day Sheriff Storrs went to the place on the west side of Utah lake, where the dead horse was found belonging to the strange man who may have been murdered there early in July, as reported in the "News." The sheriff did not find anything that indicated a murder had been committed with the exception of a number of empty cartridge shells. They were scattered around on the ground near where the horse was found the example of the second of the space of the space of the second of the space of t and may be indications of shooting that has taken place there. Their discovery supports the theory that th man was murdered for his money. If so his body was probably thrown in the lake, and in order to learn whether this is so Sheriff Storrs will have the lake dredged at that point.

IRRIGATION IN MONTANA.

The law recently passed by Congress appropriating millions for use in prigation improvements is awakening onsiderable interest in Montana. onsiderable interest in Montana. Six surveying parties are now at work in Montana, and they are rapidly pushing their work. Plans for the reservoirs and anals to be used in the work will soon be completed, and considerable areas will be irrigated within a few years. Chairman George H. Maxwell of the executive committee of the association says that the first work will be done its he Milk river valley of Montant, Mon tana has been selected as the starting point because it possesses the best opportunities for successful work, and it s very necessary the first work should successful. Montana has an available water supply not possessed by th arid regions to the south set, and so presents desirable opportunities for the experiment. The Milk river drains the St. Mater's lakes, in the foothills of mountains. It is proposed to make great reservoir of these lakes, filling from the spring freshets, and utiliz ng the water as needed through a sysof canals. By the use of machinery, a vast area of bench land, estimated at 1,000,000 acres, may be reclaimed in the Milk river valley. These uplands, now used or cattle ranges, may eventually be-ome fertile farms. By the simple sysem of canals and without pumping machinery an area of 250,000 acres may be reclaimed in this region. This work will probably cost $1,000,000; but it is estimated that the land can be sold for $20 an acre, which will return the govrnment a profit of $4,000,000. This may turn be used in other sections for of furtherance of this vast work. Other parts of Montana have also een surveyed with a view to irriga-on, but it is probable that the work ion. long Milk river will be pushed to completion before any other district is opened. Then, if the Milk river work is ccessful, plans will be made for the her regions. Work of this kind has peen done in India by the British gov ernment, which returned a profit of $20 per acre. It is only a question of time until large portions of the "great American desert" will be converted in-to fertile farming land.

ARIZONA ORCHARD IRRIGATION.

Bulletin 41 of the Arizona Agricultural Experiment Station, recently issued, has the following on orchard irrigation in that territory:

Since it is important that trees be properly irrigated from the first, it will e well to begin the discussion of orchard irrigation with the setting of the trees. During the first year, all varie-ties of fruit trees, whether deciduous or citrus, need to be treated in about he same manner. Before the trees are set, furrows ar the early irrigations. Usually water is run through the furrows before the trees are set, and as soon thereafter as practicable. The furrows should be cul-tivated up within a month, and fresh ones made for each subsequent irriga-tion. The young orchard should be in-the winter-irrigated orchard were bet-ter than from the same orchard irri-gated duing earlier years through the summer, and better than from other similar summer-irrigated orchards the same seasons. Aside from the difference in the re-suits obtained, and the amount of fabor involved, it should be taken into consideration that the water available during the winter has a much less value upon account of its comparative abund. ance, than the water available during the summer. Even if a greater amount were used by the winter irrigating plan. it would still be the cheaper method.

Orson Mainwaring leaves Tuesday for Mapleton, Utah. He has been called home to pre ire for the missionary field. A reception and a well filled purse was given him Monday eve in the meeting house.

Owners of small farms in Utah could hardly believe that an intelligent farmer could lose a ten-acre oat patch, yet such was the case here. Brother Allred knew the patch was somewhere near the center of our great west field. In leu of a rock, he marked the cornerwith a buffalo skull, all his neighbors did the same. The plat of our field, and visit from the surveyor finally locate the land, when, to Bro. Allred's dismay grain had been cut and hauled off in mistake by the owner of the adjoi ing field. Of course Bro, Allred had other 10's and had been so busy that h had'nt visited this patch since planting.

STARTING AN EGG PLANT.

The following proposition was submitted to the Rural New-Yorker by a poultry beginner, with a request for reply from O. W. Mapes, one of the best poultry authorities in America. The proposition and reply follows: "In October we purpose buying 2,000 chicks fresh from incubators, 1,000 Plymouth Rocks and 1,000 Single Comb White Leghorns. Our idea is to sell all the cockerels for broilers and keep all the pullets for an egg plant. Will Mr. Mapes tell us how to build a house or houses for our egg plant to Locom. modate 1,000 hens? How much land should we enclose for each lot of hens! Must the wired vards be enclosed overhead, or how high must they be made to keep hens from getting out?" This is a pretty big "bite" for begin. ners to take, but I am not sure but it is the way to make successful poultrymen; provided enough capital can be comamnded not to get swamped by a few partial failures, while the business is being learned. There will be enough invested in the plant to spur one to his very best efforts. The first thing needed will be buildings to put the chicks in. I should build for egg production, and place brooders in the henhouses, removing them as soon as chicks are old enough to dispense with artificial heat. Brooder manufacturers will tell you that there is no danger from fire with their make of brooders, but be ware! Better not place your eggs all in one basket. I would suggest four different buildings far enough removed from each other so that if one burns the others will not endangered. Each building should be 16x50 foot with a four-foot alley along the rear. This will make five pens 10x12 feet, or 20 pens in all, which will accommodate 50 hens each. Go to some good reliable manufacturer of brooders and place one brooder in each pen. If the brooders are 100-child size the four buildings will accommodate the 2,000 chicks. With October-batched chicks there will be very little use for outside runs until spring, when the pullets will have become hens. Where no attempt is to be made to grow green feed in the yards I should advise small low yards, with tops covered with netting. Two feet high is as high as the hens need, but it will be found that occasionally a man or boy will want to enter them to pick up an egg or a dead hen, and on this account 31/2 or four feet high is better. A yard 10 feet wide by 24 feet long, is ample for 50 hens. By divid-ing the 1,000 hens in four buildings one flock in each building can be given free range each day, which will be ample for all purposes, as only four-fifths of the time will have to be spent in the choir was beautiful and appropriate, as also were the addresses by Bishop runs. I regard October as one of the best months in which to hatch chickens, Richards, Counselor Mathesen, Pa-triarch McGregor, and Daniel Page, father of the departed. This characteristic makes it possible to store in the soil during winter much, if not all, of the water needed to produce a good crop. To one orchard at the station farm all of the water used by the trees during the past three seasons has been applied from December to March, while the trees were dormant above the sur-face. That they were not dormant beneath the surface was shown by an ex-amination made Feb. 20, 1900, revealing that at a denth of 10 to 16 feet even. young roots three to six inches long had already grown. As demonstrated by experiments re ported on in a previous bulletin, a deciduous orchard may be kept in excellent condition, and will produce good crops of fruit, if irrigated during the winter only. In fact, the results from
