PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, - FEB 9, 1894.

First District Court.

In the damage suit of Charles Hanks vs Rio Grande Western Railway Co., the jury returned a verdict of $150 for plaintiff.

The case now on trial is James Larson vs Peter Anderson and the Lehi Comp., to recover $10,000 damages contained in the loss of several fingers in a sausage machine which defendant was operating as an employe of the Lehi Comp. It is alleged that defendants were negligent in not having the machine on a firm basis.

A big negro in the court room yesterday attracted attention by laughing and talking. The court called him to order, but he still keeping up the chatter, Judge Smith instructed the bailiff to remove the noisy fellow. He demurred to going, and to settle the matter his honor committed him to the county jail for three days.

Notes.

At the preliminary examination of W. H. Endres and wife in United States Commissioner Dooley's court, on the charge of arson, Prosecuting Attorney Cook suggested that he had grave doubts as to the guilt of the defendants, and the commissioner acted in accordance with the suggestion and discharged them from custody.

The two tramps who were arrested at Spanish Fork on the charge of burglarizing Hedquist's shoe shop received an examination before Justice Wedgewood. The one was bound over to await the action of the grand jury and the other was fined $15 and costs for petit larceny. The story told by both is that the former, an Italian, burglarized the shop, and the latter, an Irishman, merely helped to carry the goods away.

Marriage licenses have been issued to James C. Gough, 23, and Elizabeth Ann Trimmenan, 19, both of Lehi, and William E. Greenwich, 19, and Eliza C. Loudmian, 17, both of Saratoga.

FOR ESTRAYS.

Suggestion for Police Regulation in the Precincts.

I will give some of the reasons why the Estray law now pending in the Legislature, although no doubt intended to be better than previous laws, will be worse against the farmers. It is the same in one particular, namely, placing all the responsibility of driving, hunting appraisers, caring for them, hunting brands, hunting owners, etc., without any remuneration. Now, under the old laws, in one of our fields (a contiguous enclosure), our object was not to get heavy damages, but as soon as the animals came in the fields to get them out to stop them doing damages. In order to do this more effectively and promptly than we could as individual owners, we authorized one of the owners to drive the stock off our land as fast as they came on. Of course he knew every one's land. We gave him all he could get from the owners as a rule for his trouble. We were glad to do this although the law did not (like this one) allow us anything for our trouble and money expended.

Now this bill only gives 24 hours to do all the work, whereas the other laws gave 48 hours; and if everything is not done according to law, of course the case is void and you can't collect anything. While I do not believe that a law of this kind will do justice to all concerned, yet it is better than none, if amendments are made placing all the cost on the aggressor, the stockman, where it certainly belongs.

Under the forty-eight-hour law this man could and did hunt up the owners of most of the animals, thereby saving them expense which he could not do under the twenty-four-hour law. The cutting short of the time of sale is an improvement.

Nothing but police regulations, as in cities extended over the precincts, will answer the full purpose. There is a greater reason why the latter should have these regulations than the former, for such can and do ten times the damage in the precincts that they can possibly do in cities. If people could afford to let their animals run on the streets of this city, a good many would certainly let them do so; but as it costs one dollar at least (as I understand it) for every animal caught on the street, you can readily see it don't pay.

JOHN DOOR.

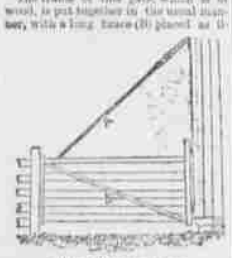
Great Value of Ensilage.

Evidence is constantly accumulating that the unlimited great value of ensilage in progressive farming is not due to any mysterious action of the silo upon the fodder, but mere economic advantage arising from the facts, first, that the corn crop produces a very large amount of food per acre, and second, that the silo preserves this food with comparatively little loss in a palatable and succulent condition, so that it is eaten with little or no waste.

Light Portable Gate.

The Canadian Horticulturist describes a farm gate that claims the public regard by lightness, durability and freedom from sagging.

The frame of this gate, which is of wood, is put together in the usual manner, with a long brace (B) placed as it-



A BEARABLE WIRE GATE.

instructed in the cut and nailed in position. Holes are bored in the end of posts No. 7 or 8 annealed wire is passed through these and firmly secured. One can use seven or eight single strands to each gate if desired. If the gate can be hinged to a building or high post, a wire support (a) can be used to prevent sagging. If a few links of chain are attached to the end of the wire, it can be kept tight by hooking up another link.
