NEWS OF THE WEST.

An Idaho Editor Arrested on a Charge of Theft.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM BURNING.

Child Made Insane by Foolishness of Boys.—Broke His Neck.—Bodies Recovered.—Other Items.

C. L. Heesler, a machinist employed at the Missouri Pacific roundhouse, at Pueblo, was instantly killed on Saturday by being struck in the back of the neck with a spike while at work under a car. His neck was broken and death was instantaneous. Heesler was at work under a car and the men were lowering it from the jacks when the accident occurred. He was a married man and leaves a wife and three small children.

J. W. Lamereaux, formerly associated with Mr. Chapin in the editorial management of the Idaho Falls Times, was arrested at Pocatello on Saturday on a charge of having stolen a trunk which had been attached by J. H. Rush, president of the Burgess bank, at Idaho Falls, for a board bill. Deputy Sheriff Winn, of Bingham county, took the prisoner in custody and lodged him in the city jail until morning when he was taken to Blackfoot to appear before the grand jury.

The track of the Santa Fe, Prescott and Phœnix Railroad reached Prescott on Saturday and the cars are now in port. Regular service was commenced on Monday between Prescott and Ash Fork, where the new road connects with the Santa Fe system. Two trains each way will be run to connect with the Santa Fe overland trains. Work is being pushed toward Phœnix as rapidly as possible, and the company expects to get it completed by January 1st. About twenty-five miles are already graded between Prescott and Phœnix.

Montpelier Journal: A little boy—Thomas King of Georgetown was adjudged insane last week by Judge Lee and committed to the asylum at Blackfoot. When Sheriff Pierson took him to that institution he thought it was desirable to administer on account of being too young. The injuries to the child which resulted in his becoming insane, were received several years ago, and were the result of the work of foolish boys, who held the child over an old bangle and then dropped him on his head.

A. P. Brewer, a working timber owner of Saginaw, Mich., and two of his sons have been looking over the timber lands on the Atlantic and Pacific. They were at Albuquerque, N. M., in consultation with General R. A. Williamson, land commissioner of the railroad, and it is learned that they have about bargained for 1,000,000 acres in the vicinity of Flagstaff and Williams. The purchasers intend to erect immense sawmills on their timber belts, and intimate that several of the mills will be in operation in a few months.

Lewiston Teller: The treaty with the Nez Perces for the disposal of their unallotted lands has been signed by the required numbers and there is now no shadow of a doubt but that the great reservation will be opened for settlement by next spring. Lewiston is in luck. The opening of the reservation will create a boom in her favor that nothing can withstand. The commissioners who have been at work during the past month obtaining signatures, authorize this paper to report this week that enough and more than enough names have been signed to confirm the treaty.

Bellevue Herald: Calamities seem to come upon people in fast succession when once started. Mrs. D. L. Johns and daughter, of Hailey, had only gone through a most severe ordeal in the way of legal prosecution, when the news came that D. L. Huntsman, only son of Mrs. Johns, was murdered lately in the Sandwich Islands. He was formerly a photographer in Hailey. Recently he had been practicing law in Honolulu, but assumed editorship of a paper, and attacked the revolutionary government. He was probably assassinated for political reasons. He was about 30 years of age.

Five dead bodies of the nine victims of the Buffalo mill explosion were taken out Saturday morning from the 400-foot level. They were those of Edward Pascoe, Richard Andrew, Evan Pugh, Anton Bieva and James Nattis. As to the fate of the other four uninjured men there is no doubt. It will probably require four or five days time before these bodies are brought to the surface, as they are lying on the 500 and 700 foot levels and are beneath the flood of water which poured into the mine. The Coroner commenced taking testimony Saturday, but a verdict will not be reached for a day or two. The mysterious origin of the fire and Foreman Kramer's action are receiving thorough investigation at the inquest. The names of the four men whose bodies are at the lower levels are Thomas Gray, Richard Tremouth, Frank Girard and Simon Revaris.

