still compels her dissenters to support the church; and that her interest in the quarrel between the original settlers and intruders of Transvaal, therefore, is anything but disinterested, appears evident.

A crisis was reached when Dr. Jameson, president of an English mercantile company in South Africa, planned an invasion of Transvaal for the alleged purpose of rescuing the Uitlanders. England, of course, almost immediately repudiated this enterprise, but the German emperor, who for a long time has been watching with jealousy the progress of Great Britain in Africa, took occasion to declare for the Boers and virtually challenged the English government to proceed any further. He denied British suzerainty over Transvaal and held a conference with a representative of the little republic, after which its president demanded a large indemnity of England for Dr. Jameson's invasion. This is the present aspect of the case. It looks very much as if the German emperor were seeking a cause fall against England. At least this appears to be the general opinion there, and accordingly, the greatest activity exists in naval and military circles. The question is, will Great Britain pay the indemnity? If not, will Germany assist Transvaal in enforcing it?

Conservative papers generally do not believe that the difficulty will result in extreme measures, and they are probably right. Still, it must not be forgotten that an attack on England by Germany would be in perfect harmony with the policy of Prussia since its destiny was outlined by Bismarck. There is but little doubt that the idea of a triumph over the greatest naval power of Europe would be a particularly alluring one to the ruler of an empire that gradually has risen to eminence by humiliating its neighbors. England is no longer a formidable power. Her prestige is on the wane, owing chiefly to her own policy, and her isolated position almost invites an ambitious government to assume an insulting attitude. Besides, wars sometimes break out unexpectedly, as if by the decree of a ruling Providence. The fate of nations does not rest ultimately with its statesmen. The terrors of destruction is also wielded by the Almighty for the purpose of clearing the nations of the iniquity that threatens to inundate them. For these reasons it is not easy to foresee what the outcome will be. In the meantime, it cannot but be the earnest desire of all who love peace, that a solution may be found of the existing troubles in harmony with the principles of justice and humanity.

THE OLD ANVIL AGAIN.

The NEWS has received from Mrs. Josephine Mallory Whitaker, of Albion, Cassia county, Idaho, the following letter, with reference to the Mallory family who camped with Mr. Phillips in Iowa, after the Nauvoo exodus, and left there an ancient anvil, now owned and treasured by Mr. Thatcher of the Buckeye state:

Mr grandfather, Lemuel Mallory, left Nauvoo with the Mormons who were driven from that place, he had two wives. His son Elisha was my father, who died two years ago in California. He was about twenty years of age at the time mentioned in the News. My grandfather died at Logan 50 years ago and had twins born to him at the age of 90. I know of no other Mallory in the Church outside of my family, and think this must be the one who camped with Mr. Ira Phillips in Iowa.

OBSERVE ITS SPIRIT.

A bill has been introduced in the Senate to provide for the payment of court stenographers in the State. For the larger judicial districts the salary is fixed at $2,000 and for the smaller ones at $1,500 per year. In addition to this, the stenographers are to be allowed actual traveling expenses, "and mileage" each way in their district; also for transcribing their notes in longhand 15 cents per folio, or 100 words.

The Constitution sets the example of economy in taking a position antagonistic to excessively large salaries, and strikes a blow at the ice system of compensation by providing that all State, district, county, town and school officers, excepting notaries public, boards of arbitration, court commissioners, justices of the peace and constables shall be paid fixed and definite salaries; and that all fees collected by salaried officers shall be paid into the fund indicated by legislative enactment. For court stenographers, the salary named is not out of the way, nor is there anything improper in the payment of actual traveling expenses of such district officer. But recent events in Salt Lake county have emphasized the fact that this mileage business is anything but "fixed and definite" as applied as salaries. The salaries being fixed, and actual expenses paid, the addition of mileage thereto in the law would be a clear violation of the Constitution. So also is the fee for transcribing, when intended to go to the compensation of the stenographer.

The Legislature may provide for fees, to be paid "into the proper treasury;" but to direct a collection by a district officer of such fee from the State or county for transcribing notes is another thing entirely. Provision should be made to pay the stenographer a salary to compensate him for placing his notes in form available for court purposes, when required in the course of legal procedure, and the law on this subject should be within the letter and spirit of the Constitution. As to the fee of 15 cents per hundred words, collectible from parties ordering the transcript, the charge is about 50 per cent higher than it should be in these days of typewriting.

NORMAN COE, volume one, of the Intermountain Mining Review came to hand today. It is a well-edited, neatly-printed fourteen-page quarto, by C. T. Harte, devoted to the mining and smelting interests. The initial number is editorial of mining news from Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Montana and elsewhere. If the Review's standard of excellence as shown in the first issue is kept up from week to week, it ought to obtain liberal patronage.

