Proved His Innocence.

Manager Isaac Smith, of Logan B. C. M. I., appeared before the Agricultural society to disprove the charge that he was connected with the Utah Slaughtering Co. in a combine to lower or control the price of hogs in the Cache county market. It had also been charged that in payment for the hogs purchased he had issued store orders, which were only payable in certain classes of goods, at prices ranging from 25 to 200 per cent higher than the same grade could be bought for elsewhere. The latter charge, it seems, was made by rival merchants. Mr. Smith made such a satisfactory showing on the combine question that the society officially exonerated him from the charge, and at the next meeting he invites proof on the question of overcharges, and claims to be able to prove that no such exactions were ever made.

Sewing Machine Fraud.

Dan Preniest, a stranger, was arrested on Christmas day for having imbibed too much cheer, and in default of payment of the customary V was sentenced to five days in the jail. After his incarceration a more serious charge was preferred against him, that of obtaining money under false pretenses. His scheme was to call at houses as an expert sewing machine man, obtain the privilege of examining the machine, surreptitiously extract a screw, show the lady her machine was broken, produce an alleged spring of his own pretending that would "just fit," and secure the job of making the necessary repairs. He would then replace the screw he had removed and the machine would once more work. When the lady's curiosity would lead her to look for that patent spring, she would be forced to the conclusion that she had been cleverly bunoosed.

On Friday evening the Y. M. and Y. L. M. I. A. of the Second ward gave a concert, supper and ball. On Saturday evening a ball was given in the Paisley and on New Year's eve another will be held in the same hall. This afternoon a matinee and ball for the children will be given in the opera house. OVER FALLS TEN FEET HIGH.

THE DARING PLUNGE OF A STEAMBOAT IN THE NORTHWEST.

The development of the great Northwest is sometimes attended with perilous incidents. In running steamboats from Rainy Lake river to Rainy lake recently, a steamboat was compelled to plunge over falls ten feet high.

At the last moment the engineer deemed prudence the better part of valor, and decided not to make the perilous trip. So the captain fixed a wire running from the pilot house to the engine room and attached it to the steam throttle so he could shut off steam when he desired. Two men got off here and pulling the throttle wide open, with a full head of steam on, he steered into the current leading to the rapids above the falls, which is confined to a narrow gorge, and where the water runs with a fearful current.

With the force of the current and the full head of steam the steamboat sped ahead with the speed of an arrow, and as the brow of the falls was reached the captain pulled the wire to shut of steam. The steamboat shot out of the water full length, exposing the whole bottom, keel, wheel and rudder, and then dropped into the boiling, swirling water below the falls. The current was swift, strong and tempestuous, but luckily no gulched her safely into quiet water, when steam was applied and she was soon in the lake lying below the falls.—Northwestern Magazine.

What $1.00 Will Buy

Depends on where the buying is done. Our sisters lead the procession as easily as a locomotive leads an ox team. We score a double victory, first on our wool and again on our prices. Our all wool ulsters are as warm as fire, and the figures we put on them make a dollar worth $1.25 at our emporium. It's our ulsters first, all others distanced. Want company in the clothing race doesn't make us lonesome. The public fix that—and our entire stock of Furnishings is a multitude of temptation, brilliant flashes of style, elegance and economy.
