THE GARDO HOUSE.

IT is now nearly three years since a vote was taken at the General Annual Conference, that a suitable building should be selected as a place of residence for the President of the Church, and should be properly furnished under the direction of a committee, whom the Apostles should appoint; and further, that a steward should be selected to take charge of this residence, who should furnish the table and other household requirements, and that the cost and expenses of so doing should be met by appropriations from the funds of the Church.

thus tendered to me at the General Conference, I felt considerable dell- adornment and ornamentation of cacy in placing myself in a position the building I tender my cordial of being the recipient of the favors acknowlegments. suggested in the above motion. which was sustained by so large and unanimous a vote. I felt then as I do now, that I and my brethren were one; and that this oneness ought not to be in name or theory alone, in reality, and that while many of my brethren necessarily could not participate in the munificent generosity proposed to be conterred upon me, the acceptance of this would have a tendency to put me in a position which might be construed as placing a barrier between me and them, which idea I could not entertain. Again, I found that my family, which is very natural, preferred their old homestead and its surtoundings, and felt the same repugnance to dependency that I myself had entertained. For these reasons pressed by the Saints, but because I felt reluctant to assume anything all is worth doing well. The Gardo ren, or which would in any wise tend to alienate those fraterual feelcome the praise of the whole earth, tend to embellish and beautify, to exalt and ennoble Zion, and that if Understanding that this was the sentiment that pervaded the minds of my brethren, especially the more experienced and intelligent, I thought it proper to lay aside those rigid conventional sympathics and usages which more or less govern the honorable among men, and submit myself and my feelings to those high and noble principles indicated by revelation, and comply with the spirit dictated therein, as well as with the views and feelings of my brethren, and to accept their munificent liberality in the generous tender that they made me in the above named resolution, that I might not retard the march of improvement, but lead the van in that progress which the prophets of ancient times in their visions have so beautifully and graphically indicated, and in which thousand and tens of thousands of my brethren in due time are expected to participate. For Zion is destined, as spoken of by the prophets, to be the praise and glory of the whole earth. This is not a dream or a phantom of the imagination, but a reality which will most assuredly take place.

There is much credit due to the Committee who provided the furniture, carpeting, tapestry, and other fittings and furnishings; also to the Committee of Ladies (Mesdames Jennings, Barratt and Staines, and other ladies who assisted them), who suggested, supervised and placed the finishing touches upon the internal arrangements and the result of carelessness in handequipments, and who provided the rich, chaste, elegant and beautiful While I was deeply moved with ornaments there exhibited. A HOME FOR THE HEAD OF THE CHURCH.

In response to the vote of the Latterday Saints at the General Conference April 9, 1879, President John laylor has taken up his residence in the Gardo House. It was consid ered by a number of our leading men that the President of the Church, who is frequently calle. upon by distinguished people of various nations, should be so situat ed as to be able to receive them suitably, and also that he should be at least as well housed and cared for as prominent men in Church and Mormonism at the hands of the pre-I have put off the acceptance of this offer for so long a time, not out Conference assembled, a vote was tempt to d slodge it would have the long to the being presented to the Saints in Conference assembled, a vote was tempt to d slodge it would have the effect to intensify feeling among its ings so freely and generously ex. That the Church should provide s suitable abode for its President, is in about these desirable results and keeping with the revelation concernng the Nauvoo House, in which Joseph Smith, by the word of the Lord, was to have place with his generations after him. In these times of general prosperity there is no need for niggardliness in such a matter, and while we are about the business of making a home for our chief, it is fitting that it should te n good one of which no one need be

Zion is yet to be the joy of the whole earth, and among her other material attractions will be the buildings erected and adorned by the skill and handlwork of the Saints until, in the words of the Psalmist those who come from afar to view her rising glory, will exdaim: "Walk round about Zion. Fell the towers thereof. Mark ye well her bulwarks, consider her palaces, that ye may tell it to the generations following."

We are pleased to see that one of the veterans of the latter-day work, who has traveled from land to land and from sea to ses, who has suffered with the exiles and bled with the martyrs, forsaken all things for the truth, taken joyfully the despelling of his goods, ministered to the Saints at home and abroad, shared in the hard times and stood as the Champion of Right for nearparading my personal allsirs ly half a century, is now surrounded before the public, yet my with comfort, and has a place to lay brethren, I am sure, will pardon me his head and to receive his friends,

The following dry observation of the Philadelphia News is more or less fitting to every community: A mechanic in search of work is "out of a job," a clerk in the same predicament is "disengaged," and a professional man similarly placed is "at leisure." The mechanic "gets work," the clerk "connects" himself with some establishment, and the professional man "resumes prac-tice." This rule holds good in some other things besides employment. When one of the "upper ten" has a high time over night, it is said the next day that he was "slightly ele-vated." The middle society man The middle society man, under similar circumstances, was a "little intoxicated," but the laboring man was "heastly drunk."

The Dillon, Montana, Tribune has the following: "Wednesday morning, as a Gallatin Valley ranchman was appointing Point of Rocks from below, and just as he was pessing through the willows beyond the bridge, a highwayman sprang from the thicket, thrust a cocked revolver in uncomfortable proximity to his face and demanded his money. The ranchman, who had disposed of his load of farm produce at Silver Star, was compelled to pass over his hard earned cash, about $50, to the gentleman of the road, who then ordered him to move on, which order was hastily carried out. On reach-ing the Point of Rocks station, only a few hundred yards distant, a party was hastily gathered and started in that God never damns or removes was hastily gathered and started in friends but the devil does. He has pursuit. A short distance down the valley a strange gentleman was en-countered whom the ranchman thought was his man, having gray eyes like the robber, but an entire change of clothing. The strange gentleman was allowed to pass on unmolested, although circumstances have since transpired strongly indicating his guilt; The robber when making the assault wore a suit of gray ducking and had a band-kerchief tied over his face, while the gentleman afterwards seen was dressed in a suit of black."
