At old abandoned Fort Shaw, Cascade county, Montana, one year ago an Indian school was established, says an exchange. It is now in a flourishing condition, having 225 children enrolled. These children come from the Crows, Cheyennes, Sioux, Blackfeet and Assiniboines, and the progress of the people is somewhat remarkable.

The fact has leaked out at a meeting of the California State Board of prison directors that at the previous meeting of the board, at Folsom, arrangements had been made with the Bulwer company to supply the opium cure for fifty opium fiends at San Quentin, the board agreeing to recommend the bill to the next legislature for payment.

The Nevadaville friends of Dan Coughlin on Saturday evening at Central City, Colo., celebrated the announcement of his acquittal of the charge against him by keeping up the firing of giant powder from a point so close as to nearly rend the prior notice. Citizens of Central thought at first that a conspiracy had been effected between the Quinard and Cinderella Mining companies. Quinard formerly resided in Nevadaville.

For years past it has been the custom with the authorities at Beaumont and Beaumont, in Riverside county, Cal., to try men charged with misdemeanors on Sunday and indulge, last Saturday week the practice was repeated by the justice of Beaumont and two men were sentenced to jail. The men sued out writs of habeas corpus and their cases were heard by the superior court. The court promptly decided that the proceedings were illegal and the men were discharged.

Fred Barnett, of Cherry creek, says the White Pine (Nev.) News, reports that several D. J. Smith, the property of ex-Governor Adams, made their way to the mineral holes at Goodwin's springs. Several days been taken out, but the flesh being cooked by the hot water in the springs, they had to be killed. The governor's son has secured the herd south, so that there will be no more danger. This is the first time that stock has been known to perish at those springs.

The marble quarries which are being opened at Beulah, Colo., are attracting much attention and delighting lovers of the beautiful by the variety and excellence of the specimens obtained, says an exchange. Some of them are almost uniformly of one color, others have a delicate pink tinge running through them. Some approach in translucence the finest onyx, to which formerly the china tends. Others are beautifully veined, the veining being remarkable in that two sets of lines of different hues cut at right angles to one another.

Jim Carlson, who was accidentally thrown against a steam wood saw some four months ago and a gash cut across his breast bone and rib, exposing the lungs and other internal mechanism, has nearly recovered and will soon be able to go out, says the Portland Oregonian. The doctor who took charge of him at the time, rather in viewing what was before him, as it is by very rather they get a chance to watch the expansion and contraction of a set of lungs. The most remarkable thing about it is that he gradually coughs with the lungs and how uncomfortably they collapsed when the fourth rib broke. The doctor would have liked to have a peep now upon in Carlson's thorax, and were a cold he might contract pneumonia through it.

During the progress of a small private ball at Tacoma, Wash., the guests were startled by the appearance of a tramp, who came from the Oregon, a shoreline, where he was tacking through the hall and his flannel shirt and hat. The girl was carrying a stuffing pan into the dining hall, when one of the boys stuck a knife and ignited the alcohol. The blaze leaped out and swept about the servant, burning her dress and apron. One of the gentlemen present pushed her into the kitchen, from from upon the floor and wrapped her in rugs and blankets, smothering the flames. The girls hair was turned off before the blaze was extinguished, and she was seriously burned, but will recover.

Mrs. Eggleston, aged 55, was shot by unknown assassins in Antelope valley, half a mile from Overton, Nevada county, Cal., a few nights ago. Some time ended to Yuba City, Eggleston. After knocking and receiving no answer the widow in and found that her husband had been murdered. The body of the murdered woman was lying over the edge of a wooden with the head stuffed in a disguised and blanket. The head was colored in half, there were over a dozen gashes in the head, neck and face. The room was spattered with blood and presented a horrible spectacle. A bottle half filled with whisky was found on the table, and as Indians were seen around the house it is thought that they came into the house, were given food and after getting half of the whisky became drunk and committed the deed. Nothing was stolen from the house, so evidently the crime was not done by robbers.

Miss Lulu Nehlingiesen, aged 16, is lying at the point of death at her home in Colusa, Colo., from a bullet wound received on Saturday afternoon. It is not yet clear to the county how a painfully fatal wound is self-inflicted or is the work of another person, says the Colusa Sun, as the young lady, while conscious, gave contradictory statements which leave the affair in the realms of mystery. She at first stated that she had been shot by a mistake, who entered in the house and demanded money, but shortly afterward retracted this and refused to say anything further. The theory of suicide is advanced by some and denied by others, who declare that there is no cause for such action. The bullet, which was from a 44 caliber revolver, entered near the nipple and left the way upward, coming out at the shoulder. The shooting was evidently done at close quarters, as the entrance wide the powder burned. The girl is in critical patients, who were absent at the time of the shooting, are anxious to solve the mystery. Mr. Nehlingiesen is a heavy landed proprietor in Eagle county.
