There was a second indictment against the accused, that of stealing a large quantity of wearing apparel belonging to Lewis Clarke. To this they plead not guilty. The list of stolen property was a lengthy one and took Clerk McMillan such a long time to read that before he got through Judge Zane was heard to remark that that was enough. His honor appointed Attorney John M. Cannon to defend in the second case, and Attorney Morse on the former charge.

There was considerable discussion as the cases coming on conveniently piled in there were certain half dozen or more attorneys being interested as to the method of procedure, and eventually it was settled that instead of the motion for a restraining order being now made there should be a regular trial of the cases. Thereupon Judge Zane set the hearing for Saturday (today) forenoon, at ten a.m.

Matters were explained and re-explained, still each company stood by its guns, determination of its employes. Finally the difficulty was settled by the officials of the two roads sending the cars out in the opposite directions from which they started. The delay was highly entertaining to the passengers.

From all indications there will be a remarkably large crowd at Hampden Park. No pains are to be indulged in, the men preferring to take no chances within a few hours of the finale. The gambling community was hardly represented. The latest at Springfield was five to one on Yale, at New York, five to one on Yale. There were sold of 19,000 tickets sold for the game. The Yale players have the advantage in the game, that they have seen little or nothing of the Harvard's play and know absolutely nothing of her strength.
