NOTICE.

To the Officers and Members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints:

This is to inform you that at a meeting of the Council of Apostles held this day (Thursday, Nov. 19th, 1896), there being present Lorenzo Snow, Franklin D. Richards, Brigham Young, Francis M. Lyman, John Henry Smith, George Teasdale, Heber J. Grant, John W. Taylor, Marriner W. Merrill and Anthon H. Lund, which meeting was called for the purpose of considering and taking action on the case of Elder Moses Thatcher—and of which meeting and its object he had been duly notified—after a full consideration of all the circumstances of the case, and after each Apostle present had expressed himself upon the subject, it was unanimously decided that Moses Thatcher be severed from the Council of the Twelve Apostles, and that he be deprived of his Apostleship and other offices in the Priesthood.

LORENZO SNOW,
President Council of Twelve Apostles.

THE PROPOSITION IS PLAIN.

The breeze which was created by the formal announcement a few days ago of an additional senatorial candidate standing on a platform of his own make, and quite diverse from any structure ever endorsed by any political party in this community since national politics divided its people, is fast dying down to a dead calm, notwithstanding the efforts in certain quarters to magnify it into a storm.

As the people of the State grasp more clearly the precise nature of that platform, they see more plainly the scope and character of the issue which it raises. The candidate himself announces in terms so explicit as to defy misconception, that he bases his expectations of support on the fact that he has sought and is seeking to break down the doctrines and discipline of a Church; and there are but few citizens in the State who are willing to augment his boom by endorsing such a platform.

The fact that the Church which is thus assailed is the one of which the candidate has been a member since his childhood, is no part of the main issue, as affecting political matters in the State. Neither is the further fact that differences exist between him and his ecclesiastical associates. Neither is the still further fact of his suspension from official position in that Church. These and all other facts and circumstances extraneous to the real issue should be discriminatingly separated from it.

The candidate virtually says, "I am endeavoring to break down the doctrines and discipline of a certain Church, and to prevail upon as many of its members as possible to aid me in so doing. Because such is my purpose, and the object of my efforts, I ask the Legislature to give me the prestige and power of a United States Senator, that I may make them the more effectual; and that it may become fully apparent that the political party now in control in Utah is resolved to accomplish the same results for which I am striving."

Is there a person in the state so dull that he cannot see that the issue here raised is purely religious and not at all political? That an attempt is here made to prevail upon the Legislature of the State, and also its controlling political party, to declare war upon a Church? That the candidacy of the aspirant in question, because of his platform, not of his personality, is a menace to the future peace and welfare of the commonwealth?

Is the candidate put forth because he is a Democrat? No. Because he favors silver? No. Because he opposes legislative boundaries? No. Because he is able and experienced, or qualified physically or mentally for the place? No. So far as these qualifications are concerned, he may have them all, and yet everybody knows that he would never have been named for the office because of them. His candidacy rests wholly and solely upon his hostile attitude to a Church, to which it is thought a return would come from his success.

Let a man rise up and say to the members of the Utah Legislature: "I am at war with the Catholic church. I desire to prevail upon as many of its members as possible to support my efforts to break down its doctrines and discipline, and I ask you to clothe me with political power that my efforts may be more effective; and I also ask you, and the political party which elected you, to follow my leadership in a war upon that church." How many members of the Legislature would have patience to give such a man a hearing, even? How many papers in the State would give him access to their columns? And would the official newspaper organ of the Catholic church, if it had such an organ, be expected to keep entirely still and permit itself to be muzzled by the simple cry of church interference, or a recurrence of old conditions? Were such an assault to be made upon the weakest and most unpopular religious body in the State, there is not a reputable voter or paper in it that would not cry shame upon the assailants; nor is there a man of influence in any political party who would not see the danger of admitting such issues into politics.

It is incredible that any member of the Legislature can be so dull by nature, or so biased by influence, as to be unable to see that an attempt is being made to prevail upon the State to war against a Church; and that the latter is acting solely on the defensive; while the greatest dullard among all our local politicians cannot help but see what political folly it would be to force such an issue by pushing such a candidate.

Again the NEWS appeals to the reason and patriotism of the members of the Legislature, to be resolute in refusing to endorse the clashing of State against Church; of politics against religion; of vaulting ambition against the peace of the people, by emphasizing their refusal to support an aspirant whose candidacy means all these.

GOVERNOR MURRAY.

The prominent features of Governor Murray's career in Utah, recalled by the news of his death, will be vividly remembered by many citizens, but the retrospection will afford little pleasure to the majority of them. It was a period of the history of our community fraught with much that was painful and distracting at the time, and that can be recalled with neither pleasure nor profit, except, perhaps, for the purpose of present or future guidance.

Conditions which prevailed in Utah while Eli H. Murray was Governor made it almost inevitable that men should misjudge each other. But even under those conditions, men who stood opposite him on questions of politics and religion, saw and admired many excellent qualities which he displayed. He was of aristocratic Southern blood and training, and had corresponding ideas of honor and chivalry, with which his course was, in the main, consistent.