BRADSTREET'S LAMENTS that the plan of committee reorganization adopted by the national senate has placed the finance committee under control of the silver men, and says that it is a very disconcerting circumstance that at the outset of the Senate's deliberations on financial measures the control of such an important committee should have fallen into the hands of retrograde elements."

Over 100,000 pounds of dressed frog legs shipped to the markets in the season of 1895 makes a pretty good showing for the frog industry in the swamp lands of northwestern Missouri.

THE LEGISLATOR who thinks he knows what is in the newspapers before they are published may find out that there is something yet to learn in this world.

PRESS COMMENT.

New York Mail and Express: All hail to the forty-fifth State of the United Utah is no longer a Territory. At noon today she stepped out of her swaddling clothes and assumed the station and assumed the dignity and responsibility of Statehood. We can imagine the scenes enacted, and about to be enacted, in Salt Lake City, the festivity, the congratulations, the banquets, the unusual social sense of new importance on the part of prominent citizens and public officials and the sudden rise in the price of corner lots.

We shall not say anything unpleasant to mar the harmony of the occasion. We will even suppress all suspicions as to the Mormons. There are any number of things to think about in Utah besides the Mormons and the possible or probable effect of their political influence upon the future career of the new State. The Territorial census of 1895 credits the new State with a population of 247,775, being an increase of more than 11 per cent over the figures given by the Federal census of 1890. Some of our more curious readers may be surprised to learn that the males outnumber the females by 9,000. It is cheering to know that about four-fifths of the population is American born. The valuation of the State is $76,000,000, of which nearly half is land, $17,000,000 in personal property and $11,000,000 in railroads. During the last twenty-five years 1,267,000 acres of public lands have been disposed of by the land office. Manufactures are rendered with the use of $5,500,000 of capital and more than 11,000 horse power. They employ 8,000 operatives. The bank capital is $6,000,000, and the deposits more than $5,000,000. In the general home trade $14,000,000 of capital is employed and the annual sales exceed $35,000,000.

Utah possesses every possible promise of future prosperity and progress as the youngest, but by no means weakest, State in the Union. Monday will be a great day in Utah's experience, and will be ever memorable in its history. That day has been fixed upon for the meeting of the Legislature and for the inauguration of the State officers recently elected. It is gratifying as well as highly appropriate that the first Legislature of the new State is Republican by a large majority, and that the first two United States senators to be chosen will belong to the political party that stands for protection, prosperity and progress.

No one can deny that the new State has begun its career under auspicious circumstances.

New York World: Another star has been set in the field of glory. Another people has reached political maturity. Another State has arisen and taken its place in the august sisterhood of the American Union.

Utah has been admitted, and from the Fourth of July next there will be officially forty-five stars in the flag of our nation, which is the handsomest of all national emblems. That is nearly three and one-half times the number of the original states, and other states are growing up that in the near future will be admitted to this imposing family of self-governing commonwealths.

Utah, the forty-fifth State in the Union, is at the time of its admission richer and more populous than many of the original thirteen states at the time they threw off British yoke. Utah has a population of a quarter of a million, with a lower proportion of foreign born than thirteen of the original states.

She possesses a magnificent domain, richly endowed by nature and highly cultivated as the present time. The cities and towns are rich and thriving, and her people well educated, energetic and patriotic.

But for the Mormon Church, whose polygamous element has been destroyed by the strong hand of the Federal government, Utah would have been a State long ago.

In actual wealth and undeveloped resources and in her people, whose hardihood and intelligence are of a high order, she is stronger today than many a European kingdom.

Her dowry from the government in the Statehood bill passed by Congress and signed by the President is an imperial one. One hundred sections of land are given for public buildings at the capital, 500,000 acres for an Agricultural college, two townships and 100,000 acres for the University of Utah, 500,000 acres for irrigating purposes, for an insane asylum, a school of mines, a deaf and dumb asylum, a reform school and an institution for the blind, each 100,000 acres, and for a mineral hospital 50,000 acres. The United States penitentiary near Salt Lake City is given to the new State and liberal endowments are made for the common school system.

The most important requirements in the admission of Utah have been fulfilled and what remains are but the usual formalities. The last of these will be an official order for the army and navy declaring the addition of another star of the Union. This will take effect on the Fourth of July.

The best anodyne and expectorant for the cure of colds, coughs and sore throat, lung and bronchial troubles, is, unquestionably, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, the only specific for colds and coughs admitted on exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair.

"Old, yet ever new, and simple and beautiful ever," sings the poet, in words which might well apply to Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the most efficient and scientific blood-purifier ever offered to suffering humanity. Notwithstanding its superior merit keeps it as long at the front.
