TAKE IT ALL BACK.

Labor Trust Committee Visit the Gravity Sewer Work.

THEY MAKE AN INVESTIGATION,

And Admit That They Were Deceived and Their Assaults on the Contractors Were Wrong.

There was absolute peace at the gravity sewer works this afternoon, and it was of a much more satisfactory order in all concerned than was the episode of yesterday afternoon. On that occasion labor agitators induced about fifty men to quit work, and in the meeting last evening, as mentioned in another part of the News, the gravity sewer contractors were censured, and a promise made to carry the matter further.

This morning about half the men who quit work yesterday applied for employment and were put on again. At seven committees of fitters from the Labor Trust, headed by George Henry as chairman, and including Assistant Boyle and the executive secretary, reached the gravity sewer works, presumably for the purpose of persuading the men to quit, and of carrying on the war longer.

The committee arrived just as the workmen were leaving them, work for digging. One of the men, speaking to the latter was, "Well, boys, you've got better grub than we have at home." Then the committee were invited to partake and did so. At the same time they talked to the men as to any cause of complaint, and found that there was none. As the sewer pipes progressed and the trenches went down, belligerent feelings were aroused and there was no effort to induce the men to leave the job.

The committee were then asked to stand respecting the claim to work ten hours when the law needs eight hours a day's work. Jesse W. Fox made the explanation that the contract was entered into before the law was passed; that the estimates were on a ten hours' day; and that any other arrangement would prevent the contractors carrying out their part of the work. It was also shown that there was an company boarding such as had been alleged, that many of the men brought their dinners with them and boarded wherever it was most convenient to them; and that the prices charged those who boarded at the works were not exorbitant for the food furnished.

The question of employing non-residents also received its share of attention. Most of the men at work had been taken on upon receiving a recommendation from a city councilor or prominent citizen, while the few who had not had this done so recommended by Were inquired of as to whether they were residents, and had replied affirmatively in every case. Mr. Boyle, of the committee, admitted that he personally knew almost every man in the works to be bona fide residents.

Then the committee stated that they had been deceived, and they promised to set the whole matter right. The situation had been represented to them as being far different from what it actually was, and now that they had ascertained for themselves from both contractors and men the true state of affairs, they would show that they had the courage and honor to set everything straight before the public. The committee then wended its way to world's town, and the sewer campaign went on with the work.

Wanted Now In Minnesota.

An officer from St. Cloud, Minnesota, has arrived in this city with requisition papers for the surrender of J.J. Wells, who on the 19th inst. finished a sentence of one year in the penitentiary for larceny at Ogden. He says his term had expired when warrant was issued on a charge of having been concerned in the murder of a man in Minnesota a long time ago.

Up to this afternoon Acting Governor Richards had not signed the papers.

A Nasty Case.

In the police court this morning, Thomas Egan and Lizzie Chad, the latter a widow with children, forfeited $5 each for indecent exposure of person. The offense was committed in the western part of the city last evening, where the guilty pair were arrested by Officer Gillespie and taken to the station, where they put up the money for their appearance in court today.

Ladies' Home Industry Meeting.

The Ladies' Home Industry meeting announced for tomorrow will be held at 3 o'clock, and an effort is being made to have the attendance as large as possible. Dr. Ferguson stated this afternoon that all ladies interested—and that should be all of them—are earnestly invited to be present. At that time arrangements for the Ladies' Home Industry excursion to Saltair on July 12th will be made, at least so far as the preliminary work is concerned.

Marshal Brigham.

U. S. Marshal Brigham will return from Ogden this evening.

Ex-Councilman Remington.

Up to a late hour this afternoon Mr. Remington, of Pocatello, had not arrived in Salt Lake to attend the meeting of the City Council, of which he was a member until he vacated his office by moving his family and place of residence to the state of Idaho. He still holds a security to the determination that he will pay the part of a city councilman for eighteen months unless Mr. Mason can be named as his successor.

IN BEHALF OF W. R. LOWRY.

Efforts To Secure His Release From the Penitentiary.

