CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The sixty-seventh semi-annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will convene in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, at 10 o'clock on Sunday morning, October 4th, 1896.

The officers and members of the Church generally are cordially invited to attend the meetings of the Conference.

WILFORD WOODRUFF,
GEORGE Q. CANNON,
JOSEPH F. SMITH,
First Presidency.

TO INDEPENDENT VOTERS.

The election campaign this fall offers an easier opportunity than has been had in many years for voters to place patriotism above partisanship in the making up of their ballots. Locally speaking, the people are made absolutely free from political bossism. The disintegration of parties is in progress, and new combinations of elements are being effected which a few months ago would have been deemed quite impossible. No one now is questioned or criticised in any official or serious manner for breaking loose from past affiliations and working for the victory of what would formerly have have been deemed his political opposition. Strange alliances have been and will be formed for the easiest that is impending, and units usually antagonistic will be found marching shoulder to shoulder to the November fray. The situation all together is novel if not extraordinary; and if it shall continue to its legitimate end, there will be many a profound surprise when the votes come to be counted.

The NEWS is therefore happy in being able to advise a policy which it has always believed in, but which for some time it has refrained from emphasizing by reason of the misconstruction of motive that would have been incurred. We refer to the policy of scratching the names of unworthy candidates off the ticket, and of substituting the names of better men from the opposition ballot. It is a sincere pleasure to be able to declare that no voter will be blamed for or taunted with inconsistency this year, for selecting as his choice the very best candidates who are up for office, regardless of the ticket upon which or the party by which those candidates have been named. In the whirl and the shaking up that are certain to ensue, we shall be much disappointed in the discernment and independence of the people of the State if they do not elect to their local offices a much superior set of incumbents than are commonly chosen when party lines are closely drawn and it is deemed treachery to overstep them.

Everybody knows there is room for improvement in the personnel of the office holding fraternity. The incompetency is not confined to any one party nor to any one town or county. We cannot be accused of partiality, therefore, in dwelling upon and declaiming against it. Generally speaking, we believe the men who were successful in obtaining position are well-meaning and honest; and there are high qualifications. But in places of great responsibility, where vast interests are involved, something more than good intentions is necessary. Bishop Edward Hunter, of animed memory, once expressed the idea when, answering a petition in behalf of a applicant who was vouched for as deserving of special consideration by virtue of being "a good man," he exclaimed: "Good, yes, good! But what is he good for?" Capacity for the performance of the duties involved is what the community has a right to demand of those whom it is asked to elect to position—and this, too, without regard to the emblem or name of the party at the head of the ticket on which the candidate or names appear. An applicant who has had no experience of who has shown none of the capability referred to ought to be rejected at the polls for his presumption in taking the nomination on general principles we are almost ready to say that the man who works harder to get a nomination ought to be the most quickly and completely defeated.

Speaking at small ex near at home, we would most earnestly urge the importance of choosing strong and solid county officials. Salt Lake City and county are in a position where they cannot afford to experiment with untried or questionable guides. The ripest judgment, the most exalted sense of public responsibility, the highest qualities of honesty, economy, and executive skill, will be necessary to repair the part of the State from the burdens under which it groans. If the money conventions realize the situation as they should, good tickets will be presented for the people's acceptance; but if on either side there is a failure in this respect in even the smallest degree, we shall hope to see the blunder corrected at the ballot box by the repudiation of the objectionable part. There ought to be independence and patriotism enough in the county to reject the whole Republican ticket if it is further in strength and caliber in the other one; and we hope and trust there is not a Democratic stronghold so bidebound as to elect a freegrabber, a weakling or a scrub as against a high-minded, efficient, experienced man of affairs on the Republican ticket.

BURIAL OF SUICIDES.

A correspondent writing from Fillmore makes inquiry concerning the nothing and burial ceremony of one who is a member of the Church who has committed suicide. In reply to the question we note the fact that it is beyond comprehension how a member of the Church, understanding the genius of the Gospel even to the most limited extent that any member of ordinary perceptive faculties can, should commit suicide while in a sound state of mind. The doctrine of the Church is so utterly at enmity with the terrible crime of self murder that no one capable of membership should fail to recognize the abhorrence in which the suicide is held.

So far as concerns the inquiries made, it is difficult to give a pointed reply, because each case has peculiar features that affect its determination. If there were a deliberate suicide, where it was evident that no unsoundness of mind had interposed to lead to the act, the quietest the funeral ceremony the better. In case there were such a lamentable act as the taking of one's own life, one thing should be remembered, and that is that the dead person can have no hearing in a mortal court; therefore each doubt should be resolved in his favor. This would be a general rule concerning the nothing and preparation for the grave. As to public funeral services, the Stake authorities have their instructions on the subject from the general authorities, and we presume the Bishops in each Stake have them in turn, so that there ought to be no question as to what to do. Certainly there should be nothing that would cause the crime of self murder to be looked upon with the least degree of allowance or palliation.

JOKING, OR NOT POSTED.

