Ed. Schnadell, of Jamaica, New York, is expected to die. The cause of his condition is that he failed to take the advice of Josh Billings, who said: "Never monkey with a buzz saw." He made several unsuccessful attempts to take the buzz saw route as a means of suicide, by placing his head repeatedly in contact with the implement, as it whirled at full speed. He was fearfully lacerated, but at last accounts was not expected to live. The dispatch which narrates the circumstance claims that the method by which Schnadell sought to take his life is now in the annals of suicidal attempts. This is an error. A few years since a man entered the planing mills of Taylor, Romney & Armstrong, this city, placed his head in contact with a buzz and cut a rip in his skull almost to the brain. He was laid up in St. Mary's hospital for several weeks, but finally recovered.

The action of Councilman Pickard, at last night's session of the City Council, in withdrawing his motion for the suspension from office of Marshal John M. Young, was the best step he could take under the circumstances. As a matter of course this action includes the withdrawal of any intention on the part of Mr. Pickard to push an investigation into the causes which led to his making the motion for suspension in the first place. The fact that the gentleman, as acting Mayor, gave the Marshal a written order directing the latter not to molest the keepers of bad houses, is one that Mr. Pickard can afford to allow to drop out of sight. No showing that he might be able to make against the Marshal would wipe out that order.

No trace of the murderers of Ed. Callahan, who was killed and robbed on State street last June, has yet been discovered, so far as the public are aware. Do our local contemporaries mean to say that the police have been "in hot pursuit" during the last five months?

Facts that are being daily unearthed in this generation are throwing the ingeniously constructed characters and invented incidents of fiction into the shade of forgetfulness. Instead of being fired with indignation at the barbarities of old Squeers for his abuse of poor Smike, in Dickens' inimitable Nicholas Nickleby, the reading public may turn with loathing from such recitals as the newspapers give of the doings of Rev. Samuel Cotton, rector of Carragh, Kildare, Ireland, in charge of an orphanage. Only think of this monster putting a child in a cold bath and leaving it in the open air all night, covered with sacks, which were found frozen to the dead body of the poor thing in the morning. This treatment was applied as punishment to the child. This was infinitely worse than Old Squeers feeding his pupils on sulphur and triacle. It was but one of numbers of instances of cruelty perpetrated upon the innocents by the clerical scoundrel. He is the worst kind of murderer, as he subjected his victims to slow torture by semi-starvation processes, to cut down expenses and pocket part of the appropriations made for the orphans.

We have before commented upon the fact that when Dom Pedro was deposed, it was announced in Brazil that there should either be a republic in that country or there would be anarchy. We remarked that there was a fair prospect of anarchy. That situation has been virtually reached. A republic has been tried. That has practically disappeared. Fonseca now assumes a dictatorship. A number of provinces have revolted and declared their independence. This is segregation—an advanced stage of anarchy. Bloodshed seems to be inevitable. Fonseca is evidently what is vulgarly called in this country, "a tough formation."

Says the Chicago Mail: "Tomorrow morning the Hon. Carter H. Harrison will make his bow to the people of Chicago in the new capacity of editor-in-chief of a metropolitan daily." Carter is a vigorous old gentleman, but this latest step of his life indicates that he is anxious to retire at an early day from earthly scenes and circumstances, unless he is simply being put up as a conspicuous editorial dummy.

There is a gentleman of this city who has one way of settling political difficulties. He seemed to be thoroughly pickled in the acrid vinegar of his plan, which is disfranchisement. He ran as "Liberal" candidate at the last election for delegate to Congress from Utah. Disfranchisement was his political battle cry. It did not take, and he got fearfully and wonderfully left. But he still rides the hobby, being evidently the victim of a blind infatuation. Evidently if he had his way the greater part of the people of the American continent would be disfranchised. In proof of this, we insert the following—in reference to Brazil—from the paper over whose editorial columns he presides: "We can understand this because, in point of fact, not one out of ten of the men of Brazil ought to be ever given permission to cast a ballot, because they have no conception of government, at least no conception of a free government or the restraints that ought to be upon men when they are given the privilege to rule themselves." After reading that, what is the use of saying anything derogatory about Dictator Forseea?

The poor Jews are getting it on all sides. The tendency of France to occupy the position of a tail to Russia's kite in every particular seems to be increasing. The motion by Laur in the Chamber of Deputies for the expulsion of all Jewish bankers from France, was the latest "me too" movement. The fact that the motion had so much support as to receive thirty-two votes in its favor is disgraceful. It is not unlikely that Laur was stimulated by Russian influence. It is a pity that France should manifest so much alacrity to dance to Russian music, which is full of discord.

THE Chinese rulers could have taught the operators of the Spanish Inquisition a thing or two in the line of torture applied to victims for the purpose of inducing them to give information. Chelkin Lung, the head of a secret society said to be operating the existing revolutionary fracas in the "Flowery Kingdom," politely declined to tell anything under the pressure of the thumbscrew and ankle-crusher. Now the officials are plying him with lots of good victuals and strong whiskey. At last accounts he appeared to be anxious for a prolongation of the latter species of torture, as he still remained obdurate.

The action of the Chamber of Commerce in the direction of encouraging the consumption of home-made products is highly commendable. The plan of placing in the hands of every citizen a list of articles manufactured in Utah is a good one. It will be a direct reminder when making purchases to ask for the home produced commodities. As "an example worthy of imitation," doubtless each member of the chamber will soon appear on the street and in his business haunts, dressed in a full suit of Utah Tweed, his feet incased in a pair of home-made boots, the whole crowned with a hat manufactured in the Territory. An object lesson of that sort would help the effect of the proposed list remarkably.

The large number of bank failures that have occurred lately indicate a somewhat shaky situation in some financial aspects of the country. The last cave is that of the California National bank of San Diego. It is a good thing to have to say that Utah has been, up to date, remarkably free from collapses of that character. Long may she be entitled to her present reputation for financial stability.

News comes from Idaho that J. U. Stucki, a prominent citizen of Paris, Bear Lake County, was arrested yesterday, Nov. 12th. The presumption is that the case is one of unlawful cohabitation, under the Edmunds act, of long standing.

It is claimed that the German Emperor is convinced that a great European war cannot possibly be delayed beyond next spring. The conviction is forced upon him by the movements of Russia in massing immense bodies of troops on the Austrian, German and Roumanian border. The Czar is said to have 650,000 men facing West, and that the Ukase forbidding the exportation of grain was not to relieve the famine-stricken portion of the populace, but for military purposes. Southwest Russia is simply swarming with soldiers. Another significant fact connected with this subject is the determination of the Czar to build a line of forts "along the Chinese border," which we suspect means, immediately contiguous to British India. The Emperor holds that there can be no assurance of peace so long as the present armament exists, nor until the in-
