The Evening paper is the paper of Today, the morning paper is the paper of Yesterday.

DESERET EVENING NEWS.

5 O'clock -EDITION.-

TRUTH AND LIBERTY.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 27, 1895, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

NO. 105 VOL. XXVIII.

READY FOR ATTACK.

United Workers Repulsed When Attempting to Stop a Train.

TWO MEN KILLED, ONE WOUNDED

All Out of The Bunch—No One in the Train Injured—A Lesson to Raiders.

GREENVILLE, Ky., March 27.—One of the most daring feats announced simply as train robbery occurred at Dixie, 20 miles today in the southern part of Kansas, when six men commenced to rob a passenger train on the Louisville and Nashville road No. 3, the Knoxville express. One of the six was killed outright, one died the morning and a third, giving the name of his home in Kentucky, wounded. The other three escaped. The train robbers intended to rob the express car, but the company's special agent and one other robbed of their purpose had concealed themselves in the express car and were lying in wait for the robbers. The robbers had boarded the train at Dixie, 20 miles south of Greenville, and T. H. Griffin, express messenger, came in the Greenville station at noon and told him that he was being followed by six men who had boarded the train at Dixie. The messenger said he was going on his way. Nothing was heard of any who were to be his guests.

ALL DRESSED LIKE A MAN.

CHATTANOOGA, March 27.—Engineer Tom Broughton of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, who is a brother of the late Tom Broughton, of Somerset, Ky., early today, says the train was flagged by a man standing on the track. When he slowed up for him, the man climbed on the engine, pointed a pistol at the engineer and said: "Stand back till I get my train." The disabling train was at the station left the only engineer in charge of the engine.

"I did as I did not do so about," said the engineer. "I could see he was a small man and I could have knocked him off the boiler. We stopped at Cumberland Gap for miles from the bridge, and he got out, leaving him in the boiler office. He was heavily armed on each side. He said he was from Dixie, and I believe it."

ANSWER ALMOST.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., March 27.—Atlanta No. 8, near Dunmore, Ky., stopped this morning. Five robbers jumped aboard and ordered the Cincinnati Southern mail, which was behind time, to run ahead to the tunnel. The engineer obeyed and was ordered to stop when the train was in the tunnel. The robbers ordered and also ordered the train to proceed to the woods. The train was held up for two hours. No one was hurt.

Langston from Cumberland Falls arrived here and was taken from the express car in the train. He was shot in the neck. He