Idaho Falls Register: On Wednesday last while the wind was blowing a perfect gale, Mrs. Houk, wife of Houk, who lives about a mile north of Blackfoot, Idaho, noticed that the stack was on fire. She had only a barrel of water and could do nothing towards extinguishing it, and ran out to the kitchen stove to endeavor to save them and in so doing her clothes caught fire. By the most superhuman efforts on her part she extinguished the fire of her clothes before she was burned to death, but not until her arms, hands and back were fearfully burned, her hair being almost entirely burned from her head. No one went to her assistance for a long time, everyone who saw the smoke supposing it to be from sage brush, until once she came in and reported the stable burned. The fire is supposed to have caught from a spark from the chimney of their own house as it was in line with the car at. The hay stacks were behind the barn, and the wind kept them from burning.

THE INDEPENDENT STYLE.

How a Clever Newspaper Doomed a Pompous New York Editor.

A newspaper man from the west visited New York on one occasion and called on a great editor there, with whom he had had some correspondence. He called to pay his respects mostly, but he was after a job if he could get one. He sent in his card after the customary delay in such cases, and in a minute or two the boy returned.

"What is your business?" asked the boy.

"No business, pleasure," he wrote on the card, and the boy took it in and came back.

"He wants to know your business or pleasure," said the boy.

"To pay my respects," the visitor wrote and sent it in.

"Shall at this rate I expect to pay anything," came back the answer.

"Thanks," he wrote. "The amount is so small that it will not justify me in stopping."

The boy took it in, and the visitor started off in no pleasant frame of mind.

"Here," said the great editor, appearing at the door of his den, "come back."

The visitor changed his course.

"I'll pass you by this time," he said, stopping at about that distance.

The great editor came forward and took him by the hand.

"Come in," he said gently. "Come in and sit down. I like your style."

"I don't like yours," responded the visitor frankly as he sat down.

"Stop sir," said the great editor, with a smile.

"Pythagoras Ac, I'm sorry I ever came here."

The great editor seemed to enjoy it.

"Some of the anguish which of late are very common," he ventured.

"Yes, my orders are the same for instance," said the visitor plaintively, and after half an hour's further talk he was away with a commission to do some work preparatory to a regular sit on the staff.—Detroit Free Press.

Heading Ahead.

The possession of the marvelous and intricate faculty of articulate speech enables us to carry ideas about to the ends of the earth, and to do the overall rudiments of eating, drinking and sleeping. Yet the former is arbitrary and conventional, the disorders of man—perhaps not confined to him, if Professor Garner of monkey speech fame is to be believed—while the latter are natural, absolute commands, and the sine qua non of existence.

The office of speech—the celebrated French diplomat to the contrary notwithstanding—is to convey thought. How important, then, that the vehicle of thought transference, the minutest cavity of ideas, the carriage-train with its most delicate and elusive of burdens, nothing less than the very essence of the soul—probable freight, indeed—should be carefully guarded and developed to its highest and best capacity.

The comparative ease with which the average individual may be taught to express the thoughts of himself or others in an intelligent, intelligible, even pleasing fashion, makes it seem almost criminal to neglect such a vast possible addition to the general good.

In none of the arts—for reading is not only an art, but the mother of them all—is some general information, education and intelligence count for so much.—A. P. Burbank in Gossip's.

Four Ways of Saving.

To make personal charities small and infrequent in order to buy the more tickets for boxes at charity concerts and balls to give one's family insufficient and unwholesome food in order to have the money for large and costly entertainments to economize on warm underclothing for the sake of buying more showy outer garments to go on nots to the inner cars when health and the weather require the use of a carriage, and then pay for several visits from a physician and for the attendant drug store bills to expend $2,000 a year for the rent of a narrow house with hard wood finishings in a fashionable neighborhood, and $600 annually for enough coal to hardly keep the inmates from freezing, while from $1,000 to $1,500 coal and gas for full warmth keep the houses fetid warm, and contribute to a wide, old fashioned name in a respectable society—these are but a few of the countless ways by which small savings may accompany great wastings.—Harper's Bazar.
