Have You a Home?

If not it will pay you to investigate the advantages of Forest Dale before buying elsewhere. We have our own water system; water piped in most durable cast iron pipes, and the ownership of the water, including the extension of the pipes past your door costs purchasers in Forest Dale little if any more than living the same in most cities. The advantage this affords will be readily seen, for the water belongs to the residents (each purchaser of a lot being allowed his proportion of the capital stock in the Forest Dale Water Company) and it rests with them to fix the water rates charged. The expense of running the system is very small, and after the first expense of laying the mains is paid the rates need not be more than one-tenth those charged by Salt Lake City.

Have You Saved Anything?

Some people have been waiting for years for land to reach bottom prices. In the meantime they have paid rent, and if they have made any improvements or does any work on their residences, the improvements have been made, or the work done, for their landlord. Many other people have built homes, and while those first mentioned have been "waiting for something to turn up," have paid for their property and now own the houses that shelters them.

Don't Get in Debt

unless you feel assured you can get out again. But if you have money saved, buy a home. If you have an income, buy a home. It pays to have an object in view, and there is no more worthy object than procuring a home for those dependent upon you.

My clerks, at room 214 Constitution Building, will give you prices and show you the property.

AN OPINION GIVEN.

Recently Mr. J. D. Thomas, of North Dakota, visited the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, and after carefully examining the country located in Winchester, he writes to Mr. V. Roisseau, Land and Immigration Agent, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, Baltimore, Maryland, as follows: "I have been in nearly every state and territory in the United States, and am much in my opinion that this valley surpasses all other sections in the Union. The lands are now in prime, and produce probably more. I thank you for directing me here, and should know such fine pleasant and profitable homes to locate in this country."

SUMMER SCHOOL AT PROVO.

Interest Continually Increasing in the Studies Prescribed.

Attendance Also is Improved—No Question of the Benefits to be Derived by Teachers After Knowledge.

PROVO, July 17.—Opening exercises at 9:30, as usual.

The classes in algebra, Latin, geometry, arithmetic and grammar had already held an hour's session.

HIGHER MATHEMATICS.

Mr. Jensen, instructor, three classes have been organized. Advanced algebra was treated with special reference to factors, simple and compound multiples. The object of this course is to give a rapid but efficient review of the most important subjects in the common algebra course, leading to a discussion of more advanced principles. Enrollment, four males and one female.

In trigonometry two students are pursuing a course in that branch, special attention is given to the most modern methods of treatment according to the best writers.

A special course in differential calculus has been arranged for the accommodation of students pursuing professional courses dependent upon that branch of mathematics.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

Following up the "Ough" in the acquisition of practical spelling by teachers, Dr. Hardy reviewed some of the Websterian principles and then introduced other means; as the "use and cultivation of acquaintance of words;" "special study of words whose work is needed," in this way throwing out at once a great amount of unnecessary drill and discussion; words where not required; by "classifying in a general way," or grouping the common words as my, you, our, house, laughing, scissors, which are acquired in the efforts of every day life; natural "derivation," as from "fruit," deriving fruitful, fruitfulness, unfruitfulness, fruitless, fruitlessly, etc.; inflections in grammar as man, men, month; nomenclature, method, as the termination "ition" signifying information, example, tuition, and "ility" and we have "humility" meaning information of the mind. And so with many other words, the essential nomenclature already simplified in the term lodge; as lodine, shortie, etc., thus simplifying and establishing the spelling, rendering uniform the pronunciation and guarding against the liability and danger of error. Transitional words and borrowed words, each class being shown, assume materially in the meeting of a large number of words to their respective subjects.

Under the head of expedients the settlement of the so-called troublesome "ei" and "ie," and the question answered readily whether it shall be "i" in the "chief" or "e" becomes an interesting and easy matter. And finally actual "memorizing" words like anything else from their outline may close our list of lessons for today.

