DESERET EVENING NEWS

Saturday, September 23, 1893.

FRAGMENTS.

The county court house on Monday next and will transact the ordinary business. So far as known at present, there is no special matter to come up.

The Nelson criminal case was having occupied Judge Zane's time the whole of this morning, no special motions could be taken up.

No cases were taken up by the grand jury this morning, but that body held a short session to clear up some outstanding business of yesterday.

Chief Justice Zane is very anxious to get rid of the cases now left for trial on the present setting of the criminal calendar, in order that he may use the civil jury more, the number of which is considerable.

A grand concert and ball will be given at Cliff's hall, Market street, on the night of the 25th inst., by the well known and popular singers, J. L. Carlisle, Bert L. Hewins, E. R. Crockett, J. W. Squires, Miss Jennie Winston and the Metropolitan quartette.

Taxes for during the September term of the Third district court, District Attorney Judd has so far taken any cases in the criminal docket, having been engaged in Emery county the entire time. He has left the work here to his assistants, Judge Hawes and Attorney Joseph Richards.

There has been marked and masterly insanity on the part of Waterworks Harvey of his deputy in the Third precinct in far-setted district is concerned. During the most of the summer water from an irrigating ditch has been allowed to flood Center street running with the railway and covering the thoroughfare with mud. No attention has been paid to the repeated complaints of citizens and they are now becoming impatient.

Weather and Crop Review.

The Weather.—Last week was one of almost continuous sunshine, there having been no rain, except .01 at Bonneville on the 12th. Although the days were sunny and warm, the nights were cool, and the temperature of the week averaged four degrees below the normal. It was fine threshing weather. Frosts occurred on the 12th, 13th and 14th, which were severe enough to injure all wheat yet standing, and vines, such as tomatoes, cucumbers and squashes. Even potato vines were touched in some places, but as a rule potatoes were too well matured. The high winds blew off a good deal of fruit during the week.

Condition of Crops.—Small grains. Harvesting is practically over and threshing is well in progress. All grain which was not cut before the 12th was more or less injured. Reports vary as to the yield of wheat, some saying good, others average, still others greatly below the average. Corn is being gathered and will be a fair crop. Home corn was caught by the frost of the 7th in Iron county. Potatoes are mostly matured and are a good average yield. The digging of sugar beets has commenced, and they are being shipped to the factory at Lehi. The crop is in general good. Late fruit is a much better crop than the early fruit was, and is very abundant.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

Regular services of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will be held tomorrow at 2 o'clock in the Tabernacle; Sunday Schools in the various Wards at 10 a.m., and evening meetings in the Ward Assembly Rooms as follows:

UTAH TO THE FRONT.

Her Fruits are Unexcelled in any Part of the Country.

GRAPES THAT HAVE NO SUPERIOR.

Another Evidence that Horticulturists Have Not Yet Learned the Possibilities of this Region.

The people of Utah are fully aware that for delightful flavor of fruits that can be grown in the Territory the home article cannot be surpassed in any part of the country. All importations are inferior when put side by side with the fresh picked local production. In peaches, pears, apples, plums, strawberries, raspberries and all fruits of that class, consumers of experience uniformly seek first the home article.

This point was commented upon by a local fruit dealer today as follows, in response to an inquiry on the subject: "It is just this way," said he. "You noticed that gentleman who just bought a few peaches for eating. We know him as a fruit connoisseur. He asked me for Utah peaches. Just to try him I opened out a box of California fruit that was larger and seemed to look better than the Utah peaches I had. He told me he did not want the California fruit when he could get the home grown. The Utah peach has a tendered better flavor than any imported peach put on the mark, and he is neither musty nor stringy. When you look at it and anticipate a fine flavor, you are not disappointed upon tasting it. And so it is throughout the list. People who know what fruit is only take the imported article when the home fruit cannot be secured, except in the case of semi-tropical fruits which cannot be successfully raised here."

That was the experience of a man who succeeded the business. There is another suggestion in connection with his remarks, and that is that such friend of clean Utah fruit cannot be found in the city market by comparison with the quantity imported. The reason for this is that home fruit raisers have not given sufficient care to the orchard and the fruit grower to bring the product up to the highest standard. Local horticulturists do not yet know how good fruit, or how much of it they can produce from the trees and bushes they have growing.

UTAH GRAPES.

With this fruit it has been the generally accepted idea that California is ahead of Utah. Fine grapes of a very fair quality can be raised here is now well known, though the realization of that fact has come only in the last few years.

