PROVO.

Affected by a Yellow Bull-Street Tip Associated Troupe in Trouble.

Special Correspondence.

PROVO, June 8.—John Pyne, the dairyman of the Spring Dell creamery, met with a serious accident today. He was driving a big jersey bull from the pen to water, when it turned on him and he endeavored to drive it back. Mr. Pyne stepped and fell to the ground. The animal fell on him in a serious manner and tossed the father aside, with both horns and butt, in spite of the assistance of his son, who had come to his rescue. The bull was finally got Mr. Pyne in the corner of the pen and tossed and trampled his body. Mr. Pyne was too weak to call for help and had it not been that George W. Pyne, a brother, came home to dinner and he would surely have been killed. All was exceedingly quiet in the house when the news came that the father was injured, and had to be carried on a feather bed, as great was his pain. He was not thought to be seriously injured, but