Attorney Clemen S. Kinney this afternoon presented a largely and influentially signed petition to Acting Governor Richards, praying for the pardon and release at W. R. Lowry, who was recently sentenced by Judge Marks, at Provo, to two months' imprisonment for taking part in the riot by the commonwealth in that district. The petition bears the signatures of, among others, Judge Smith, Supreme Chief Justice Merritt, Williams, Van Cott and Richards, Dewey, Monson & Bradley, Assistant United States Attorney Howat, Attorney Varian and Judge Powers.

It is set forth that up to the time of the trouble which landed the defendant and his fellow workers in the penitentiary, Lowry was a hard-working, industrious man and a law-abiding citizen of Salt Lake.

Adjourned Early Today.

The Judges of the Territorial Supreme Court finished their day's work at 4:45 p.m. and adjourned till tomorrow morning.

AMUSEMENTS.

Stuart Robson opened his third engagement here in the Henrietta last evening before a fair audience; there were plenty of vacant seats in the house, but those which were occupied were occupied at 25 per cent advance over the usual prices, so that as far as dollars and cents are concerned, the result was satisfactory to Mr. Robson and his manager. There is little question, however, that had the popular range of prices been kept to Salt Lake, the house would have been filled, and the box office took even a better story than it did.

Mr. Robson's delineation of Bertie the lush has grown so familiar to theatre goers that it is unnecessary to describe it, and equally needless to say more than that it was played with all the delightful vivacity that has long made Robson noted, and that he kept the house in a ripple of delight whenever he was on the stage. That Mr. Robson, a man of 50, should try to act as a youthful rah and act the dude of 25, is one of the strongest instances of the anomalous. We wish it were possible to say all the good things of Mr. Robson's acting, but it is of a variety that the critic is obliged to say, "Mr. Robson's acting consists in—" and then the writer is obliged to be his very best—be joined to it a set of characters that only actors of a high grade could portray with entire satisfaction to an audience. The old Drake's park was written for Crane, just as Bertie was written for Robson, and when Crane and Robson attempted pathetic parts in the Henrietta fell to the latter, he appreciated the importance of the job by engaging Frank Mordaunt to do it. The part of the villainous Jesuit was played by a very very capable man, E. J. Ratcliffe having once essayed it here, and his several leaves in the company have been played by some very capable folks. It is Mr. Ratcliffe's own land of the Jesuit, and he strives to indicate unfavorable comparisons between his company this year and that which has supported him in previous seasons; he set up the standard, and he has knocked it down. Hissing and candor compel the statement that there is as much difference between the work of this company in the Henrietta and that of his previous companies, as there is between the works of Bronson Howard and those of the average young dramatist from Gilmore's. Mr. Vernon is generally overmatched by the role of Van Antwerp, though he did the one strong scene well. Mr. Edwards' doctor was good, except where he tried to make love; Mr. McIntyre's Van Antwerp Jr. was not all it should have been; Miss Lynch was totally unable to cope with the requirements of the part of Rose, and so was Miss Campbell with those of the wife of the English lord. Miss Stuart was very good in the part of Agnes. Mrs. Robson's charming face and charming laugh are there still, but she has grown too stout to make the dead widow any longer.

The Henrietta goes again tonight, and tomorrow and Thursday evening—the engagement having been extended one night—the Comedy at Home, which is the same as the repertoire of the company this season, are the play. It is to-said, for which the company will succeed, will be Rip Van Winkle, with Robson and Westerveldt as the Van Bummels.

HALLER AND HAGE, who play at the theater next week, are already here; some of their nights were out up the Rods in the northwest, and not knowing of a better place than Salt Lake in which to while away their days of enforced idleness, they passed on here.

LADY WINDERMERE'S FAN is the attraction at the Theater Friday and Saturday evenings.

BAD WEATHER FOR RACES.

The First Day of the June Meeting Very Unfavorable.

Lowering clouds, high winds, volumes of dust and a small attendance were the discouraging conditions which surrounded the management of the June race meeting this afternoon when the time arrived to begin the speed contests. The program as given in the News last evening was being carried out and unless rain should fall, it is claimed it will be finished before the sun goes down.