As to the question, "Why do we need to study spelling?" the answer is simple and ready. Because there are difficulties to be overcome; principles are constant to the student. In etymology we carry feet, and in field is as wide, rich and full that it is no wonder that the spelling of a somewhat extended list of what are sometimes called difficult words becomes a matter of sentiment and valued information in addition to the simple acts of spelling. The number of rules advantageously employed is, in the minute of the case, very limited, and the few rules in spelling hold about the same relative value to the subject of spelling itself as the rules in arithmetic of grammar. Separating apparent difficulties of pronunciation from real ones, as in the words trachea, cocoanut, etc., words in which no peculiarity and no real difficulty exists. A judicious study of prefixes and affixes renders the spelling of a large number of words natural to regular, easy and fascinating. Terminology is an interesting field of great utility. The principles of pronunciation as a key to the spelling, the principles—"secretional influence", of "vowel influence", are among the most pleasing and useful and render great assistance that is always at hand; because overcome the same as in any other branch of study. And finally all agree with our general proposition that "true education lies in the line of least resistance, least resistance lies in the line of greatest interest; greatest interest lies in the line of most complete preparation; most complete preparation lies in the line of highest conception of requirement; highest conception of requirement lies in the line of the closest study of relations; and the line of relations is the line of truth."

We will next proceed to resolve some of your difficulties.

PROVO, July 16.—Opening exercises at 9:30, with a full attendance.

Professor Giles invited those wishing to form a special class in vocal music to meet him in room 15, at the close of the exercises, for organization.

The class in "school supervision" was asked to meet at 9 a. m. Thursday, as Prof. Cluff will be temporarily absent.

BOTANY.

Prof. W. M. Wolf, instructor. The class in botany is perhaps the largest in the summer school, and the students display great enthusiasm in their work. Owing to the fact that a majority of those pursuing the botanical course desire that which will be most helpful to them in their professional work as teachers, rather than a technical knowledge of the subject, Prof. Wolf has modified the course so as to dwell in the circular and is endeavoring to make his instructions as simple and practicable as possible.

Instruction is by lectures and field work, specimens and examples of that which is under discussion being always in the hands of the class. Original investigation is encouraged, and the power of investigation is trained, with the idea that those truths that are self-discovered are the most clearly understood.

During the past week the class has studied the histology, anatomy and physiology of our common flowering ferns. Tomorrow will commence the study of the gymnosperms.

Each Thursday morning is devoted to field work, and the student-teachers are rapidly learning to collect, classify and preserve the microscopic flora of Utah county.

CLASSIC GREEK.

Prof. Wolfley, I. Ratto—A class of ten students is studying this language. The plan of instruction is both cumulative and inductive. The students begin with Xenophon's Anabasis.

E. English Literature and Philology of the English Language. These two studies are so closely allied that the Professors thought proper to combine them in one course. There are twelve students pursuing this course. The salient points of linguistic growth are carefully noted, and the philological results of recent research examined and given with careful exactness. The Celto-Roman, the Anglo-Saxon and the Norman-French periods have already been carefully examined.

Notes.

There are one hundred and thirty students registered this morning.

One of the students remarked yesterday that if Enoch Arden had undertaken botany as well as Prof. Wolf now says to Hermit Island would have been pleasant to himself and profitable to the world.

A two hours' session of the class in child study was held last evening after the usual school hours, to give time for the careful examination of the papers prepared by the students on individual observations. The results were both entertaining and instructive.

The original hour of the Latin class under Prof. Whately was changed from that hour to between 4 and 5. It has just leaked out that one sleepy student and one bright reporter were on the ground next morning at 4 a.m., having misapprehended the time of day.

Professors B. Cluff, jr., and several other gentlemen of the faculty rode into the mountains some five miles east of Provo, to locate a summer shading place. Some ladies will preside over an extensive culinary department. The god Morpheus is, they believe, also located in the vicinity, and they propose to ride here and forth on horseback every night and morning to the summer school.

A wave of the stalebood jollification reached even the B. Y. Academy, an anonymous poem thereon having been placed by an unknown hand on the bulletin board, it attracted considerable attention and many comments. A committee of ladies appointed themselves to ascertain how many of the faculty and students approved, and up to the morning hour there were about forty names appended to the lady way of approving the sentiment, prominent among them being those of Professors Cluff and Brimhall.

The reception given by the B. Y. academy faculty on Monday evening for the purpose of wearing off the formal stiffness of new acquaintance was success in every particular.

