MR. AND MRS. PARNELL

Intimate Friends and Receive Intimates at Walsingham Terrace Domestic Happiness.

THE FUTURE PLANS OF THE COUPLE.

An Intended Visit to the United States During the Coming Autumn.

(By Telegraph to the News.)

PARNELL'S PLANS.

He Hopes to be Reinstated on the Irish Leader.

LONDON, June 26.—Mr. and Mrs. Parnell entertained some friends yesterday evening at Walsingham terrace, and received today several intimates. Parnell has sent greetings to a number of adherents in the Commons, expressing pleasure that his prolonged period of seclusion is over, and thanking them for their steadfast friendship during his troubles.

He writes under apparent conviction that his marriage will enable him to be reinstated as the Irish leader. A strong impression in the same direction prevails in the Commons, in spite of the knowledge of the fact that the Liberals adopt, and will not accept the marriage as condoning his offence.

THE ENGLISH LIBERALS

are ready to hail him as a man being fit best to atone for his fault. No immediate restoration of confidence has yet been granted and the Liberal leaders is possible, nor is it probable that the factious feud will end without long opposition from some of his new friends. Charles Dilke, who broke at the marriage has deprived his foes of one of their most potent weapons of attack. His moderation secured political reinstatement. It is generally believed, becomes a matter of time.

The future plans of Mr. and Mrs. Parnell indicate that after a period of seclusion it is their intention to enlarge their social circle. Mrs. Parnell talks of leaving Brighton and taking a large house in London. If she wins the probate suit, she will be rich and she is confident of success. Her friends feel not say she aims to form a political and social salon, to create which she has a valuable political ally of Parnell with whom she has discussed every turn of affairs more intimately than any member of his party. It can be predicted with certainty that under her open guidance, Parnell will immediately modify his tactics.

In the fight with the McCarthyites reconciliation will be the watchword. The first sunset, Carlow, will be fought on the Parnellite side with great attention to personal attention. Hitherto Parnell practically withdrew from the leadership of his party, his physicians warning him to avoid excitement.

PARNELL HAPPY.

Parnell, during an interview at Brighton today upon his marriage to Mrs. O'Shea, said he found it impossible to procure a marriage license for any country church, and in order to prevent delay he thought it best to have the ceremony performed at the registry office at Steyning. Parnell said that a church ceremony would be celebrated in London as soon as he and Mrs. Parnell were able to put in a fortnight's residence there. This would probably be after the election at Carlow for a successor in Parliament to the late O'Gorman Mahon.

Parnell intends in the future to devote special attention to the industrial question, in which he is more interested than in any other at present. He expects to be given general support in Dalton's Irish soul bill, believing that it is a well-conceived measure and that it will greatly benefit the Irish tenants and labor owners.

Parnell said he intended, if possible, to visit the United States during the coming autumn, being of the opinion that the sentiment of the Irish and Irish-Americans on the other side is in his favor. He will try to attend the Irish convention to be held in Baltimore.

When asked what he thought would be the political effect of his marriage, he said he had not given that question a thought, and did not think it of it. He was now experiencing greater happiness than ever previously during the entire course of his life.

The reporter with whom Parnell had this interview adds that he never saw Parnell in a more healthy condition or in better spirits.

The Indian Trouble.

DENVER, June 26.—A special from Albuquerque, N. M., says: The alarming reports sent out concerning the Indian troubles on the Navajo reservation are more sensational than real. One of the paymasters located here says the Indians this season indulged in a "snake dance." A few white settlers near the reservation, unacquainted with the habits of the Navajos, became timid and made exaggerated reports.

Several troops of cavalry are on the ground, but no trouble is anticipated. There is some trouble with the Moqui branch of the Pueblos living near the Navajo reservation. They object to the United States Authorities taking their children and sending them to school in the East and some of the young bucks are executing a war dance, as a kind of a bluff, and the Moqui at the reservation can easily handle them.

Forsythe's Election Delayed.

CHICAGO, June 26.—Contrary to expectation, no action was taken tonight by the World's Fair Directory on the nomination of William Forsythe of California for chief of the horticulture department. Charles W. Ketcham and Miss Sarah T. Hallowell of Chicago were married at the principal residence to Chief Irwin of the fire-fifth department.

It is erected according to the plans of Miss Sophia Hayden, of Boston. It is to be 200 by 400 feet in size, and three stories high. President Gilman of John Hopkins university, who has been tendered the position by chief of the bureau of liberal arts, decided that he could not accept, as it would take all his time and attention to the duties of the position, and this he was unwilling to give to the exclusion of his official duties at the university.

Coinage of Dimes and Quarters.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—The demand for dimes continues unabated, and the mints of the coinage for the present will be of that denomination, although twenty-five cent pieces will also be coined at San Francisco. The coinage of dimes during the last three years has been $3,136,612. It is proposed to distribute this coinage among the mints at San Francisco, Philadelphia and New Orleans. If the coinage of a no cent coin, one cent and five cent pieces, is confined to the mint at Philadelphia. This coinage has been very heavy for several years past. During the last three years the coinage of five cent pieces amounted to $2,993,161, and the coinage of one cent pieces to $1,395,1[illegible]. This has all been absorbed by the public, and there is every indication that the demand for these coins will continue large for months to come, and will necessarily be the work at the Philadelphia mint.

The coinage at the mint at San Francisco and Carson City after July 1st will be confined to gold pieces and such coinage of subsidiary silver coins as may be required on the Pacific coast.

Trade dollar bullion, which is to be coined into silver standard dollars, is stored in the mints at Philadelphia and New Orleans. It results from the melting into bars of trade dollars, reclaimed at their face value under the act of March 3, 1887. The total number recovered was 7,000,000, a portion of which has already been coined into standard silver dollars and of March 3, 1891, provided, however, that the balance should be coined into standard silver dollars only.