SECOND DAY'S ENTRIES.

The entries for tomorrow, the second day of the meeting, are as follows:

[illegible]

THE EXCURSION ENDED.

Temple Workers and Party Spend Yesterday in Willard.

And Return Home in the Evening—Time Most Enjoyable and Refreshing Only.

SUNDAY MORNING.

Orders had been issued for all to be on the road by Willard at 8:30 o'clock a.m., and soon after that time forty vehicles were in line with the train load, carrying the men and utilities, to the best.

Our usual generous friends, the Mendon Silver Band, were with us, and under Professor Fetzer's leadership, had generously given their services for our entertainment during the first three days of our visit, but now taken home with them the kindness wishes of the entire party, and the services of the home band of Willard City were called to requisition.

It was after nine o'clock when we reached Three Mile Creek, where we met the Sunday school children out in force waiting their usual knickbacks as the processions drew up in front of their neat and commodious meeting house. Chairs were brought out and were mounted by the First Presidency, and President Woodruff briefly addressed the children while umbrellas were held up to shield him from the sun. He specially exhorted upon the children's knees to their parents, and invoked the blessings of the Lord upon all.

President George Q. Cannon in a few words spoke of the importance of the occasion to them in seeing President Woodruff, and urged a respect of the younger children would take advantage of the privilege and become members of the Church by baptism on their eighth birthday. He told them that it would rather hurt his feelings while they were in Salt Lake that to have them live and leave the Church.

President Joseph F. Smith called on all that had been said and asked God to bless all the Sunday school children.

After a fitting manner, during which a general handshaking was indulged in, the carriages were taken and, to music by the band, and with the waving of handkerchiefs, the procession moved out.

Arriving at Willard City at 10:30 o'clock, a few of Sunday school children on either side of the street waved a greeting as the procession filed between, and the dusty ride over was forgotten as soon as the assembly were seated in the cool, refreshingly decorated meeting house.

With Elder Rudger Clawson presiding, the exercises here were opened with a very joyful rendition of "O My Father," by a little boy and girl, the refrain being sung by the choir.

The opening prayer was offered by Edwin F. Cottingham, son of Alfred Gordon of whom President Young said when challenged by the Rev. Mr. Berry for a debate in England, "I have a boy working in the potteries of Staffordshire who can easily all your accusations in that respect."

"O My Father", was next sung by members of the Temple choir.

President Willard Woodruff read a passage from the Prophet Isaiah. Referring to the children who greeted the visitors, he said if he could read their lives and doings of forty and fifty years to-day, it would be more interesting than any sermon he or anyone else could preach. He rejoiced, with tears, whose prophecies were being fulfilled by the Saints in their Temple work, and the people of the world would before long come flocking to Zion to escape the scourges to come upon the earth. He urged upon the parents the importance of keeping their children virtuous, and of educating them for the work needed them in preparing for the coming of the Son of Man.

President George Q. Cannon referred to the great improvements made since twenty years ago when he was a lad, adverted to the purpose of the Lord to make these ranges, north to Canada and south to South America, the valley of His people and the home of human liberty. Such a place, the speaker stated, would be needed and many events would as the people came into greater prominence as they were desired to do, and that our position also to the important time already. He pointed out the great designs of the Lord to carry his work forward, and thought that we should realize the importance of our present situation. He related incidents to outline his position, and spoke of the stability of the people, depreciating the originating of factions among the saints. He felt that God would be true to His promises to Israel. He did not give the spirit of war current to the leaders or His people. He announced the news of President Carnot's assassination in France, and thought the outlook ominous. He said there would be no place in our northwest here if we did not honor and it we had the control of the industries of the country. He rejoiced in the good spirit prevailing among the Saints here, solicited many of the women in the south and east by inviting the blessing of the Lord upon the dwellers.

"The Sleigh Ride," with surprised accompaniment, was beautifully rendered by the Willard City choir.

President Lorenzo Snow replied to remarks of President Young's love for amusements, and of the Prophet Joseph's enjoyment of an Irish jig, relating one with humor. He announced Brother William C. Dunbar, for whom President Woodruff inquired, the way by taking a back seat, and "If I was as young as I used to be," took the stand to sing.

