A California Football Team's Sorry Predicament.

AN INDIAN SQUOTS A SQUAW.

Strange Result of an Accident in Arizona.—A Young Englishman Seriously Injured, Etc.

Seventy-five carloads of basalt blocks were shipped from the quarries near Kenoma, Cal., last week.

The postoffice at Agua, Cal., is one of the smallest in the country. The salary of the postmaster amounts to from $3 to $5 per month.

Professor Lowe proposes to establish a meteorological station on Echo mountain, Cal. He has ordered a complete set of instruments, which are now on the way from the East. Observations will be taken daily, beginning January 1st.

A silver-tip bear, the largest ever seen in southwestern Colorado, was killed last week by J. A. Miller on Hamilton mesa, says the Telluride Journal. It was estimated that the bear weighed over one thousand pounds, and the skin, when spread out, measured fourteen feet in width.

Altoona, Arizona, the other day, two men entered the store of a Chinese merchant in broad daylight and, pulling down the curtain, commanded the Chinaman to open his safe. The cowardly robbers emptied the aquare, and he complied. The thieves secured $60 in gold dust, some silver bars and a gold watch. The robbers escaped.

Stockmen in the eastern and northeastern parts of Montana suffered immense losses last year from the ravages of wolves. Reports are being received that these animals are again appearing on the ranges in great numbers. In all the large cottonwood timbers in Fort Benton the ground is strewn with carcasses of calves and yearlings killed by wolves. Stockmen are offering rewards for wolf scalps in addition to the state bounty.

C. W. English, a shearer from Montana, has just driven a herd of 1,000 sheep from that state and turned them on the Norwood range in the vicinity of the McDermott ranch, says the Phoenix (Ariz.) Gazette. They were driven for the express purpose of experimenting with the salt sage feed as just that in the basin, and they shall of the celebrated merino breed. There will be 25,000 more sheep driven into the basin next spring from Montana if the salt sage notion pays.

Up at Jerome recently, says the Prescott (Ariz.) Courier, a Mex one had his scalp dislocated and a portion of his brain injured. After three days of unconsciousness he recovered sufficiently to walk. A peculiar condition in the wounded man is that while he is conscious and able to walk around and recognize every one, he is unable to utterance a single word. He understands what is said to him and shows it by gestures.

The orange crop of Riverside valley, Cal., is now nearly ripe and from present indications will be the best ever grown here. Experienced men place the total yield at much above that of last season, but say that a larger proportion will be of superior quality. Last season 350 carloads were shipped from the three stations in the valley—Arlington, Casa Blanca and Riverside. Conservative estimates place the shipments of the coming season at from 2000 to 3000 carloads.

Last week, says the Pioche (Nevada) Record, a squaw was brought in from the Indian camp near Shakey east of town to have a spasm or wound on her left side attended to. Dr. Sigman took charge of the case and found a wound about seven inches long in the left side, caused by a Hotchkiss turbine, probing failed to reveal the ball, but the patient was fixed up and returned to camp. The injury is not dangerous, and it is the opinion of the doctor that the squaw, as an Indian, got hunting shooting without seeing the squaw, who was party hidden by the brush.

Hiram A. Herbert, who was killed by a passenger train at Desert station, on the Central Pacific railroad last Sunday night, was a veteran Bremen and had been sent on a pension with the California veterans. He had a first-class ticket from Ogden to San Francisco. It appears that he came west on the train as far as Wadsworth and stepped back on a local, says the Reno (Nev.) Gazette. The first information the trainmen had of the killing was at Hot springs, where they found a cap and mutilated blood spots on the pilot of the engine.

Bishop Smith and wife have been in town for several days, circulating a petition for the pardon of Charles Johnson, who was sent to the penitentiary from this city over two years ago. John Hickford caught him in the act of appropriating a saddle, on the Stillman ranch, after he had stolen a team in town, and Johnson shot Hickford, not seriously, however, and escaped. Henry Wilson, better known as "Rocky," tracked the fugitive across Carson and Albany counties, and into Cheyenne, where he caught him. The petition circulates, among the reasons for their action, that Johnson was young, and was the sole support of his aged parents.—Saratoga (Wyo.) Times.

Newton Hall, a young Englishman who recently returned from Mexico, was let Saturday afternoon, lying in the street at San Francisco. An officer took him to the city prison, where he was charged with drunkenness. The prison officials noticed a wound in the back of his head and had it examined. He was transferred to the receiving hospital and the surgeon discovered that he was suffering from congestion of the brain, which will probably result in death. There are no relatives in the land. Hall was educated and refined. He frankly say that he is in the habit of using cocaine, and it was suggested that he might have become crazy from the drug and fallen in the street. He had no money upon him.

In the course of a long and gloomy chapter on the many mishaps which have already befallen the various members of the "Berkeley" Football company, the San Francisco Chronicle thus states the case: There is not a player in the team who has not been crippled at least once, and some of them have been hurled up two or three times. The demand for contests and games is greater set in early this season, and the wail of the wounded Berkeley has been heard in the land. Perhaps one in the first eleven has known what it is to have some part of his anatomy wrenched, sprained or fractured before which half of the club experience have been half or quarter finished in the vortex of a game or two. Some one was always missing and into the gentle spell he fell. The overwhelming love found alone and stacked up on the shelves, and by the time the eleven were ready to resume bars with some other college retired to the hospital with a dislocated spine. No later than last Friday one of the number was congratulating himself that he was the only man on the team who had escaped injury. He burst upon the next day and he a foot now have the house to get shaved.