But it is a fact that in Salt Lake county there can be raised grapes which have no superior on the continent, and alongside of which the California fruit goes into the shadow, both in size and quality. This has been fully demonstrated by a young Utah farmer who has given his attention to the business with the most satisfactory results. He is J. M. Fisher Jr., of East Mill Creek. He is proprietor of what is known as the Mountain Nursery, six miles southeast of this city, where he raises latest and fruit trees of the choicest varieties. Three years ago he began to give special attention, in connection with his other business, to the production of the finer qualities of grapes. There were the hardy native varieties, such as Niagara, Delaware and Worden exclusively in the cultivation of which he was quite successful. Turning to the modern kinds that give California such preference over other regions, as the Purple Damascus, Black Hamburg, Flame Tokay, Muscat of Alexandria, etc., he gave them varieties a thorough test, and achieved a triumph that was remarkable. Last year he had a small quantity of the latter kinds, and their size and quality surprised those who saw or tasted the product of raising grapes that were to be any inferior to any others in the market.

This year even better results have been achieved, and about a ton of the fruit has been loaded for shipment to the market. All first class fruit men who are not acquainted with all the facts would consider the fact to be the highest tribute to California grapes. But it is not. It is Utah fruit, raised on soil and in an atmosphere that are much more congenial to the vine than those of California. In size and quality there are no better grapes brought to market.

In Mr. Fisher's experience fruit raising is the healthy one and a profitable business. It would be interesting to learn to visit his place, where they might more fully realize that this section of the Territory can come to the front as a grape-raising locality.

The methods that proved successful differ in some respects from the usual rules of cultivation, and these and his reasons therefor he expresses a willingness to explain. His grapes are planted in alternate rows with the trees in his orchard, which possible at four acres of gravelly soil with a slight western slope. He has about 250 vines.

Mr. Fisher's work is mentioned because it is commendable and deserving to be known. His enterprise and success should also serve as an incentive and encouragement to those who are in the field raising bounties to put forth the necessary efforts and bring it up to a place as one of the most important industries of the Territory.

Circumstantial Evidence.

In Justice Whitelock's court yesterday afternoon Maurice Maxwell had a hearing on the charge of petit larceny, but the testimony was doubtful and purely circumstantial and needed. In the defendant's acquittal. Dr. Linder, of this city, was the complainant. The parties were acquainted and had daughter Maxwell stood at the doctor's office. Subsequently Dr. Linder lost money and suspected the defendant, whom after followed.

HE MELTED THEM UP.

A Pawnbroker and His Customer Meet in Court.

That was an unusual case which U. S. Commissioner Greenman was called upon to decide yesterday afternoon. L. Gliwoski was the plaintiff and a local pawnbroker the defendant, his name being S. Jacobson. A short time since, it would seem, Gliwoski "loaned" with the defendant, who gave "Uncle Sam's Celebrated Bank," a gold watch, a pair of cuff buttons, a collar button and a valise, for $25.50, at 10 per cent per month interest. After the time had expired for the redemption of the articles, the defendant broke up the jewelry and melted it in order to disjoin the goods. The plaintiff now sues him for $25.50, which he claimed to be the value of the goods. The Commissioner ruled that the dirl should have been foreclosed in the usual way and gave judgment in favor of the pawnbroker.

Let There Be Light.

There is no danger of the people getting too much light on any public question. Since the war there probably has never been a subject so thoroughly canvassed and studied by all the people of this country as the silver question has been in the past year. To say that the majority of the voters of the country have an intelligent understanding of at least the gist of the silver question is not overstating the fact.

Just as it should always be, information on all public topics, even to pending treaties, ought to be given to the American people as freely as the Almighty gives them air and sunshine. Where old fellows have been in congress, especially in the senate, a dozen or twenty years it becomes apparently second nature to them to move to color everything in a sensation. A committee, in the veteran congressional mind, appears to be as fixed and potent a power as the constitution of the United States. But it isn't, and by a long chalk.

Let the heads of all government departments give information as often as called on to the people of this republic on all public business. Let not the information be unduly colored to a consumption of consequence to be stirred. The war clarion cry was sounded by act of the British parliament just 21 years after the pilgrims landed on Plymouth rock. Let there be light.

There is no more unpleasant feature about hard times than the tramps they produce. There is heavier mortgage of them in New York city than ever a frightful prospect of the coming year, himself included, and unless in power to crush the first and repression of a mill worse than crushed out, some dreadful calamities. He was already, forsooth, the labor leader, based upon collecting dues and assessments from the poor to fall the rich. Mr. Lemmler himself contributed $5 to the cause. But when the fellow's professional brethren in was found to fall for all his cue. One of the most desperate case indeed in the Chinese

Sale for Goods.

The only safe way for purchasers is to insist on having the genuine article, and not allow themselves to be swindled by having plasters sold to be "just as good" or "containing exactly the same ingredients," or "some other name." These are only ideas to sell inferior goods that do not compare with Allcock's Porous Plasters. Genuine Allcock's Porous Plasters will continue the most successful of their kind.

The eminent Henry A. Mott, Jr., Ph. D., L.C.S., late Government Chemist, certifies:

"My investigation of Allcock's Porous Plaster shows it to contain valuable and essential ingredients not found in any other plaster, and I find Benger's to be and more efficient than any other plaster."

Ask for Allcock's, and let no solicitation or substitution induce you to accept any imitation.
