ELDER THOMAS ROGERS.

Funeral Services Held in Farmington Yesterday.

The funeral services over the remains of Elder Thomas Rogers were held at the family residence, in Farmington, Friday morning. A large concourse of friends and relatives were in attendance. The deceased was one of the early settlers of this country and many of the pioneers were there to pay their last respects to their old friend and comrade.

The services were presided over by Bishop Seeley. The Farmington ward choir rendered the hymn, The Resurrection Day, which was followed by an invocation by Elder C. W. Stayner. Mrs. Dora Robinson sang Elder R. Snow's beautiful hymn, O, My Father. Bishop Seeley was the first speaker. He paid a tribute to the integrity of Brother Rogers whom he had known for many years, and whom he had always found ready to perform whatever was asked of him. Elder John W. Hess followed. At the close of the deceased remarks of consolation to the bereaved family and paid further tribute to the departed one, whose life here on earth had been one of peace and good will to all men. Elder Brigham Young of the Council of the Apostles then addressed the mourners and friends, to God been consoled with Brother Rogers in the earlier history of the Church as a missionary to Europe and also as an Indian Scouter, Brother Rogers having been one of the twenty scouts in Utah's early days. In the course of his remarks Elder Young set forth the hope of the Latter-day Saints regarding their dead, and referred to death as being rather the "inception not the destruction of life." In closing he said, "Brother Thomas Rogers has gone to meet his God; to rest with the righteous and the faithful who have gone before. The lesson we learn in this is, 'Be ye also ready.'" He closed his tribute to the memory of the dead by invoking God's choicest blessings upon the living.

A quartette composed of Mrs. Dora Robinson, soprano, Miss Mamie Ure, contralto, Noyal O. Palmer, tenor, and Jos. E. Robinson, bass, very artistically rendered I Need Thee Every Hour.

The benediction was pronounced by Elder Jacob Miller.

The pall bearers were the sons and relatives of the deceased as pall bearers. The remains were taken to Salt Lake City this afternoon for interment, where the parents of Elder Rogers are buried.

Thomas Rogers was a native of Falkirk, Scotland, and was in his 69th year. He been identified with Farmington since the first settlers moved here and his friends extend over the past generations of Utah's history. He leaves a wife and six children and many grandchildren to mourn his demise. His relict is the daughter of the late Orson Spencer and Amelia Rogers is known as the founder of the Primary movement. It can be said of Thomas Rogers, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Requiescat in pace.

Fourth ward—William Calder.
Fifth ward—T. C. Patten.

Microscopical Society Meeting.

The Microscopical Society of Utah, after a lapse of three months, held a highly interesting and instructive meeting in the University building last evening. The subjects treated were: "A Microscopical Lake in the Great Salt Lake," by Dr. J. E. Talmage; A Few Facts about the Entomostraca, by Prof. C. A. Whiting, and a voluntary report on bacteria by Dr. F. M. Meacham. At the close of the programme was the usual exhibition of slides, embracing objects of the brine shrimp, both alive and dead, prepared by Dr. Talmage, and crystals in the blood, prepared by Dr. Meacham. A change in the constitution was made, making the annual report of the officers and election of officers to come in January instead of October, as has been the custom up to date.

NAMES FOR PLAYS.

How the Title, The Gay Parisians Was Obtained by Mr. Frohman.

Successful plays always have good titles. How do they get them? Sometimes the author names the child of his brain; sometimes the manager finds the name for the play after the manuscript has been handed him, and sometimes other devices are resorted to.

The following stories were told a News reporter the other day relative to this subject:

Some years ago a play was produced in New York, which had no title. All the public was informed about it was that a play was to be presented by such and such players, the cast being named, at a theater designated on a day named. The title and the author were to remain a mystery for awhile, but in the meantime the public were to visit the theater, paying $1 and $1.50 a ticket and they were to set their wits to work after they had seen the play, and then suggest a name for it. It will be seen from this that the enterprising manager's object was not so much to obtain a title as it was to secure the dollar and dollar-and-a-halves of the guessers. A piece of more or less size in money was the bait with which the people were lured to the theater. For a week or so there were pretty fair successes, but at the end of that time interest in the contest fell off, and what the play was, who suggested the best title, what the title was, and who was the enterprising manager, have all passed from memory.

The title of the Gay Parisians, shortly to be produced at the Salt Lake Theater, was secured in a different way. Charles Frohman, who has had the original French farce, Hotel de Libre Exchange, translated and adapted was talking with a New York dramatic writer one day about it, and remarked in the course of conversation that he would give $50 for a title for the play.

"Why not let me say so in the paper?" the newspaperman said.

"All right, go ahead," Mr. Frohman replied, "I'll give $50 for the best suggested title and I will use it too."

The newspaper man printed a paragraph setting forth that Charles Frohman had an adaptation of the French farce, Hotel de Libre Exchange, which told the story of a foolish young wife who, to get even with her neurotically neglectful husband, went out with a friend of his to have a good time one evening and only got into a lot of trouble and that Mr. Frohman wanted a title for this play and would give $50 for the best suggestion to that direction. The paragraph appeared one day, and two days later Mr. Frohman telegraphed the newspaper, "The play's name tell the public to let go. I'm swamped with letters. Can't begin to read them all."

Brief day, when his secretaries had caught up with the torrent of letters and all the titles had been assorted, the winning title was found. It was The Gay Parisians. A woman living in a small town, 250 miles from New York, had suggested it and she got the $50.

A curious thing about this title—or the story time—is that fifteen minutes after Mr. Frohman separated from the newspaper man, when they had their first conversation on the subject, the manager sitting in his room at his desk wrote the words The Gay Parisians, on a piece of paper, which he then threw away as a useless name. He had quite made up his mind to use it for his title, too. It was suggested by an outsider, however, who thought of it entirely independent of the manager's conception, and as the suggester was paid the amount of the prize.

To the Voters of Utah.

Those seeking legislative honors should avoid pledging themselves to support medical monopoly laws and medical monopoly men.

Last year the medical monopoly ring sent out letters to every legislative candidate coupled with the threat that candidates could win by the benefit of the "ring" or the "ring" would work to defeat the candidate.

We want laws for the people and not for a "ring."