The NEWS at the time opposed, and cannot now endorse, certain of his official acts, but is glad to let disturbing recollections of them be buried with the by-gones. He had a brave and generous nature, and in his social relations with his fellowmen was all that any of them could ask. After he left Utah and found himself no longer a central figure in the arena of its conflicts, he grew extremely kindly in his feelings towards those whose wishes and interests he had at times opposed; and on many occasions during recent years it appeared impossible for him to do too much in the way of hospitality to make all things pleasant for those among his old opponents whom he met in his Western home. He was proud of his acquaintance with leading Mormons, and with a princely hand and bearing showed that it was his supremest pleasure to extend to them every courtesy which the high breeding of a Southern gentleman of the old school could suggest.

Death comes sooner or later to all men, and the constantly recurring visits of the dark messenger are successive admonitions that the good and not the bad, the love and not the hate, in human nature, are to be cherished and remembered. So let it be in the death of the brave and genial Kentuckian who formerly governed Utah, while all the citizens of the new State join in the sentiment: Peaceful be his rest!

A MOVEMENT AMONG HEBREWS.

There is, according to a foreign exchange, an important movement among the Hebrews for the establishment in Palestine of a Jewish state under the protection of the European powers. Leading men of the scattered race realize that the reaction against them on the continent is so serious as to demand the creation of a new home, a place of refuge in the land of their fathers, and they believe that money can overcome all obstacles to the consummation of the plan.

The revival of this movement is due to the labors of Dr. Herz, a Vienna Jew, who has traveled in Austria, Hungary, Russia and England in the interest of the project. In London the subject was discussed eagerly, with the result that a committee was appointed to make further inquiries as to the details. It is well understood that a change of surroundings is essential to the preservation of the race. The people has existed for thousands of years, and yet they number only 7,000,000.

The difficulties in the way are many and serious. Among the Hebrews themselves a great difference of opinions and interests exists. They speak different languages and adhere to different traditions. Still, there is enough in common in the history and institutions of their fathers to form a central point, and although a general gathering round this standard may be out of the question, it is probable that when the great thought of a return from the exile is made possible of realization, it will kindle the enthusiasm of the people to a high degree, and cause them to move in great numbers towards the hills of Judea. Many forces are now at work seemingly preparatory for a great gathering.

NEW YORK FORESTRY.

Bradstreet's calls attention to one result of the recent election in New York state which has been perhaps overlooked in the interest attaching to the money question. This is the defeat of the forestry amendment, which proposed to change the existing constitutional provision relating to the forests by apparently permitting the leasing or sale of the lands so long as they were not taken by corporations, and further authorizing the leasing of lands within the forest preserve for camp and cottage purposes. The amendment was denounced by the leading journals of the state, and by the principal bodies which have interested themselves in the preservation of the forests, on the ground that its adoption would result in the destruction of the state forests, and would constitute a retrograde step in the movement to safeguard the forests which has been slowly gaining strength during the past decade or more. The opposition has been highly effective, for it appears that an emphatic majority has been recorded against the proposed amendment.

THE LEADVILLE TROUBLE.

The conditions at Leadville, Colorado, still are such that further fatal violence is liable to occur at any time. When men go to work in the mines at that place, they have to be escorted by troops to insure their safety. There are two factions of civil officers; one is in sympathy with the strikers and the other opposed to them, and there is hourly danger of a conflict between them as well as between the imported miners and the strikers. The situation is so critical that the military officers on the ground have asked the governor for broader powers, and it may be that martial law will have to be declared.

It is no credit to the state of Colorado that this fight has been going on so long. An efficient administration of the law by the state officers would have settled it long since. Whatever may be the legitimate claims of the striking miners, one thing is certain, viz: their interference with the rights of others willing to work is a violation of law, and any officer who performs acts of sympathy with them in that violation disregards his oath of office. If the state officials, civil and military, were to pursue a course by which every person, whether officer or not, on either side of the controversy would be taught that the law will be maintained at all hazards by quick punishment of every violator, the process of settling the business would be in operation in short order. But the namby-pamby way of dealing with the case already has cost a number of lives and much money, and may be still more expensive in both ways in the future. At any rate, the present procedure is earning for Colorado a reputation for lawlessness and insecurity that is unfortunate and is really undeserved outside of the particular mining camp in question.

There is some talk in Utah about seceding from the Union, but it doesn't frighten anybody. The youngest of our commonwealths has evidently not yet recovered from the mental intoxication into which she was plunged by her admission into the sisterhood of states.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

The first statement in the foregoing being wholly false, the reader will judge as to "mental intoxication" of a paper that is sloppy enough to try and be funny about it.

You Can Be Well

When your blood is pure, rich and nourishing for nerves and muscles. The blood is the vital fluid, and when it is poor, thin and impure you must either suffer from some distressing disease or you will easily fall a victim to sudden changes, exposure or overwork. Keep your blood pure with Hood's Sarsaparilla and be well.
