STOLEN SWEETS.

She said: "Brigham Young was merely a man who had the opportunity."

Then she said: "I've seen young women spend three months' time and hundreds of dollars of their fathers' money in getting a trousseau for the purpose of marrying a 30-cent young man."

And then she said: "Marrying in haste is no worse than any other kind of marrying."

And then she said: "Many a widow marries a second husband in order to get even with the sex."

And then she said: "When a man does any work around the house it's more trouble to clean up after him than to do the work yourself."

And then she said: "There is nothing a man can do to do worse than to pay his wife's dental bills."

And then she said: "I'd just as lief promise to obey a man as to promise to love and honor him. It's as easy to do one as the other, and sometimes a great deal easier."

And then she said: "Some young fellows who are trying to raise mistakes ought to write to a beauty doctor instead and find out how to remove superfluous hairs from the upper lip."

"To kiss me," she added thoughtfully,