The amount stored at Philadelphia is 1,[illegible] fine ounces and the amount at New Orleans is 3,[illegible] fine ounces. This will make in all about $3,150,000 in standard silver dollars. The net profit above its cost is a little over $[illegible].

A large amount of subsidiary silver and minor coins will also have to be received at Philadelphia during the same period.

Harvard and Yale.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 26.—The sixteenth annual four-mile eight-oared straight away race between Yale and Harvard university crews was rowed this morning over the Thames course from Whitlings Point to Gale's Ferry, and won by Harvard by eleven lengths. Time—Harvard, 21:[illegible]; Yale's, 21:52.

Harvard's victory is the biggest surprise to the athletics for many many years. Good judges of rowing concede the race to Yale almost to a man, and so strong was this sentiment in favor of Yale that the stakes of money left at the pool rooms went uncovered even at odds of 100 to 60.

Harvard had the lead at the start and kept it to the finish. Yale's men their shell went shoot, the crimson supporters on the observation train and innumerable steamers became frantic with joy. Yale's stroke of a remarkably speed some very rechen work was done by the steadiest captain and three were two collisions and but there were no serious results, was simply a matter of good luck. Two miles up the river the big boat "Gypsy" ran into the side of a steamboat, and throwing twenty-five or thirty people off their feet. At the finish where the channel was crowded with all sorts of craft, the crowd on the Gypsy ran into a collision with the "Illinois Island," which the big "America," knocking many people sprawling over the deck. Fortunately no one was injured.

The scene at the finish were of a gay character. Harvard men being wild with joy, while thousands of Yale supporters were decidedly crestfallen over their unexpected defeat. The scenes along the river were of an unusually brilliant and lively character. An observation train of thirty-five cars carried an immense crowd, while at least seventy-five steamers, steam and sail yachts followed the crews over the course or were anchored in desirable situations. The trolley pleasure along the banks were also crowded with sight seers.

Promptly at 11:30 the crews came down the river towards the start boats. Harvard worked into position a minute later, Yale soon after.

When the crews were given the word Harvard caught it first and setting the last stroke of 41, at once passed the bow of their boat slightly in front. Yale started with a 38-stroke. For a few strokes both crews caught a good and splashed quite badly, then settling down each crew gave a pretty exhibition of rowing. The Harvards however, were doing anything their foot along a better speed than ever shown in practice and were gradually creeping away from Yale. Yale's work on the other hand was much inferior to that seen in their daily practice. At the half mile Harvard led by a clear length. All during the second half Harvard continued to gain. Here the steamers crowded on the boats and the excitement began to do some ragged work for a few strokes. Nearing the mile flag, Harvard increased her lead to nearly three lengths. From the mile to the mile and a half, Harvard continued to gain and it became a question as to how many lengths Harvard would defeat Yale. In the last half Harvard by strong and steady work increased her lead to nearly six lengths. Yale's boat seemed to settle and hang, and it was now a procession. Just after passing the navy yard the big "Chase" got square into Harvard's course, and they had to stop and wait while Yale swept Yale, however profited by this mistake, and Harvard, getting back into their course, continued to increase the lead between herself and Yale. At two and a half miles Harvard gained an additional three lengths, and after passing the three and a half mile flag Yale's crew settled down to a final spurt, and late again Harvard increased her superiority in every way over the New Haven crew, both crews doing excellent work, but Harvard's shell continued to move ahead of Yale's, and they passed the pole pulling forty strokes a minute while Yale eleven lengths behind, rowed thirty-seven. Harvard's crew rowed of course in the opposition, and Yale paddled up to Gale's ferry. The officials were: Referee, William A. Mackellar, Columbia; judges, Joseph Ward, Harvard; Charles A. Cook, Yale; timers, Charles F. Adams, Harvard, George A. Dee, Yale.

The cause of Yale's unexpected and and overwhelming defeat is found in the fact that two of her men, the two most important in the boat, the stroke, Gould, and Bigelman, No. 7, were not equal to the occasion and lost their hearts. As Harvard neared the finish the lead near the end of the first mile, Gould cut his stroke short and pulled with diminished effect, the rest of the crew instead of keeping time with Gould, pulled and Bigelman's stroke. After a while Bigelman got rattled, the result being that for the greater part of the race the men in the waist and bow followed the stroke set by Captain Brewster. The difference in the swing of the men were slight, but enough to cause Yale's boat to hang perceptably after each stroke and to be so badly all that the bow frequently was out of the water for three or four feet. Both crews were also greatly annoyed by the swell from the big steamers that followed the crews. In speaking of this point, George A. Dee, a well-known Yale man, expressed himself in the emphatic way of declared Yale ought not to row another race over the Thames course. A member of other Yale men declared Yale's crushing defeat due simply to the fact that they were outrowed by Harvard. The Harvard crew came down the river at 4 p. m., and, headed by standard bearers carrying their colors, they left in today's train, went to the Pequot house where they were tonight tendered a reception.

Several Powder Houses Blown to Atoms.

GALVESTON, June 26.—During the prevalence of a severe storm this forenoon lightning struck and exploded a powder-house of the American Powder company, containing 2000 kegs of powder. Although these powder magazines were located near Eagle grove, four miles west of the city, the shock of the explosion caused houses to rock and sway in the city as if there had been an earthquake. Glass was broken, doors flung open, plaster fell from the walls, goods came tumbling down from the shelves and people were badly frightened. Where the powder houses stood there is now a vacancy of a building left, and there is a hole in the ground 120 feet in circumference and twenty to twenty-five feet in depth. Buildings in the immediate neighborhood and for three-quarters of a mile distant were badly wrecked, and a number of persons hurt, one man fatally.