After an hour or two spent in an interchange of introductions, handshaking and pleasant conversation, attention was called to the master of ceremonies, Prof. Cluff Sr., and a formal opening followed. The prince of program makers, Dr. Hardy, had prepared an impromptu entertainment that was responded to in every particular. One feature was an extemporaneous one teacher from each county or district. There was sufficient deep thought and fine sentiment appropriately expressed in the responses to give dignity, and enough wit and mirth to preserve a fine flow of social feeling. For examples of the latter, Mr. Wolsen, of Tooele county, said that although the people of his county were 1,000 feet above Provo, they could come down little enough on occasion. The Davis county representative remarked that being the only person present from that county, he was constrained to remark that what they lacked in quantity they made up in quality, and wedged between two counties, and being tug at both ends, they were never likely to become an educational center, unless the Legislature landed the Farmington school there. The Sevier county representative said he was not the only one, but was the longest, leanest, lankiest and bravest, and a proper representative, etc. Emery county had but one citizen present, and he quoted Bill Nye on the scarcity of Gentiles in Utah as his state of mind: "Teachers from my county are exceedingly seldom lonesome that it is lonesome," Several counties and the state of Nevada were represented by ladies. Prof. Cluff traveled in the summer school held at Panguitch lake, where, by the light of a fire led up the side of a tree a hundred feet high educational lectures had been delivered. The very pines had assumed to harmonious sympathy. W. J. Rydalch, B. Pdg., was accused of having infringed upon the rules of the academy by whistling in his class room, and sentenced to the punishment of repeating the performance before the entire school. It was such a perfect imitation of bird harmonies, in endless tone and variety, as is seldom heard, and was the only thing executed during the evening. Light refreshments were served by the lady teachers, a little dancing was indulged in, and dismissal taken before society cinders rose.

Slowly Improving.

It is now believed by the city physician and hospital nurses that Mr. Thomas D. Atwood, the stranger who was so frightfully carved at a travel in the Lewisville house a few days ago, will recover. In the meantime the trio of tough characters arrested by the police are being held at the city jail until the wounded man will be able to appear in court.

Get Away from Hold-Ups.

The proprietor of the Star bakery, while returning home last night with a considerable amount of money on his person, claims to have had an unpleasant experience with a brace of footpads. As he was about to enter the alcove running south from Third South between West Temple and First West, it appears that he was suddenly confronted by the worthless robbers who demanded his cash but he was not to be "done up" so easily, and as he had a pair of fast feet he ultimately bagged, made good use of his while his assailants turned back and fled.

At the Lake Today.

The Twentieth ward picnic spent today at Saltair. An interesting program was rendered and the time was pleasantly passed.

The Taylorville band, with a goodly number of county friends, put in today at Garfield beach.

Utah People Coming Home.

Many of the Utah teachers whose stay was prolonged in San Francisco and other California cities during the strike are now returning home. Most of them are very glad to get back.

Political Register.

The working men's central Republican club will meet at the G. A. R. Hall tomorrow evening. Peter Lorenzo is announced as the principal speaker. The Criterion quartette (colored) will furnish the music.

There was a small meeting of Populists in the Richelieu block last night. Louis Schneringer was chairman and the secretary read the Omaha platform of the Populist party, after which he introduced Dr. Hasbrouck, the principal speaker of the evening. The doctor was followed by Messrs. Dresser, McKenzie and Thompson, after which the meeting adjourned.

TERRITORIAL ITEMS.

The people of Payson, says the Daily Times of that place, do not intend to let the Twenty-fourth pass without observing it with the usual celebration. The following committee has been appointed to take charge of the necessary arrangements: Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. John Wightman, Thomas R. Daniels, Saml. Marsh and Frank Elmer.

Lester Taylor is in from Moab and has with him a number of ore specimens from his district. It is now looking up and Mr. Taylor says there is a four foot ledge of the same kind of ore where that comes from. It carries heavy in copper with a good showing of silver and some gold. Mr. Taylor intends to have an assay made on his samples.—Payson Daily Times.

Herbelsen and his workmen started about ten teams in the mountain on Monday to work on the large reservoir they have contemplated, says the Richfield Advocate. They have four wheel scrapers, and all other necessary implements, so they will be able to work in the best advantage. They expect to have it completed so as to begin to store water as soon as there is a surplus after the irrigating season is over.

A tremendous hailstorm occurred in the hills just above Joseph on Monday and a flood that passed over the Sevier up in the Circle has done a great deal of damage to growing crops. The road is badly washed in places and the canals filled with gravel and broken in several places. The water came down in such torrents that boulders as large as barrels had to dislodge some tumbling down the hills. The damage was estimated by Mr. Butler, who passed along the road as soon after the flood as possible, at $1,500,000.—Richfield Advocate.
