BREVITIES.

Woman spins her little web while she talks.
The aristocracy market is glutted in London. There are only 10,000 prices.
New York city spent $3,020,832 for school purposes last year.
The love that has nothing but beauty in it soon withers away.
The coffin in the late development of "kleptomania" in Memphis.
The cheap jewelry establishments of Providence employ a capital of $30,000.
Whisk is rapidly taking the place of opium at the watering places.
The inventor of Planchette is said to have cleared $50,000 already out of the toy.
Jallens is hard work for those who are not used to it, and dull work for those who are.
The lightning in Georgia recently shaved a man's head clean of hair.
It is the fashion now to say that a man a little worse for liquor is on a "Grecian Bend."
To enrich the mind and purify the heart, to keep the tongue still and the arm active, to eat slowly and sleep quickly, this is the true philosophy.
"Leave you, my friend," said a tipsy fellow, clinging to a lamp post on a dark night, "leave you in a condition not to take care of yourself, (hic) never!"
Rochester has a German dwarf three feet high and sixty-eight years old, who looks and talks like a woman, but dresses like, and says he is a man.
Advices from Australia state that troubles have again arisen with the blacks in Queensland, and 30 of them had been deliberately slaughtered by the native police.
Jean Ingelow is the daughter of an English country baron, and of a Scotch woman. Her first poems were published in 1853, and nearly two hundred thousand copies of her works have been sold.
"I buy two cravats, which last me a whole year," said the famous Sebastian Bach; "a black one and a white one. In about six months, the one does duty for the other. The black one by constant use, becomes rather white; and the white turns very black."

The library shelves of the British Museum, if placed in a continuous line, would extend no less than twenty-five miles. The accession of books keeps growing at the rate of about twenty thousand volumes a year, or between fifty and sixty a day. A collection of about forty thousand play bills of the theatres of the different countries has been added to the library at Brunswick.
Mr. Pell, of Ulster county, the celebrated exporter of apples to Europe, recommends that apples, after having been carefully hand-picked in baskets, should be laid on the floor by hand, without pouring them from the baskets, until they are twelve or eighteen inches deep, and be left to dry and season three weeks, and then being carefully packed in clean dry barrels, they may be kept without rotting any reasonable length of time, and safely sent to any part of Europe or the West Indies.—Presbyterian.

There is food for thought in the story that is told of a young lad, who for the first time accompanied his father to a public dinner. The waiter asked him, "What will you take to drink?" Hesitating for a moment he replied, "I'll take what father takes." The answer reached his father's ear, and instantly the full responsibility of his position flashed upon him. In a moment his decision was made; and in tones tremulous with emotion, and to the astonishment of those who knew him, he said, "Waiter, I'll take water."

The little trials of an ordinary career, the trials which involve nothing loftier or more sublime than the collisions of every-day life—the trials, in short, which range themselves under the heads of tongue and temper—make a large demand upon our patience, and are perhaps a greater drain upon our fortitude and endurance than even those in which God makes our flesh quiver with the tearing of the pincers of affliction. "Wolves and bears," says an ancient writer, when giving a comparative estimate of great and small trials, "are without doubt more dangerous than flies; yet do they not vex and importune so much, nor exercise our patience so often."

You have seen a stagnant pool covered with green slime, and the home of noisome things. Suppose you set up on one side of the pool a reel of the finest silk, and carefully conduct the silk through the water, and then, standing opposite the reel, you draw the fine thread to you. You will thus make a current very slight indeed, but sufficient, if you continue it, to bring, little by little, every part of that pool into line with your thread, and by such motions make the water more beautiful. Sometimes our life is stagnant. It is always so in the absence of some controlling motive, if you can put a purpose as fine as silk through your life, you give it what shall make it better.

A new method of dressing wounds has recently been adopted in Belgium. A sheet of lead, one-fiftieth of an inch thick, is applied to the injured limb, and made by pressure to assume its shape. The lead is firmly secured by means of strips of adhesive plaster, and a current of fresh water is made to pass over the surface of the flesh once or twice a day. Out of 179 patients treated for workshop or railway accidents at the municipal hospital of Ghent, 165 were discharged cured. The average duration of the treatment was 31 days. Of the 14 who died, the greater number were mortally injured by the accident.