The Springfield, Mass., Republican, in its notes from Bath, Maine, has the following:

President Hyde of Bowdoin college has just returned from a trip west as far as Utah. He finds the silver sentiment overwhelming there and in Colorado, and he regards it as a temporary aberration which has seized upon the minds of a people who are naturally of a speculative temperament. In Illinois and Ohio it seemed like another world. Much attention was has been done there for the sound money cause.

When people who are well acquainted with the residents of Illinois and Ohio as well as of Utah note the Maine professor's remark about the "naturally speculative temperament" of the population of Utah, as compared with that of the two states in "another world," they will discern at once the grim humor of the pedagogue's joke. Yet Mr. Hyde was not fair when he said there was more of a speculative temperament displayed here than in Ohio and Illinois, since the reverse is notably the case, as is readily recognized by those who are well informed on the subject. And as his conclusion of temporary aberration is based on his assumed predominance of the speculative tendency, the fact compels the transfer of the aberration, if any there be, to Mr. Hyde's "another world" locality. The gentleman's suggestion, if made in earnest, of derision, as implied in the term aberration, in the financial view as to silver, shows that he is not posted on the history of the silver sentiment in this State.

THE SIBERIAN RAILROAD.

Not little attention was paid to the announcement made not long ago that the first train on the Siberian railroad had arrived in Tomsk, yet that event may be regarded as one of the greatest of the decade. It proves that the gigantic undertaking is nearing its completion. The time is not far distant when the shores of the Baltic will be connected with the Pacific, by an iron band winding over two continents through some of the most fertile regions of the globe. The completion of this road cannot fail to be a factor in the future development of civilization.

The United States consul at St. Petersburg, in a report to the government, mentions the remarkable progress already made in the industries of Siberia. Almost every week new establishments are started, and there are shipping out goods formerly purchased in European Russia. The coal and iron industries are flourishing; as an instance is mentioned the formation of one company with a capital of 18,000,000 rubles, for the purpose of manufacturing iron goods; and there are others of almost the same magnitude.

It is probable that the world has hardly yet realized the significance of the road that in a few years will make it possible to go from any of the large cities of Europe to the seaports of China and Japan with the speed of the steam engine and the comforts of a palace car. But it is certain that this road will exercise a mighty influence upon the peoples of Asia and entirely change their relations to the rest of the world. It will also materially influence the policy of Russia both with regard to Asia and the Balkan states. For the accomplishment of the plans of the czar's government in eastern Asia a certain amount of tranquility will be needed in Turkey, and it is undoubtedly owing to this fact that at present all troubles are broken and the sultan has a supporter at St. Petersburg, while England apparently shows a disposition to make it unpleasant for the sick man.

The Siberian road is about 4,500 miles long. It will be finished the year to Janisei and in 1904 it is believed the entire road will be opened for traffic.

JAPAN AND ANIMALS.

It is interesting to note that in the countries most advanced in civilization the most generous use is made of animals adapted to domestic use, and the greatest care is taken to preserve them in a healthy condition. Some of the semi-barbarous countries have little use for several varieties of animals, but nearly all find great value in some beasts of travel and burden. Among the countries that present an anomaly in being deficient in domestic animals is Japan. She is behind the barbarous nations of Asia in the advantage to be gained from a good supply of those beasts that are capable of domestication, yet has made some remarkable strides in the way of improvements which, in modern enlightened nations, are supplanting the ox, horse and other animals in certain lines. But the civilization of Japan has reached a point when the domestication of animals appears an imperative necessity for progress, although the people generally will have to pass through an important course of training before they are equal to the situation.

As affairs now are, a stranger to Japan is forcibly struck in looking upon the landscapes there by the fact that animals are notably absent. There are no cows—the Japanese neither drink milk nor eat meat; there are few horses, and these are imported mainly for the use of foreigners—the wagons are pulled and pushed by coolies, and pleasure carriages are also drawn by men; few dogs, and these are not used as watchdogs, beasts of burden, or in hunting, except by foreigners; no sheep—wool is not used in clothing, the staples being silk and cotton; no pigs—pork is not an article of diet, and lard is unknown in cooking; no goats, or mules, or donkeys. There are some wild animals, notably bears. The art of war is coming the use of cavalry and artillery horses, and some few of the aristocracy are learning the art of horseback riding. But Japan has several long strides to make to reach the plane of civilized nations generally, and her arrival at that point will not be effected until the people appreciate the value to man of domestic animals.

NO BLACK HAWK WAR PENSIONS.

Mrs. A. C. of Salt Lake City writes to the News as follows:

I have been informed that the widows of soldiers who served in the Black Hawk war are entitled to a pension. If they are entitled to such remuneration from the government, will you please inform me through your columns how to proceed to obtain it?

Our correspondent has been misinformed; there has been no provision for the widows of Black Hawk war veterans. Even the actual expenses of that campaign have not been paid, and the militia who served against the Indians have never been granted remuneration by the government. It is understood, however, that active steps are being taken in the State to press the claim for those services, in the hope that the government will settle the bill, which it ought to do.