"The Western Home," a composition of Evan Stephens, was sung by Sister Maggie Allen as a compliment to the Pioneer, who holds a warm place in the hearts of the people at Willard.

President Joseph F. Smith complimented the Saints for their union and energies, and urged them to remember the source of all blessings, as he had been called out of such efforts by the world. He intoned that money of itself is worthless, illustrating his views, and spoke at length upon the value of union, the efforts of which could be seen about us. The rangers had been sent forth from the heavens to execute judgment and judge upon the inhabitants upon the earth, and no one had risen up upon every occasion where the Priesthood had been. The speaker thought the Saints had not some of them, been very apt praise in the ways of the Lord. He read from the book of Mormon as to the judgments of the last days, both had to the fact of their having begun slowly, and closed by asking the Saints to place themselves in every manner independent and to live generously because it is the thing to do.

Brother John Ward, with the choir assisting, sang "O Dear Jerusalem."

Bishop Dunbar now brought forth the baptisms and after explaining that President Woodruff had given them the new name of "The Sweetness," ended that upon arriving he had received a letter from the office of Dower with them and thought the name quite appropriate. After relating a number of humorous incidents regarding the pipes, he entertained the audience for a quarter of an hour, till 2:30 o'clock, p.m., to the delighted audience, "Sweetness," a home composition, was sung by the Willard City choir.

Benediction was pronounced by Bishop Abram Pamphlet.

President Woodruff was urged by the visitors, invited their entertainers in Willard City most cordially.

At 3:45 o'clock one hundred and twenty-five people were seated at table in the Willard City dining room, where the food had been prepared by members of them. At the close of dinner Elder Rudger Clawson arose and formally expressed the appreciation of the visit his flock had received. He was gratified with the whole affair and thanked God for the spirit shown in the meetings, and especially upon President Woodruff's visit, saying to the visitors, "You are more welcome today than you were on the first day of your visit."

MONDAY AFTERNOON.

After the opening exercises at 3 o'clock, President George Q. Cannon arose before about two hundred Sunday school children in the Willard City meeting house. He instructed the children to say "Amen" at the close of a prayer. He said not seen in a long time such a handsome lot of children. He wanted an amen as they arrived at the age of eight years to apply for baptism, and dwelt upon the sin of theft and falsehood, characterizing it as a warfare.

President Joseph F. Smith endorsed the teachings of President Cannon and gave some of his experiences as a child in the early history of the Church, referring upon the effects the virtues of gratitude for the blessings they enjoyed.

President Woodruff related his early journey on a Prophet of God and carried the teachings of Christ upon the children.

President Cannon asked the children to remember the visit of President Woodruff.

The visitors then took their leave and their places in the carriages, being driven to the depot to board a train, where they took the train, arriving in Salt Lake City about 7 o'clock.

This ended President Lorenzo Snow's projected excursion of Temple workers, and the most enjoyable four days, as will those who will testify, that any of the party ever experienced.

Municipal Matters.

President McMurrin, of the City Council, being in Denver, some other members of that body will be called upon to preside at tonight's meeting.

The committee on sanitary rules and regulations held a meeting last night and discussed the Fort Douglas sewer agitation. A continued communication with the post officers in being kept up and it looks very much as though the scheme to connect the reservation with the city sewerage system is going to be successful.

The council committee on water works held another meeting last night and continued to weigh the arguments of Night Owlery as against those of the waterworks department. The committee failed to agree and the result of their deliberations will come up before the city fathers for presenting to the shape of majority and minority reports.

An East Temple Street Geyser.

There was a very visible geyser on East Temple street about 3 o'clock this afternoon and for a time a fine column of water and fine stream effect with each release so to speak, caused traffic of all kinds to stop. It appears that a workman, engaged in driving a plug in the fire hydrant adjacent to the Deseret National bank, accidentally was the cause of the high pressure at that point. The stream was designed to an inch and a half in water pipes directly at and adjacent to the house stable of Colonel Mackintosh. It was a fine force, however, and the incident was quite an interesting.
